

RÁMÁYANA

TULSI DAS.

F. S. takOWSE, B. O. S.: D. A., OLOVI, C. L. L.; FELLOW OF THE CALCUITA

SIXTH EDITION.

"The Range angle is the common popular and more to make the the people of the Nazh Western Frowince than the tible is my the corresponding classes in Fugland."

Allahabad:

RAM NAHAIN LAL. PUBLISHES & FOOK LLLER. 1922.

संवत से एक स अना अलीयन । तीर भाषण ग्रह्मामलां तुनसः तत्व वर्धार

Price Four Eupeus.

INTRODUCTION

The Sanskrit Rámáyana of Válmíki bas been published more than once, with all the advantages of European editorial skill and the most luxurious typography. It has also been translated both in verse and prose, and, in part at least, into Latin, as well as into Italian, French and English, The more popular Hindi presentment of the same great national Epic can only be read in lithograph or bazár print, I and-with the exception of a single Book-has never till now been translated in any form into any language whatever. Yet it is no unworthy rival of its more fortunate predecessor. There can, of course be no comparison between the polished phraseology of classical Sanskrit and the rough colloquial idiom of Talsi Das's vernacular; while the antiquity of Valmiki's poem further invests it with an adventitious interest for the student of Indian history. But, on the other hand, the Hindi poem is the best and most trustworthy guide to the popular living faith of the Hindu race at the present day-a matter of not less practical interest than the creed of their remote ancestors-and its language, which in the course of three centuries has contracted a tinge of archaism, is a study of much importance to the philologist, as beloing to bridge the chasm between the modern tongue and the medizoval. It is also less wordy and diffuse than the Sanskrit original and, probably in consequence of its modern date, is less disfigured by wearisome interpolations and repetitions ; while, if it never soars so bigh as Válmíki in some of his best passages, it maintains a more equable level of poetic diction, and seldom sinks with him into such dreary depths of unmitigated prose. It must also be noted that it is in no sense a translation of the earlier work : the general plan and the management of the incidents are necessarily much the same, but there is a difference in the touch in every detail ; and the two poems vary as widely as any two dramas on the same mythological subject by two different Greek tragedians. Even the coincidence of name is an accident : for Tulei Das himself called his poem 'The Ram-charit-manes,' and the shorter title, corresponding in character to the 'Iliad' or 'Eneid,' has only been substituted by his admirers as a handler designation for a popular favourite.

^{1.} A handsome edition of the text was sense from the press of the Hapite Mission to Calcula many years ago into the along been out of print, and the only copy I have ever seen of it was the one in use at the college of Part William in 1801. I had thus entirely forgetten the fact till remodel of it by Mr. Bute, a geothern who has ably maintained the scholarly reputation of the Mission by the very secal Hind Dectionary.

However, the opinion that the more modern poem is a close adaptation, or rifaccimento, of the Sanskrit original is very widely entertained, not only by European scholars but also by Hindus themselves. For, among the latter, an orthodox pandit is essentially home unius libri, to whom the idea of comparative criticism is altogether strange and unintelligible. Whatever is written in the one book, to which he pins his faith, is for him the absolute truth, which he positively declines to weaken or obscure by a reference to any other authority. If he can understand Válmíki's Sanskrit, he despises Tulsi Dás as a vulgarian and would not condescend to read a line of him; if he knows only Hindi, he accepts the modern poem with as implicit faith as if it were an immemorial shastrs, and accounts a quotation from his Ramayana an unanswerable argument on any disputed topic. Thus, in all probability, the only educated Hindus who have much acquisitance with both poems are the professors and students of Government colleges, whose views have been broadened by European influence. It may, therefore, be of interest to show a little more at length how great is the divergence between the two poems.

In both, the first Book brings the narrative precisely to the same point, riz., the marriage of Rama and Sita. With Tulsi Das this is much the longest book of the seven, and forms all but a third of the complete work ; in the Sanskrit. on the contrary, it is the shortest but one, even after including the first four cantos, which are obviously a late addition. They give a table of contents, and explain how Válmíki learnt the story from Nárad, and taught it to Kusa and Lava : thus corresponding in no respect, with Tulsi Das's introduction. The actual poem commences at once, without any prelude, with a description of Ayodhya and its King Dasarath and his ministers, and of his longing for an heir ; and tells how Rishyasring, Vibhandak's son (whose previous adventures are recorded at length) was invited from the palace of his father-in-law, Lomapad, the king of Champa, to direct the ceremonies of a great sacrifice, which the childless Dasarath resolved to celebrate, in the hope of thereby obtaining his desire. The gods, being at that time sorely distressed by Havan's persecution. had fled to Vishnu for succesur; and he, in enswer to their prayer, became incarnate in the four sone that were born to the king, while inferior divinities took farth as bears and monkeys. The four princes are named by Vacistha. They grow up, and the king is thinking where to find suitable brides for them, when Visyamitra comes, and, after a long colloquy, takes away with him Itama and Lakshman to protect him at the time of sacrifice from the demons that persistently assall him. On the way they pass by the Anga hermitage, where the god of leve had been reduced to ashes by Siva-a legend to which very brief silusion is made, - then though the forest of Turakii, whom Rama meets in battle and slays, but not till her genealogy has been fully recorded. He is then invested by the saint with certain beavenly weapons and magical powers, and, arriving at Vievamitra's hermitage, he slays the demons Maricha and Subahu. Being told of Janak's bow- prifice he resolves to attend it; and as he crosses the Son and the Ganges on his way thither, Viscomitra entertains burn with a prolix account of his own descent from King Kusa, of the birth of Gangs, the legend of the sons of Sagar and his sacrifice, and how his descendant Blagirath brought down the Ganges from heaven and concludes with the genealogy of the kings of Visals. As they draw near to Muthila, Rama delivers Gantam's wife Abalya, whose legend is given with all its circumstances. He is welcomed by Janak and by Abalya's son, Satananda, and the latter makes a long speech of eight hundred lines, in which he gives a complete history of the contention between Visyamitra and Vavishta, with an account of Trisanku and Sunshsepha and Ambarisha and of Visvamitra's final promotion to Brahmenical rank Janak shows Rams the bow in its case, and he then and there takes it up and snaps it in pieces. The royal enitors had all tried in vain, and after fruitlessly besieging the city, with intent to carry off Sita by force, had returned discomforted to their own realms. Envoys are despatched to Ayothya for King Dasarath : Kusa-dhvaj, Janak's brother, is also summoned from Sankasya; and then in full conclave Vasistha proclaims Rama's pedigree, after which Japak regites his own. The fourfold auptials then take place, a hundred thousand cows being given to the Brahmans in the name of each of the brides, and many precious gifts being bestowed in dowry. Descreth then takes his way home with his cone and doughters, but is met by Parasyram with Vichna's how, which Hama stringard some, and the son of Brigan acknowledge his supremary. They then reach Ayodhya, whence Pracat soon departs with his onels, Yaflaji's, on a visit to his mother's father, Kukaya.

On comparing the above skelch with my transition of the corresponding portion of the Hirdy poem, it will be seen that the two agree only in the broatest notions. The equivalence of the most important incidents, each of the most important incidents, each as the breaking of the most important incidents, each as the breaking of the west of the contention with Tarasoriem, are differently placed and assume a very altered completion. In other paragors where the story follows the same lines, whatever Valimits has contended as, for example, the description of the matrical restriction. Then Das hexeryanded; and wherever the elder post has linguest longest, his auccessor has hastened on most rapidly.

In the executh, or last, Book, the disergence is, if anything, still more marked, I consists with Valimiki of 22 cuntes, the first 49 of which are occupied by a dulogar between Ridma and the Itahi Agastra, who relates the surport of Rivan's birth and his conquest of the world. In the 50th canto Itama diminises his monkey followers to their home: and in it only is this one pawage and in occasional reference to the glory and happiness of Itama's reign that there is any coincidence with the Illindi Segnel. The remainder of the Sanskrit poem relates the exile of Sita and the Avamendh sarcfifee; after which Itama and his bother sacend to heaven. All these topics are totally omitted by Taki Dây, who subdittless for them the story of Knakshusandi and a series of laboured disquisitions on the true nature of Faith.

The earliest notice of our author, as, indeed, of all the other celebrated Vaishnara writers who flourished about the same period, viz., the 16th and 17th century A. D., is to be frome in the Bhatk-18ths, or 'Leogends of the Saints,' one of the most difficult works in the Hindi language. Its composition is invariably sacribed to Nábha Ji, himself one of the leaders of the reform which had its centre at Brindshan; but the poem, as wen own have it, was avowedly edited, if not entirely written, by one of his disciples named Nárávan Dás who lived during the reign of Sháhjahán. A single stanza is all that is ordinarily devoted to each personage, who is panegyrized with reference to his most salient characteristics in a style that might be described as of apparalleled obscurity, were it not that each such separate portion of the text is followed by a tila, or gloss, written by one Priya Das in the Sambat year 1769 (1713 A. D.) in which confusion is still worse confounded by a series of the most disjointed and inexplicit allusions to different legendary events in the saint's life. The poem has never been printed, and though it is of the very highest repute among modern Vaishnavas, and is, therefore, not rare in MS. either at Mathura or Brinda-ban, it is utterly unintelligible to ordinary native readers The text of the passage referring to Tulsi Dás is, therefore, here given, and is followed by a literal English translation :-

॥ मूल ॥

किन कुटिल बोच मिलार हेन बाहमीक तुलसी भयो ॥ भित्रा काच्य निर्यंच किंदि सामाय ॥ इक समुर बहुरै महत्याहि करि जिन होत पारायन ॥ इव सम्बन्धि हुंख देंन बहुरि गुतु चिर कोला शिलारो ॥ सम सम्बन्धि हुंख देंन बहुरि गुतु चिर कोला शिलारो ॥ संसार स्वार के पार को सुगम कर गौका लियो ॥ संसार स्वार के पार को सुगम कर गौका लियो ॥

दिस जांच निस्तार हेत बाह्मांक तुलसा Translation of the text of Natha Ji.

For the redemption of manifed in this porsense Kall Teg. Which has been born again as Tudi. The verse of the likely incomposed in the Treat Yug are a bundred corers in number; but a single letter has redeming power, and would work the satestion of one who had even committed the morder of Brahman. Now again, as a blessing to the faitful, has betaven birth and published the sportive actions of the god. Intoriented with his passion for Rima's feet, he preserved sign and inglish in the accomplishment of his work. The provides the provides of the god. The provides are the provided to the provides of the god. The provides the preserved and might in the accomplishment of his work. In preserved a sign of the provides the preserved and might his the accomplishment of his reduced his preserved and might have been been expected to the preserved and might have been been expected to the preserved and might have been been expected to the preserved and might have been been expected to the preserved and might have been been expected to the preserved and might be preserved as the preserved and might be preserved as the preserved and the preserve

॥ टीका ॥

तिया सो सनेंद्र विन पूर्वे विना गेह गई भूली सुधि देह भन्ने वाही टीर बाव हैं।

INTRODUCTION वध स्रति लाज भई रिसि सो निकसि गई मोति रास नई तन हाड श्वाम छाद हैं। सनी जब बात मानो होय गया बात वह पाछे पछितात तजी कासीपुरी घाए हैं॥ कियो तहाँ वास प्रभू सेवा ले प्रकास कीनों द्रद माय नैन रूप के तिसाप हैं ॥ सींच जल सेस पाय भूतह विसेस कीऊ बोल्यो सुख मानि हनुमान जू बताए हैं॥ रामायन कथा सी रसायन है कानति की माधत प्रथम पार्हे जात चुना छाए हैं ॥ जाय पहिचान संग चले उर स्नानि साप यन मधि ज्ञानि धाय पाय लपटाप हैं 🛭 करें सीतकार कहि सकोगे न टारि में तो जाने रससार रूप घर्यो जैसे गाये हैं॥ मांगि लीजे वर कहि दीजे राम भूप रूप अतिही अनुप निच नैन अभिनास्त्रिये ॥ किया ले संकेत धाही दिन ही सी लाग्यो हैत भाई सोई समें चेंत कब रुवि चाविये ॥ बाये रचनाथ साथ लिख्यन घढे घोरे पट रंग बारे हरे कैसे मन राखिये॥ पार्ठे हसमान झाय बोले देखे पान प्यारे नैक न निहारे में तो भले फेरि भाषिये ॥ हता करि विव एक तीरथ करत बावी करें मख राम भिन्ना खारिये हत्यारे की 🏾 सनि अभिराम नाम धाम में धुलाव लियो दियों से पसाद कियों सह गायों प्यारे कों 🏾 मई दिजसभा कहि योलि की पठाए भाग कैसें गये पाप संग लैके जेये न्यारे की ॥ पोधी तम बांची हिये सार नहीं सांची बज तार्ते मन फाचो दर फरैन प्रध्यारे कों 🛭

देखि पोधी बांघ नाम महिमाह कही सांच भेंपे हत्याकरें कैसे तरे कहि बीजिये 🏽

٧i

षाये जी प्रतीत कही योही याके हाथ जैवें सिवज को चैल तब पंगति में लोजिये 🏾 धार में प्रसाद दियो चले जहां पन कियो बोले बाप नाम के प्रताप मृति भीजिये ॥ जैसी तम जानों तैसी कैसेंके बखानों सही सनिके प्रसन्न पायो जी जी धनि रोजिये ॥ वारी जिस सोर सोरी करन हरन धन देखे श्यामधन हांच चाप सर लिये हैं ॥ अब जब बावे वात सांधि दरपार्वे वे तो मति मंडरावे भेंपें यहां दरें किये हैं। भोर भाय पूर्वे मजू सावरी किसीर कीन सुनि करि मौत रहै शांस डारि दिये हैं॥ दर्द सर्वे छुटाय जानी चीकी रामराय दर्द मार्च उन्हें दोदा सीदा सह मये हिये हैं॥ कियो तम विश्व त्याम लागि चली संग तिया दरही तें देखि किया घरन बनाम है॥ बोले वी सहागवती मासी पति होड सती भव तो निकल गर्र ज्यार्क सेवा राम है। बोलि के कर द कही जो पे प्रक्ति करो सही गही तय बात जीव दियो भगिराम है। भवे सब साधु प्याधि मेटो लै बिमुख ताकी आको थास रहे तो न सुझे स्वाम धाम है ॥ दिल्लीपति पातसाह सहदी पठायी लीन ताकों सी सनायों स ये वित्र उदावों जातिये ॥ देखिये की चार्ड नोकें सब सी नियाई आप करि यह विनय गहि चले मन भानिये 🏾 पहुँचे नुपति पास झाइर प्रकास कियो उद्य मासन ले योज्यो सुद यानिय ॥ दीजी करामाति जय स्याति सब मात किये कही कूढ बात यक राम पहिचातिये ॥ देखें राम कीलो कहि कीदि किये किये हिये हुजिये रूपाल हुनमान ज दयाल हो है

ताही संग्रय फैलि गुणै कीटि कीटि करन और मोर्चे तत धुँचै चीर प्रथी मी विश्वल हो ह पोर्ट कोर प्रार्ट कोर किये जारी होत होत लोजे केल भीट जानि मानों मूर्ल काल हो ह महित्र द्वार्थि द्वारागर को चारी द्वार पेंद्र इमें शर्वे मार्चे वारी घन बाल हो ॥ बाय वाय लिये सम दिये हम प्रान पार्चे भाग सममार्थे करामान नेक लोजिये 🛭 लाज दवि गयो गय तब राजि लीया बती भये। घर रामज की वेति होड दीजिये 🏻 स्ति ति दियों बीर करयों लेंक कोट नयो भवह न रहे कोऊ वामें तन कीतिये ह कासी जाय गृग्दावन भाग मिले नामाज सी सन्यो हो कवित्त निज्ञ रोफि मति मोजिये व प्रदेश गीवालज को हरसन करि करि सही राम इष्ट मेरे दृष्टि भाव पागी है। वैसोर्र सहय कियों ले दियो दिखाय हुए मन बनहर ठवि देखि नोकी लागो है ॥ काह कही रूप्ण सवतारीज प्रसस महा राम बंस सनि योले मित बनरागी है ॥ दसर्घ सुत जानो सुन्दर भनूप मानों ईसता बताई रति योस गनी जागी है a Translation of the gloss (or supplement) by Praya Das.

He had great lore for his wife: without saling his bare the west to be father's he forgot all about binneds and hattested there too. Sine was greatly salamed, and went away in anger, apping:—"Har wo no love for Elma? I by body is tot a framework of all and bean," When he heard these words, it was, as it were, the dipriest; he felt composedious and left her and apple to the tity of Kas. There he made his abode, worshipping the lord publicly, making a rigid vow, and thinting exceedingly for a rusion.

A certain ghost, who had secured the remainder of the water be had used in washing, was grateful and told him of Hanoman.

¹ A ghost is supposed to suffer from perpetual thirst sud to be glad to secure even a drop of water, however impure the purpose for which it has been used.

"A treitation of the Manayana has a precial clarum for his ears; the will be dispatied in near satire, hat a slavys the first because of the last to leave." These recogniting him as the left, he went with him in full confidence, and in the wood, knowing this to be in trust the god, ras and embraced has feet, crying with a shoot of joy.—" You shall not escape me." Perceiving him intense develone, he assumed the form in which he is famous, and such:—" Ask of me what you will." "I am ever craving to behald will my very eyes the non-parable beauty of Ning Risma." He told hum the piece for meeting. From that alsy forth has was longing ith the time cases, this hours are the same of the control of the control

A Brahman, who had committed a morder, came on a pilgrimage, rying -" For the love of Rama give an alma even to me, a murderer." In hearing the delightful name, he called him into his own house, and tave him of the offerings to the god, and purified him and sang the raises of his Beloved. The Brabmans met in conclave and adminined im before them, saving :- " How has his guilt been remitted that on could thus take and eat with him apart ?" " Read your books beir real meaning has not popetrated your heart; therefore your faith i doll and your blindness has not been removed." "We have read ad examined our books; the virtue of the name is truly as you have ud ; but can a murderer be absolved ? Please explain that," " Tell e how I may convince you." They said :- " If Sava's bull will cut om his hand, then will we receive him juto our company. He gave is of the temple offerings in a dish, and they returned to the place here he had made the vow. There he cried .- " Saturate their souls ith the glory of thy name ; thou knowest how the matter stands, what is I say?" On hearing those words be graciously accepted the Terrog ; there was a royous shout of Victory I Victory I

Some thieves came by night to thiere and plander his goods, but holds a doublast, form with how and arrows in his hand. Whenever is approached with ready shaft, they were afraid, and though ther arrows and ready, they could not got till of this watchman. At most considerable, they could not get till of this watchman, at my considerable of the country of the countr

A Brahman had ded; his wife was following him to the pyre, onaw him at a distance and made him obsessed. He addressed to as a knyp wife. Ette repitel:—" My bushand a dead, and I am out to persh with him." The word has passed ray he; I will tore him to life; worship then him. Then he called her kinefolk to the him of the him. Then he called her kinefolk him word, and he restored the man to he delich; of My markened him word, and he restored the man to he delich; and the state of the word with the him with a who had taken a way their sixful frewardness: a near two heaven to whom passion delif bree;

The emperce of Dolli east an officer to fetch lam, explaining, " It is he, you miret know, who beinght the Beshman to I fo again " " He is anxione to see you," they end, " so come, all will be well " They spoke an controvaly that to agreed and went. They arrived toftee the king, who received him with honors, gave him an excited west, and sail in Leactorie tones - ! Let me are a merele, it is moral thronghout the world that you are master of exceptiong" He seid -" It to falm , know that Hame is all in all " " How is Rams to be seen ? " he earl, and threw him into priess. He prayed within himself gracione Handman, have fully upon me " That very moment thousands upon thomsands of sincle monkeys spread all over the place, clawing leadies, and teating clothes, and great was the altem. They broke open the fort, wounding the men, destroying everything , where could one By for rafely ? It eremed so though the end of the world had come, Then his eyes were opened by this trate of a sea of exlamities, and he ctied,- Now I wager all my treasure it is he only who can save me," He came and cleaped his feet " If you give me life I live ; pray speak to them," " Better watch the miracle a little". The king was overwhelmed with confusion. Then he stopt it all and said . -- " Quickly abandon this spot, for it is the above of l'ama." At the word he quitted the place and went and I mit a new fort, and to this day any one who abutes there falls ill and dies.

After returning to Kiss he came to Brandt han and nor Nithis II and head his pottry, and has whole and was filled with delight. On visiting the shrine of Modan Gopal he said:—— Of a truth Rame is my special patrice; I would foun see hum? Then appeared the got him to that very form, and he was glad on beholding his incompatible beauty. It was said to him.—— The Krishan Avstar so figure tenous, Ifams was only a partial incarantion." On hearing this head, —— Why sould was fall of love for him when I took him only for the on of Darsrath and admired his incompatable beauty; now that you tell me of his divinity, my love is increased treentfold."

Professor Wilson, in his most valuable and interesting " Essay on the Religious Sects of the Hindus," gives the following notice of Tulsi Das, and adds that he had derived it from the Bhakt-Mala :- " Having been incited to the peculiar adoration of Rama by the remonstrances of his wife, to whom he was possionately attached, he adopted a vagrant life, visited Benares, and afterwards went to Chitrakut, where he had a personal interview with Hanuman, from whom he received his poetical inspiration and the power of working miracles. His fame reached Delhi, where Sháhjahán was emperor. The monarch sent for him to produce the person of Rama, which Tulsi Das refusing to do, the king threw him into confinement. The people of the vicinity, however, speedily petitioned for his liberation, as they were alarmed for their own security : myriads of monkeys having collected about the prison and begun to demainh it and the adjacent buildings. Sháhjhán set the poet at liberty and desired him to solicit sown favour as a reparation for the indignity he bad suffered. Tolsi Dás accordingly requested him to quit ancient Delhi, which was the abode of Ráma; and in compliance with this request the emperor left is and founded the new city, thence named Sháhjhánabád. After this Tolsi Dás went to Brindá-ban, where he had an interview with Náhbá j; the settled there and strenuously advocated the worship of Sits Ráma, in oreference to that of Rádh. Kristna."

On comparing this sketch with the literal translation of the text from which it was derived, it will be seen that it is not very closely in accord with it. It omits many particulars and adds others, and was probably taken not from the gennine Hindi poem itself, but from some prose adaptation, of which, in consequence of the difficulty of the original, there are very many in existence.

It is a curious illustration of the indifference to historical trath and the love for the marrellous, by which the Hinds mind has always been characterised, that although the title even of the Bakk-Halia was written less than a contury after the poets death, it still gives so little treatworthy information about the real incidents of his life and capplies so much that is clearly fictitious. That it was his wife who first persuaded him to exchange an earthy for a dirina lave and to devote himself to the service of Riam may well be accepted as a fact. As to the other legends—of the ghost who introduced him to Ilnumán, through whom he obtained a vision of Riams and Lakthann : of the murderer whem he recognized as cleaned of his crime by the repetition of the holy name; of the widow on her way to the funeral pile, whose husband he restored to life ; of the emperor's requiring him to perform some miracle and, on his refuel to produce the god to whom he secribed all his power, throwing him into prison, from which he was delivered by Hanumin's monkey host; of the emperor's thereupon abandoning a spot which Itams had made so peculiarly his own; of the thieves who were prevented from breaking into the poet's house by Rama himself acting as watchman; of his visit to Brinda-ban and his interview with Nabha Ja ; and Englir of his persistence in preferring the worship of Rams to that of Krishna, though the latter assured him in person that there was no difference between the two-all these legents. as given in the Bhakt-Mula, whatever their foundation, are still popularly accepted as verities and are indesolably connected with the poet's name. A few further facts of more prossic character may be gathered from his own works and from tradition; thus we learn from the prologue to the Ramayana that he commenced its composition at Ayothya in the Sambut year 1631, corresponding to 1575. A. D., and that he had studied for some length of time at Soron. He was by descent a Brahman of the Kanaujiya clan, and in the Bhakt-Sindhu-a modern poem of no great authority, the writer when at a loss for facts being as it seems, in the habit of supplying them out of his own imagination-it is stated that his father's name was Atma Ram and that he was born at Hastinapur. Others make Hajipur, near Chitrakut, the place of his birth. The greater part of his life was certainly spent at Benares, though he also passed some years in visits to Soron, Ayodhya, Chitrakut, Allahahad, and Brinda-ban. He died in the Sambat year 1680 (1624 A.D.).

^{1.1} was afterwalls able to verify the conjecture, at Mr. Leonard, the Arrivant Recture of "the Clerkint shates bester, was land compts to find in the bit copy of Prices". Head and Hindustrial Selections." a work to which Problems White Prices were then occur in the current of this copy, or the control of the copy of the compiler in his instruction that a many as 100 pages of it are excepted with extracts from the Dhat. 1242, but with the exception of word is starters from the used of Sahah 2142, the copy of the co

A complete copy of the Rimáyana in his owe hand-writing was once in existence at Rájaup, but it was stolen about the year 1800 by a devotee, who on being pursued threw it into the river. It was eventually recovered by a net, but not till it had been greatly damaged by the water; Book II, the Ayothyá, which forms the centre of the volume, being the only part that remained legible. This fragment is still in the temple; but as every pilgrim is expected to make an offering of a cover for it, it is now enveloped in some 50 wraps and is quite lost to sight. The Mahárája of Benares is said to have employed a copyrist to consult it befare publishing his edition, which in that care represents the standard tett; and a commentary written by Mahant Ram Charan in Samket 1862, and published by Naval Kishore of Lucknow, professes to have been undertaken after 'handling' the original MS., which possibly was then complete. The 'handling', however, may have been only from a motive of veneration and not for critical purposes.

In addition to his great work Tulsi Das composed at least six other poems, all of them having the one object of nopularizing the cultus of his tutelary divinity. They are the Ramgitavali (which is one of the text-books in the Government examination for a Degree of Honour), the Dohávali, the Kabit-sambandh, the Binsy Patrika the Satsai and the Ram Agya. All of these have been published, either at Lucknow or Benares, within the last few years, and all now for the first time, excepting the Binay Patrika, which was printed in good type by Sri Lalla Ji for the use of the college of Fort William as far back as the year 1826; but copies of this first edition are now very scarce. The list is not unfrequently extended by the addition of the following minor works, as to the genuineness of which there is constderable doubt, viz., the Ram 1-Salaka, the Banuman Bahuka, the Janaki Mangal, the Parvati Mangal, the Karka Chhand, the Rora Chhand and the Jhulus Chhand. An autograph MS. of the Ram Agya was preserved in the temple of Situ Ram at Benares, which Tulsi Das had bimself founded, till the Mutiny, but was then lost.

His theological and metaphysical views are panthesiste in character, being based for the most part on the traching of the fater Verdantists as formulated in the Verdant-Séra and more abhorately exponsed in the Bagavad Gita, which is the most popular of all Sasakrit didactic posses. The whole visible world, as they maintain, is an unreal phantaum, induced by ignorance or illuxion, and it is only by a concession to conventional speech that it can be said to exist at all Tes sols representative of true existence is the suprems splitt. Brahm, conceived as absolute and unchangeable unity; invisible, eternal and all-pervaling.

I For the information as to this set the Ruspier MS. I am field-bed to model than fraids, fixed, of Chesals, we had to take not be heard to be more than the has in his researce as manuscript of the poem which professes to be copied from an imputed deads. Sunded 1700; take its, only 150 person after the subtree's death this be world pla fill freel for collation, if a entired solution of the texture of the contract of the contra but having no relation to the world-since that would involve a notion of dualism-and for the same reason sold of cognition, will, activity and all other qualities; a potentiality, in the ordinary use of language, eather than an actual entity. All thenomens whether material or spiritual, including even the gods of Vedic mythology, are simply fictions of the mind. But the worship of the inferior divinities and compliance with the external ritual of religion, are considered to purify and prepare the intellect for the recention of higher truths. They are therefore substary and even necessary practices during the early days of the soul's progress towards perfection. If a man is overtaken by death before he has advanced beyond this preliminary stage, he is born again either into this or into a higher world in some different form, the dignity of which is determined by the aggregate merit or demerit of all his actions in all his previous births. The highest reward for devotion to any special god is the exaltation of the soul to his particular sphere in heaven. But this blessedness is not of permanent duration; on the expiry of a proportionate period the burden of mundane existence has again to be undergone. It is only on the attainment of perfect knowledge that final emancination is complete and the individual soul is absorbed for ever into Impersonal :

"A spiritual star – wronght in a rose Of light in Paradise, whose only self is consciousness of glory wale diffused."

Except to a theosophist, the promise of such an ultimate desting is not a very attractive one, nor is it conducive to popular morality. For good deeds and evil deeds and the god that recompenses them, all alike belong to the unreal, to the fictitious duality, the world of semblances; while the so-called Supreme Being is no proper object of worship, being a more cold abstraction, unconcious of his own existence or of ours, and devoid of all attributes and qualities. To correct this practical defects and supply some intelligible motive for withstanding temptation and leading a pure and holy life, the supplementary doctrine of Bhakti, or Faith, was developed. Some one of the recognized incurvations of the Hindu Pantheon was no longer regarded as a partial emanation of the divinity, but was exalted into the complete œ.

I The absence of all recollection of acts done in former states of existence is not an objection to the theory of transmigration; for the continuity is not one of consciousness, but of that tendency or disposition which is the separato nature of each individual, embodiment of it. A loving devetion to his personality was then enjoined an simple and certain method of attaining to codless felicity; not the transitory sensual delights of Indra's paradise, nor the mere unconsciousness of time extinction, but the conscious enjoyment of individual importality in the immediate presence of the Beatife Vision.

The late introduction of this crowning dogma of Faith in an incarnate Redeemer and its marked similarity to Christian ideas have induced several scholars to surmise that the Brahmans borrowed it from the early Christian communities in Southern India. The notion is favoured-if not, indeed, originated-by the fact that in the Bhagavad Gita it is Krishna who figures as the embodiment of the Supreme Being, and both in the name and in the legends of Krishna there is a superficial resemblance to the name of Christ and to some of the incidents recorded of Him in the Gospels As I have shown more fully elsewhere, there is no historical basis for the supposed connection, while the similarity of name is demonstrably accidental. The doctrine appears to have grown up as a natural sequel to the purely indigenous school of thought in which we find it established, and an exact parallel can be traced in the history of Buddhism, where the nihilism of Nirvana was practically abrogated by the gradual defication of its teacher. In selecting Rama as his ideal of the divine in preference to Krishna, Tulsi Das has certainly improved upon the teaching of the Bhagavad.

The tendancy of modern scientific thought is setting strongly in favour of the Vedanist theory; as declaring the existence from all eternity of a personal God to be simply unknowable, and referring all phenomena to a strange mysterious energy, or will, that pervades all nature, that produces all the work done on the face of the earth, and is probably at the roof of hie itself: invitible and inventible, and arhitistic only in its effects. Such a theory—as we see from our author's own case—is by no means incompatible with a belief as divine incaraction: the difficulty is to establish by historical proof that such and such a character—Rama or Krishas, or wherever it my be—was really horn—

I in a Chiosec inscription, of the year 1021 A D, that has been discortred at Buddle Gart, he is thus addressed . O great master, mercuful to the people, sympathising with all creatures, sithough thou dost not manifest thyself, still thou set a most efficacions God.

The following passage from Book VII of the Bhagavad lita, as freely rettdered by Mr. Edwin Arnold in his 'Song clestial,' is a very explicit summary of the accepted 'edantio doctrine:

"There be those, too, whose knowledge, turned aside By this desire or that, gives them to serve Some lower gods with various rites constrained By that which mouldeth them Unto all such-Worship what shrine they will, what shapes in faith-'Tis I who give them faith. I am content. The heart thus asking favour from its God. Darkened but ardent, bath the end it craves. The lesser blessing ; but 'tis I who give. Yet soon is withered what small fruit they reap : Those men of little minds, who worship so, Go where they worship, passing with their Gods : But mine come unto me. Blind are the eves Which deem the Unmanifested manifest, Not comprehending Me in my true self. Imperishable, viewless, undeclared, Hidden behind my magic vell of shows, I am not seen by all ; I am not known-Unborn and changeless - to the idle world. But I, Arjuna, know all things which were, And all which are, and all which are to be, Albeit not one smong them knoweth Me." The words " Blind are the eyes Which deem the Unmenisted manifest" emphatically condemn the worship of y incarnation, on the ground that it involves an inadequate nception of the Deity. Tulsi Das, on the other bard sists that they derogate from the divine perfection, all vest it of personality and reduce it to an abstract gainst such theologians he hotly protests as when her '11 Chhand 5)-" Let them preach in their rises ntemplate thee as the Supreme Spirit, the Dean a parable from the universe, recognizable only harm d beyond the understanding ; but we, O Les ! For mn the glories of thy incarnation." Nor es pporters even in this ... ne answer ' 41 ,., Te 18 in his propunciation, to suit a place in his metre, or because he wants a rhyme. His treatment of words, on occasions of lifficulty to his verse, is arbitrary in the extreme. He gives hem any sense and shape that the case may demand. Someimes he merely alters a letter or two; sometimes he twists off the head or the tail of the unfortunate vecable altogether. such vagaries, being unconsciously regulated by the genius of the language, are no more nuzzling to a Hindú than the olloquialisms of Sam Weller or Mrs. Gamp are to an English reader of Dickens. But they would seem inexplicble invateries to any Anglo-Indian official, who knew only he language of the Courts and had never studied the vernaular of the people. For such neglect there was formerly men excuse, in the absence both of a dictionary and a rammar : but the latter want was most admirably supplied 1876 by Mr. Kellogg, of the Allahabad American resbyterian Mission, in a work that is to a remarkable agree both locid and exhaustive ; while Messrs. Hornle and rierson's new Comparative Dictionary is not only more ientific in method and elaborate in execution than any milar work that has ever before been attempted by Indian illologists, but it is further supplemented by a special dex to the Ramayana, which exhibits every single word the poem, and refers to all the passages in which it occurs. eyet only one part of this gigantic work has appeared, d some years must elapse before it is completed. Mr. ite's dictionary, to which I have already referred, is croely intended for very advanced students, but it will be much use to beginners, since it gives in alphabetical order the archaic forms of inflection, which at the outset are and so perplexing.

The second Book is more generally read than any other to fit began, and is the most admired by Hilodi critics, e description of King Dasarath's death and the different vertakings are quoted as models of the pathetic, and in a life recital there is sarrealy one in the audience who lust be moved to tarn. The sentiments that the post icits, and the figures that he employs to illustrate them, and with irrestituble force to the Hilodi imagination; i, if for no other reason than this, they would be insign to the English student for the insight they afford a the traditional sympathies and antipathies of the Dr. The constant repetition of a few stereotyped is deaf; that the swan sings before it dies; that crocodiles weep when they have done wrong; that bear's cubs are bour formless and are licked into ursine shape by their mother; that some snakes have stings in their tail; and that the toad carries a jewel in its head which is an autidate to poleon.

In spile of all drawbicks, the Hindi Ikâmáyana has many pasages that are ioxinice with a gennise postic feeling, which appeals to universal humanity, and which it is hoped will be dimly recognized even through the ineffectual medium of a press translation. The characters also of the principal actors in the drams are clearly and consistently drawn; and all may admire, though they refuse to worthip, the piety and unselfishness of Bharat; the enthusiasm and high courses of Lexhauna; the affectionate devotion of Sita, that praspoo of all wife-like virtous; and the purity, meskeness, generosity and self-ascribeo of Ráma, the model son, husband and brother, 'the guileless king, high, self-contained and passionless'—the Arthur of Indian chivalry.

In the later Books the narrative is generally more rapid that in the earlier part of the poem, and several incidents are so casually mentioned that, without the explanatory references to the Sanskrit Ramayans, which I have given in the notes, a literal rendering would convey no meaning to the ordinary reader. It is to some extent a literary defect that the role of poet is so often dropt for that of therlogian; and the frequent hymns to Rima, who is apostrophized under every conceivable name that can help to realize to the mind the mystery of incarnate divinity. soon become wearisome. But the object that Tulsi Das had in view is his sufficient excuse. By the course that he has adopted, fitting his special doctrines of faith individual immortality and the like into the familiar framework of ancient legend, instead of inculcating them by a more strictly diductic method, he has succeeded in popularizing his views to a far greater extent than any of the rival Hinda Reformers, who flourished about the same period. It was their object also to simplify the complications and correct the abuses of existing practice, but the only result of their preaching was to establish yet another element of discontion and sugment the discontent which they hoped to remove. Table Discolons, though the most famous of them all, has no disciples that are called after his name. There are Vallethechtsis and Ridhik Vallables and Vallables and Vallables and Vallables and Vallables and Order to Order to Order interminable succession, but there are no Table Dails. Victually however, the whole of Vaichnaya Hindsium has talken ander his away; for the principles that he expounded here permeated every sect and explicitly or implicitly now from the nucleus of the popular faith as it presult throughout the whole of the Bengal Presidency from Hardwar to Calcuits.

¹ Of the two current recentions of the older poem, the one generally feltured by Tules has lethe Bengal, which is the fext given by Gorresio in his landaume edition.

In the yer 1876, when I published the first instalment of my translation, I was still at Mathurá, in a congenis latmosphere of Hindu associations. After my transfer to Bulandshuhr in 1877, I laboured under the serious district, where it was almost as difficult to obtain any assistance on abjects connected with Hindi literature or scholarship as it would have been in England. But by that time the familiarity I had sequired with my author was sufficiently long and intimate to enable me to complete my task unsified.

At the outset I was under the impression that as a translator, there was no one at all in the field before me ; but after making some little progress in the second book, I discovered that there was already in existence for that particular section of the poem an English version, published in 1871, by Adálat Khán, a Mubammadan Munshi of the College of Fort William in Culcutta. I at once procured a copy of it and it is only proper to acknowledge that it was of considerable assistance to me. It does not, however, encroach very largely upon the ground that I had intended to occupy. The Munshi appears to have written solely with a view to lighten the labours of his own pupils and of others who, like them, were preparing for a special examination. Despite not a few misapprehensions of the sense, such persons will probably find it quite as useful for their purpose as my translation, if not more so. But in the attempt to secure literal accuracy, and also, no doubt, from the fact that English was not the mother-tongue of the translator, the language employed is throughout so curiously unidiomatic that in many places it is absolutely unintelligible without a reference to the original, and this the general reader would not be in a position to make. As a specimen I give the chaupdi following dold 224 (with which may be compared my rendering, page 132, volume II).

"If he leaves me, knowing my mind wicked, and receives me, considering his servant, my subtering-place then will be in the shees of Risma: he is my good matter; but the fault is in this servant. The Adda and the fish deserve the praise of the world; they are sincers in their unust yow and love. Thus having reflected in his mind, he went along the road, ashamed and overpowered with love. The sin committed by his mother was as if keeping him lack; but the Ball of patience was walking by the power of his faith, and when he know the nature of Hamt, his feet fell on the ground berriedly. The state of Bharat at that time was such as that of the bee in a corrent of water. Seeing the grief and love of Bharat, the pilot became stuendied at that moment."

The uncoultness of the Muschil's style will give some bles of what is certainly the mind difficulty that has to be encountered in a prose translation from Hindi verse. No one who has not had practical experience in the matter can fully appreciate the amount of thought that has to be expended on almost every sentence before the peculiarities of Oriental expression can be adapted to the requirements of English idiom. Without the most delicate handling it is impossible to swide differ a sacrifice of accuracy in the letter, or a mirrepresentation of the spirit by a bridness of rendering, while the sentiments of the lodicross and grotsque, while the sentiments of the original in their native dress are felt to be both natural and pubelic.

F & GROWSE.

Postscript. Under the patronage of Mr. Griercon, an enterprising Publisher of Patos (Babo Hām Din Suh of the Kharg Billis Press, Hānkspore), has now published a test of the Hām-chari-lanaa, which is an exact reproduction of the original MSS. This must be a work of the highest interest to all Hindi Scholars; but it may be starmised that the variations from the received test are of more importance from the philological than from the literary point of view.

THE RÁMÁYANA

03

TULSI DÁS

BOOK I

CHILDHOOD

Sanskrit Incoration

I MENERGER SINGL and Ganes, the inventors of the alphabet and of phraseology, of the poetic modes and of metre. I reverence Bhaviani and Sankara, the in-arantions of faith and hope, without when not seven the just can see Goo, the Great Spirit. I reverence as the incarnation of Sankara, the all-wise Gura, through shome seen the ceresont moon is everywhere honourcel! I reverence the king of band's and the monkey king, of pure intelligence, who were lingered with delight in the hely forest land of Hann and Slits infinite perfection. I how before Sin, the beloved of Hann; the queen of birth, of life and death; the destroyer of serows; the cause of largingers.

I reverence, under his name RAMA, the bord Hari; supreme over all cases; to whow allowine power are subject the whole universe and every superabusal being from Brahma downwards; by whose light truth is made manifest, as when what appeared to be a scake turns out a rope; and by whose feet as by a bank those who will may pass safely over the ecoan of existence.

In accord with all the l'oranes and different excred texts, and with what has been recorded in the Ramayana (of Valmiki) and elsewhere, I, Talsi, to gratify my own Leart's

I like crearest man, he my the of hashares to heast command such he is in more lond he area and to ghe in the 'f operation' and in the little man he could be seen and to the heli man is to he to perform the second section.

If I he king of burds, hadman, the reported artise of the harsken. Earth your Thomselvey king to decisions. Harmonan, and the two are decayte that the more one account of the close is made to discount than in any other transfer and account of the decision of the control of the account of the control of the control of the account of the control of the control of the account of the control of the control of the account of the control of the control of the account of the control of th desire, have composed these lays of Ragbunath in most choice and elegant modern speech.

Sorathá 1.

O Gaues, of the grand elephant head; the mention of whose name ensures success, be gracious to me, accumulation of wisdom, storehouse of all good qualities! Thou, too, by whose favour the damb becomes eloquent, and the lame can climb the vastest mountain, be favourable to me, O thou that consument as a fire all the impurities of this iron age. Take up thy abode also in my heart, O thou that slumberest on the milky ocean, with body dark as the lotus, and eyes bright as a budding water-lifty O spouse of Umá, clear of hue as the jasmine or the moon; home of compassion, who showest pity to the humble; show pity upon me, O destroyer of Kámadeva. I reverence the lotus feet of my master, that ocean of benevolence. Hari incurrante, whose words are like a flood of sunlight on the darkness of ignorance and infetuntion.

Chaupái 1.

I reverence the pollen-like dust of the lotus feet of my mater, bright frequent, sweet and delicious; pure extract of the root of ambronia, potent to disperse all the attendant ills of life; like the holy ashes on the divine body of Sambbu, beautiful, asspicious, ectatio. Applied to the forehead as a tilat, it cleanses from defilement the fair mirror of the human mind and gives it the mastery of all good. By recalling the lustre of the nails of the reverend guru's feet, a divine splendour illamines the soul, dispersing the shades of error with its sun-like glory. How blessed he who takes it to his heart! The mental vision heighter and exprunds, the night of the world with ain and pain fades away, the actions of Ramas, like diamonds and rubies, whether obvious or obscure, all alike become clear, in whichever direction the mine is explored.

Dohá 1.

By applying this collyrium as it were to the eyes, the student acquires both boliness and wisdom, and is able to

I The pers us all iresect in this stanza are Ganes, Sarasvati, Narayan, Sara, and the poet's own spiritual instructor, or guru

2 The simple sett is are compared to tubies, which may be picked up on the surface of treprond; the mysterious actions to diaminds, which have to be day out of a mine.

nderstand his sportive career when on earth—on mountain, r in forest—and all the treasures of his grace. 🗸

Chaupái 2.

The dust of the gurn's feet is a soft and charming collyam. like ambrasia for the eyes, to remove every defect of sion. With this having purified the eyes of my underanding, I proceed to relate the actions of Rama, the deemer of the world. First I reverence the feet of the eat Brahman saints, potent to remove the doubts engenred by error. In my heart, as with my voice, I reverce the whole body of the faithful, mices of perfection : iose good deeds resemble the produce of the cotton plant its austerity, parity, and manifold usefulness, and in its ting the defects even of those by whom it has been most aghly treated : reverence to the saints whatever the age clims in which their glory was consummated. Their agregation is all joy and felicity, like the great tirtha avag endowed with motion : for faith in Rama is as the eam of the Ganges; contemplation on Brahma as the rasvati; and ritual, dealing with precents and probabitions the purification of this iron age, as the son-goal agister, the Jammon. The outlied flood of the Trillens is evented by the legends of Hari and of Hara, filling all thear with delight: the sacred fig-tree, by faith firm in own traditions; and Prayág itself, by the assembly of victoaus. Easy of access to all, on any dry, at any oc, curing all the file of pious devotees, is this anspeakable, idual choir furths, of manifest virtue and yielding immediate by the property of the froit.

Dollá 2

At this Prayag of holy men, whoever hears and underids, and in spirit devoutly bathes, receives even in this all four rewards.

Chaupsi 3.

In an instant behold the result or the immersion; the r becomes a parrot and the goose a awan. Let no one wel at hearing this, for the influence of good company is no mystery. Válmiki, Národ and the jar-born Agastya! have told its effect upon themselves. Whatever moves in the water, or on the earth, or in the air; every creature in the world, whether animate or inanimate, that has attained to knowledge, or glory, or salvation, or power, or virtue, by any work, at any time or place, has triumphed through association with the good; neither the world nor the Veda knows of any other expedient. Intercourse with the good is attainable only by the blessing of Rama and without it wisdom is impossible: it is the root of all joy and felicity; its flowers are good works and its fruit perfection. By it the wicked are reformed: as when by the touch of the philosopher's stone a vile metal becomes gold. If by mischance a good man falls into evil company, like the gem in a serpent's head, he still retains his virtue. Brahma, Visnu, Mahadeya, the wisest of the poets, all have failed to expound the pre-eminence of a saint : for me to tell it is, as it were, for a costermonger to expatiate on the merits of a set of jewels.

The four remards are known, archit, dharma, modula, that is, pleasure, i, religious merit and final salestion.

Dohá 3-4.

I reverence the saints of equable temperament, who regard neither friend nor foe, like a gracious flower which sheds its fragrance alike on both infolding hands? Ye saints, whose puright intention, whose catholic charity, and whose ready sympathy I acknowledge, hear my child-like prayer, be gracious to me and inspire me with devotion to the feet of klima.

Chaupái 4.

Again, I would propitiate those wretches who without cause delight to vex the righteous; with whom a neighbour's

^{1.} Valuatis confessed to fixms that he had once been a bunder and taken life of many innoncent certainters, till he fell in with the seven lifely. The converted him and tangkt him to express his penitence by constantly repeating the word sades, adva As this contains exactly the same letters as the name Rims, it acted as a spell and advanced him to the highest degree of spating.

Similarly Nárád confessed to Vyáss, the author of the Parias, that he was by birth only the son of the poor slave-girl, and had become a saint simply be eating the fraquents of food left by the holy men who frequented his master's house.

Agastya also declared to Mahadeva that by birth he was the meanest of Agestya also declared to Mahadera that by birth he was the meaner of all creature, and had only attained to miraculous powers by the influence of good company less is gain; who rejoice in desolution and weep over prosperity; who are as an eclipse to the full-mong play of Hari and Hara; who become as a giant with a thousand arms to work another's wee; who have a thousand eyes to detect a neighbour's faults bot, like flies on ghf, retule on his good points only to spoil them i quick as fire, implacable as the good of tell'; rich in crime and sin as Kuwer is ingold; like an eclipse for the clouding of irrendship, and as dead askeep as Kumbha-kara? to everything good; if they can do any injury, as ready to secrifice themselves as hillstones, that mult after destroying a cop; spiteful as the great erpent with a thousand tongues; and like Prithraji', with a thousand ears, to tell and hear of others' faults; like the thousand-eyed Indra, too, ever delighting us much strong drink and in a voice of thunder.

² Though the right hand is the one by which it has been plucked, and the left that in which it is held and preserved.

³ In the following lines the poet defends himself by anticipation against possible objections and roundly abuses the whole army of critics.

CHILDHOOD

Daha 5.

I know when they hear of philosophers, who regard friend or foe as friends, they are enraged; but I clasp my hands and entreat them piteously.

Chaupái 5.

I have performed the rôle of supplication, nor will they forget, their part. However carefully you may bring up a crow, it will still be a crow and a thief. I propitiate at once the feet of saiuts and sinners, who excle give para, but with a difference i roth forts kill by absence, while, the second totture by their presence i as expossite as a lottu and a leech, though both sike are produced in water. Good and bad thus resemble nectar and intoxicating drink, which were both begretten by the one great occasi i such by its own acts.

I Yama, the Hindu Plate, is here called Mahishess, from makisha a 'buffale,' that being the snimal on which he is represented as tiding

² Raran's guantle brether, Kumbhikarn, obrtined es a boon from Brahmà, that whenever he had satisfied his roracious appetite the slamher of repletion night be of the longest and deepest, and that he might only wake to est scan.

3 1th and related that Prithoral had really ten thousand care, but only

³ It is not related that Prithural had really ten thousand ears, but only that he prayed that he might be as quick to hear whatever redounded to the glory of God as if his ears were so many.

⁴ The charating of the occur is one of the commonglaces of Hundo locity, and the allesions is if in the Edmanyun are incommented. With Houst Handstea as a character which, the great serpent based as a rope, and Sakram them it in toroids often asken prior on which to work, the houst hand to be a superior of the saken prior of the saken attains to pre-eminence; the one in honour, the other in dishonour; compare with the good, ambrovia, or the moon, or the Gangee; and with the bad, poison, or fire, or the river Karmnáci. Virtue and vice are known to all; but whatever is to a man's taste that secureth him good.

Doba 6.

The good nim at goodness, and the vile at vileness; ambrosia is esteemed for giving immortality, and poison for causing death

Chaurdi G.

Why enumerate the faults and defects of the bad and the virtues of the good? both are a boundless and unfathomable ocean. Hence occasionally virtue is reckoned as vice. improperly and from want of discrimination. For God hath created both, but it is the Veda that has distinguished one from the other. The beroic legends and the Puranas also, no less than the Vedas, recognize every kind of good and evil as creatures of the Creator : pain and pleasure; sin and religious merit ; night and day ; mint and sinner ; high caste and low caste; demons and gods; great and small; ambrosia and life; poison and death; the visible world and the invisible God , life and the lord of life ; rich and poor; the beggar and the king; Kasi and Magadha2; the Gauges and the Karamnasa; the desert of Marwar and the rich plain of Málwá; the Bráhman and the butcher : heaven and hell ; sensual passion and asceticism ; the Vedas and the Tantras, and every variety of good and evil.

Dohá 7.

The Creator has made the universe to consist of things animate and inanimate; good and evil; a saint like a swan extracts the milk of goodness and rejects the worthless water.3

heavenly symple, the Apsaris; the golden of beauty, Lakehmire 94; and the physician of the gold. Disarrance. The engo of nectar which the latter than the physician of the golden of the golden, while the poles. which also was produced, was either claimed by the make golds or swallowed by Mahidewa; whence comes the blackness of his abrost, that gives him the name of NiT-base.

^{1 &}quot;I dil not knowsin, but by the law"-St. Paul.

² Maza iba (Ribár) is taken as the opposite to Rási, in consequence of its being the birthplace of Buddhism

³ To the swan (rdj.kans) is ascribed the fabulors faculty or being able to separate milk from water, after the two bare been mixed together.

Chaupdi 7.

When the Creator gives men this faculty of judgment they abandon error and become enamoured of the truth; but conquered by time, temperament, or fate, even the good, as a result of their humanity, may err from virtue; but Hari takes their body-so to speak-and corrects it, and, removing all sorrow and sin, cleanses it and glorifies them. If the bad through intercourse with the good do good, their inherent badness is not effaced. An impostor of fair outward show may be honoured on account of his garb, but ih the end he is exposed and does not succeed, like Kalanemi, or Ravan, or Rahu. The good are honoured, not withstanding their mean appearance, like bear Jamavaat or the monkey Hanuran. Bad company is loss, and good company is gain; this is a truth recognized both by the world and the Veda. In company with the wind the dust flies heavenwards; if it joins water, it becomes mud and sinks. According to the character of the house in which a parrot or maina is trained, it learns either to repeat the name of Rama or to give abuse. With the ignorant, soot is mere refuse; but it may make good ink, and be used even for copying a Purana; while water, fire, and air combined become an earth-refreshing rain-cloud.

Dohá 8-11.

The planets, medicines, water, air, clothes, all are good or last lines according as their accompaniments are good to tast; and people observe this distinction. Both lunar ortuinghts are engaged or the season of the season of

I Kâlt-nems by assuming the form of an accetic imposed for a time on Hausunan, as Bâran dri upon Stid and even lishno, at the churging the ocean, was at first decired by Jiahu, who appeared the one of the da.

Chaupdi B.

By four modes of birth! are produced 84 lakhs of species inhabiting the air, the water and the earth. With clasped hand I perform an act of adoration, recognizing the whole world as pervaded by the spirit of Sita and Rama. In your comparation regard me as your servant, and dissembling no longer, be kind and affectionate. I have no confidence in the strength of my own wisdom, and therefore I supplicate you all. I would narrate the great deeds of Raghupati, but my ability is little and his acts unfathomable. I am conscious that I have no skill or capacity; my intellect in short is beggarly, while my ambition is imperial; I am thirsting for nectar, when not even skim-milk is to be had. Good people, all pardon my presumption and listen to my childish babbling, as a father and mother delight to hear the lisping prattle of their little one. Perverse and malignant fools may laugh, who pick out faults in others wherewith to adorn themselves. Every one is pleased with his own rhymes, whether they be pungent or insipid; but those who praise another's voice are good men, of whom there are few in the world; there are many enough like the rivers, which on getting a rainfall swell out a flood of their own, but barely one like the generous ocean, which swells on beholding the fulness of the moon.

Dohá 12.

My lot is low, my purpose high, but I am confident of one thing, that the good will be gratified to hear me, though fools may laugh.

Chaupái 9.

The laughter of fools will be grateful to me; the crow culls the kair voice harsh. The goose ridicules the swan, and the frog the chárác; so the low and vile abuse pure verse. As they have no isste for poetry nor love for Rama, I am glad that they should laugh. If my homely speech and poor wit are fit subjects for laughter, let them laugh; it is no fault of mine. If they have no understanding of

I The four charas, or modes of birth, are named product, or surparous; adding, or otherwise, and diding, or produced and adding, or produced by appositing the a tire. The #1 lights of species are divided as follows: 22 lights of apposite researces; 27 lights of times attached the earth. 10 lights of lisers. 1 lights of lisers of above being a mine, 24 kg, which has the same primary application, is used for it in Phasposit i.

true devotion to Lord, the tale will seem insipid enough: but to the true and orthodox worshippers of Hari and Hara the story of Raghubar will be sweet as honey. The singer's devotion to Ram will by itself be sufficient embellishment to make the good hear and praise the melody. Though no poet, nor clever, nor accomplished; though unskilled in every art and science; though all the elegant devices of letters and rhetoric, the countless variations of metre, the infinite divisions of sentiment and style, and all the defects and excellences of verse, and the gift to distinguish between them are unknown to me. I declare and record it on a Dohá 13. That though my style has not a single charm of its own, t has a charm known throughout the world, which men of discernment will ponder as they read-Chaupái 10.

The gracious name of Ragbupati; all-purifying essence the Puranas and the Veda, abode of all that is auspicious, estroyer of all that is inauspicious, ever murmured in rayer by Umá and the great Tripurári The most elegant emposition of the most talented poet has no real beauty the name of Rama is not in it : in the same way as a vely woman adorned with the richest jewels is vile if eclothed. But the most worthless production of the oblest versifier, if adorned with the name of Rama, is and repeated with reverence by the wise, who tract what is good in it, like bees gathering boney : though e poetry has not a single merit, the glory of Rama is anifested thereby. This is the confidence which has escased my soul; is there anything which good company ls to exalt? Thus smoke forgets its natural pungency and incense yields a sweet scent. My language is that in gar use, but my subject is the highest, the story of ma, enrapturing the world. Chhand 1.1

ough rapturous lays belt his praise, who cleansed a world accurat, Tulsi's rivulet of rhyme may slake a traveller's thirst. pure and blest on Siva's breast show the vile stains of earth! my poor song flows bright and strong illumed by Ráma's worth.

we poor song nows origin some as one.

The chlords are powerfully somewhat entinusuable oriborate in which it repeated them to ron away with the sense. The distribution of the chlords the sense is the control of the 62 that occur in the chlords that the chlords are controlled to the chlords that occur in The first line always repeats some book will be rendered metrically. The first line always repeats some balle word from the last line of the preceding stanza R-5

Dela 14-15.

From its connection with the glory of Rims. my verse with the most grateful to every one. Any word that comes from the Malaya sandsignors is valued; who condites what kind of word it is? Though a cow be black, its milk is que and wholesome, and all men drink it; and so, though my speech is rough, it tells the glory of Sita and Rims, and will therefore be heard and repeated with pleasure by sending speech.

Chaufdi 11.

No long as the diamond remains in the serpent's head, the suly on the monatain top, or the pear! in its elephant's town, they are all without heauty; but in a king's diadem or on a lovely woman they become beautiful exceedingly. Similarly, as wise men tell, poetry is born of one faculty but less time the Muse leaves her havenly abode and speed to earth; without immersion in the fountain of Riam's deeds all labour and trouble count for nothing. An intelligent poet understands this, and sings only of flari, the redeemer, and his wirtues. To recount the doings of common people is mere dish beating of the head, which the Muse loathes. Genius is, as it were, a shell in the sea of the coul, whiling for the October rain of inspiration; if a gracious shower falls, each drop becomes a lovely pearl of poetry.

Dold 16.

Then dexterously pierced and strung together on the thread of Ráma's adventures, they form a beautiful chain to be worn on a good man's breast.

Chaurdi 12.

Men born in this grim iron age are outwardly swans, but inwardly as black as crows; walking in evil paths, abandoning the Veda', embodiments of falsehood, ressels of impurity, bypocrites, professing devotion to Ráma, but I by the Vela, in which Table Da so frequently appeals, toust be advertised not the original Vefa stateff, with which be had absolutely nothing in common, but only the Upanishads, which are also popularly quoted as of Vedic author big. They are brief appealative treatises, over 200 in all, in a discoursive and rhapsolical style and of an ultra-landscale treation, over 200 in all, all they have been successful to the brief of the Velans, they are for the most past of most latter data.

alswe of gold, of passion, and of last. Among them I give the first place to myself, a bypocitic, also I of the very first trank; but were I to fell all my vices, the list would so array what it would have no end. I have therefore said but very little, but a word it enough for the vice. Let none of my hearer blane me for offering se mmy spologies; who were istroabled in mind by them is more stepid and dall of wit than I am myself. Though I am no peat, and have no pretensions to eleverness, I sing as best I can the virtues of I kims. How maftathomable his action, how shallow my poor world-entangled intellect! Before the strong wind that could upport Mount Merry, of whits account is such a mere flock of cotton as I am? When I think of Ráma's infolial majesty I tremble as I wyite.

Dole 17.

For Sarasvati, Sesh-nag, Siva and Brahma, the Shastras, the Yeda, the Puranas, all are unceasingly singing his perfection, yet fail to declare it.

Chaupái 13.

All know the greatness of the lord to be thus unuttershle, yet none can refrain from attempting to expound it. For this reason the Veds also has declared many different modes of effectual worship. There is one God, passionless, formless, processed, the universal soul, the supreme spirit, the all-pervading, whose shadow is the world; who has become incarnate and does many things, only for the love that he bears to his faithful people ; all-gracious and com-Passionate to the humble; who in his mercy ever refrains from anger against those whom he loves and knows to be his own; restorer of the past; protector of the poor'; allgood, all-nowerful, the lord Haghuraj. In this belief the wise sing the glory of Hari, and their song thus becomes holy and meritorious. I, too, bowing my head to Itama's feet, am emboldened to sing his fame, following a gath which has been made easy by the divice bards who have trodden it before me.

Dold 18.

As when once a king has prepared a bridge over a broad atteam, an ant, insignificant as it is, is able to cross without difficulty.

I feldered nearly. This is the first Persian word that has experted in the Chaupái 14.

In this manner re-assuring myself, I undertake to recount Rama's charming adventures, as they have been reverently told by Vyasa and the other great poets, whose lotus feet I adore, praying, Fulfil ye my desire. I reverence also the poets of these latter days, who have sung of Raghupati, bards of high intelligence, who have written in Prakrit and the vulgar tongue. All who have been in time past, or who now are, or who hereafter shall be, I bow to all in the atmost good faith and sincerity. Be propitious and grant this boon, that in assemblies of good men my song may be honoured! If the good and wise will not honour it, the silly poet has had all his labour in vain. The only fame, or poetry, or power, that is of any worth, is that which like Ganges water is good for all. The incongruity between Ráma's glory and my rude speech makes me hesitate; but by your favour all will turn out well; for even coarse cloth, if embroidered with silk, becomes beautiful. Be kind enough to thick of this, and my style will then match the excellence of my thome

Dohá 19.

A clear style and an exalted theme are both commendable; and when they are combined, an enemy even, forgetting his natural hostility, will repeat the strain. But such a combination is not to be sequired without genics, a law one so again and again I beg of you to bear with mo while I sing the glory of Hart. The great poets are like the swans sporting in the Mánasa lake of Hari's deeds; look on me as a well-meaning child and make allowances.

Sorathá 2.

I reverence the lotus feet of the great sage who composed the Ramayana, smooth strains on rough topics, and faultless, though a story of the faulty.\(^1\) I reverence the Vedas which

I in limit portry it is considered a beauty if a phrase is an worded at to be expalled for wow men different interpretation. It is smillered note that peculiarly once for all that there are an immense sembler of passages in which, though the meaning which I have adopted seems to me, or that other interpretations are not, from the grammarian's point of ries, and the interpretation are not, from the grammarian's point of ries, and point point of ries, the interpretation are not, from the grammarian's point of ries, and the conveys the general powers of the period of the property of the property of the property of the period of the property of the period of the period art like a beat in which to cross the ocean of existence, without ever dreaming of weariness, while recounting Rism's excellent glory. I reverence the dust on the feet of Brahm's creator of this ocean-like world, from which have been produced men good and bad; as of old from the same source came at once sunbroist, the moon, and the cow Kamadh-nu, and also posion and intoxication injuor.

Doha 20.

Reverencing with clasped hands gods, Brábmans, philosophers, and sages, I pray— Be gracious to me and accomplish all my fair desire.

Chaupái 15.

Again I reverence the Sarasvati and the Ganges, both holy and beautiful streams cleansing sin by a single draught or immersion, whose name as soon as uttered or heard at once removes error. I adore as I would my guru, or my natural parents, Siva and Parvati, protectors of the humble. daily benefactors, servants and courtiers in attendance on Sita's lord and in every way Tulsi's true friends; who, in their benevolence and considering the degeneracy of the times, have themselves composed many spells in a barbarous language, incoherent syllables and unintelligible mutterings, mysterious revelations of the great Siva ! By his patronage I may make my story an agreeable one, and by meditating on Siva and Parvati may relate Rams'e adventures in a way that will give pleasure It is only by his favour that my verse can be beautified, as a dark night by the moon and stars. Whoever in a devont spirit, with intelligence and attention. hears or repeats this lay of mine, he shall become full of true love for Rama, and, cleansed from worldly stains, shall enjoy heavenly felicity.

Dohá 21.

Whether I am awske or dreaming, it Siva and Gauri grant me their favour, all that I say shall come true as to the effect of my song, though it be in the valgar tongue.

Chaupái 16.

I reverence the holy city of Ayodhyá and the river Sarjú, cleansing from allearthly impurity I salute also the inhabitants of the city, for whom the Lord had no little affection; seeing that he impored all the sin of Sitis affection; seeing that he impored all the sin of Sitis calumnistor and set men's minds at rest. I reverence Kaussalya, castern heaven, from which glory was diffused over the whole world; whence flaghpath arosa as a lovely moon, giving joy to the world, but blighting like a frost the lotus leaves of vice. To King Dazarah and all his queens, incarnations of virtue and felicity, I make obeisance in word, deed and heart, saving 'Be gracious to me as to a servent of your son, O parents of Ráma, that come of greatness, ye in whose creation the creator surpussed himself.'

I The allosson is to the imagic spells and dispited I simulates of the Indicas, which are for the most pair raree strings of uncouth and utterly womening words, such as Ol, ATR, HIRIS NEIGH, vol again AN, HUN PHAT, iwo manufas recited during the ceremonics of the Dairy I by: They all Purport to laves been prevaled by Nan himself to larrat.

Sorathá 3.

I reverence the King of Avadb, who had such true love for Rama's feet that, when parted from his lord, his life snapped and parted too like a straw.

Chaupái 17.

I salute the King of Videha, with all his court, who had the greatest affection for Rama; though he concealed his devotion under royal state, yet it broke out as soon as he saw him. Then, pext, I throw myself at the feet of Bharat, whose constancy and devotion surpass description; whose soul like a bee thirsting for sweets was ever hovering round the lotus feet of Rama. I reverence too the lotus feet of Lakshman, cool, comely and source of delight to their worshippers, whose glory is as it were the standard for the dis-play of Rama's pure emblazonment. Thou who to remove the terrors of the world didst become incarnate in the form of the thousand-headed serpent for the sake of the universe, be ever propitious to me. O son of Sumitra, ocean of compassion, storehouse of perfection. I how also to Ripusúdan (i.e., Satrughna), the generous hero, Bharat's constant comnanion; and to the conqueror Hanuman, whose glory has been told by Rama himself.

The calumniator was a waherman, whose wife had gone away, without asking his permission, to her father's house and had stayed their days. On her return her busheof refused to take her in, saying—1 Days of their lates and the same to like the same the same to like the same to li

Soratha 4.

The Son of the Wind, of profound intelligence, like a consuming fire in the forest of vice, in whose heart Rama, equipped with how and arrows, has established his home.

Chaurdi 18

The monkey lord, the king of bears and demons, Angad and all the monkey host, I throw myself at the benign feet of them sil, for though contemptible in appearance they yet found thisms. I worship all his faithful servants—whether birds, heasts, gods, men or demons—all his outelfish adherents. I worship Sakadeva, Sanat-kumárs, Nárad, and the other signe of excellent renown, putting my head to the ground anderying: 'Ny lords, be graenous to your servant.' I propitiste the lotts feet of Janak's daughter. Jankt, matther of the world, best beloved of the Fountsim of Mercy; by whose grace I may attain to unclouded intelligence. Again in heart, in word and deed I worship the all-worthy feet of Raybunkish; the glance of whose lotte eree, his an arraw from the bow, rejoices his votartes by destroying all their midfortunes.

Doha 22.

As a word and its meaning are inseparable, and as a wave cannot be distinguished from the water of which it is composed, the difference being only in the name; so with Hama and Sita, the refuge of the distressed, whom I adore.

Chaupet 19.

I adare the name of Rims as dorree by Raghular," the owner of all light, whether of the fire, or the soun, or the moon; substance of the triume god; vital breath of the Voda; the pavisoline; the incomparable the source of all good; the Krest spell mattered by Mahiders and enjoined by him as focusary to adration eren at Kisi. By conferring its lower, Gance obtain the first place among the godd; thy its

I For there are two other Lamas beaties Laws schon to de farout and bale some

I decoming the largest the gath are a lagest egan sequence that it is a which of the smooth like a wanted the pressure. I write the largest factorized that the after largest like the smooth start from a final large transition of a largest variety of the largest largest power, though he mattered it backwarte, he gent post Valorika ettained to parity, by its repetition, after she had beard from Sixa that it was equal to a thousand names, Bharkan was able to join her harden I) swhile he, Mahindexa, in his delight in beatyling her simple faith, seathed the memon, making that considered of her sea the organization of his own long. Agtin, it was by the power of this came that the joient swallowed by Mahadera was converted into anotheris.

Dad "1

Devotion to Rama is for the faithful Tulu Dis Like the cainy season for the rice-field; the two glorious consenuts in Hamas name are like the months of Siwan and Bhadon

(7. mgd. 20.

Two sweet and gracious willshies, the eyes all were of the cool, easy to remember, a stretying every wish, again in this world and felicity at the next; most arlightful to atter, to hear, or to remember; as dery to Tolis' is the inseparable Rama and Lukshima. My love is influed as I peak the discussion of the soul of man; twin bothers like Nara and Narayan; preservers of the world; redeemes of the elect; bright jewels in the errs of Leauteous Faith; pursuad beneficient as the sun and the mono! like sweetness and contentment; the inseparable attributes of ambrosia; like the tortoise and serpent, supporters of the world; like the beardotted of a pious soul; and as sweet terthe longue as Hari and Balaram were sweet to Jasodá.

Dohá 24.

Like a royal umbrella and jewelled diadem over all the other letters of the alphates some the two consonants in Rama's name.²

2 The allusion is to the form the letters r and m take when written above the line

^{1.} One day when Sira Jad Shithed eating he called to ble wife Jérrill come and side her food/foo before it got cold. She pleaded that set had not yet finished repeating, according to her daily wont, the thousand same of Vahno wheregous her heatand nativeted her that it would suffice if she said the mere num of Rama quere, for that had as mith various Asial the thousand. She at once believes hip and complicit and the god was so pleased at her ready faith that in her boron? he assemed the Arthandri, or ball main, ball female form.

Chaupái 21.

A name may be regarded as equivalent to what is named. the connection being such as subsists between a master and servant. Both name and form are shadows of the lord, who, rightly understood, is unspeakable and uncreated. They are sometimes wrongly distinguished as greater and less, but the wise will understand my explanation of the difference between them. See, now, the form is subordinate to the name. for without the name you cannot come to a knowledge of the form; if the very form be in your hand, still without knowing the name it is not recognized ; but meditate on the name without seeing the form, and your soul is filled with devotion. I The mystery of name and form is unspeakable and cannot be told, but delightful to those who have intuition of it; the name acting as a witness between the material and immaterial form of the deity, and being a guide and interpreter to both.

Doká 25.

Place the name of Rama as a jewelled lamp at the door of your lips and there will be light, as you will, both inside and out.

Chaupdi 22.

As his tongue repeats this name, the accetic wakes to life, his thoughts free from passion and all detached from the world; he enjoys the incomperable felicity of God, who is unspeakable, anblembled, without either name or form. Those who would understand mysteries, by repeating this name understand them; the religious who repeat this name

¹ To the European reader all this panegyrie of the Divine name will probably at first upth appear extravagent and about Ent from the flunds point of view it is resonable enough, and wistas wetachs may be paralleled by many smallar expressions in the writings of Catholic theologisms, as for example the following:—
Sanças opatio, hereis ad legendum, facilis ad tenendum, dulcin as cognandum, fortiz ad protegentum — Thes. a Eemps.

No sanctissian comine, quod quinque literis constat, confert quotidic tenim peccatorities.—P. Pelleri.

Momen tourn devote nominary non potent sine nominants militate —

8 Beneralism

Nomen solum sefficit ad medendem; nam pesse tan efficax nolls sie harri, que ad nomen non cedat continuo.— Beneralis de A. Fancadis Sprittes maligni different, auchte nomine, velot shighe.— S. Bridget.

Omnes demones verentur boc n

elimpione antiona de socialism quit

elimpione antiona de socialism quit

elimpione authorism de socialism quit

elimpione authorism de socialism quit

Gloringon et adminible est nome inner, mortia - N. Bonnersiana.
Nomen Dictum est qualit

Nomen Dictum est qualit

occurrent

absorbed in contemplation, become workers of miracles' and acquire the power of rendering themselves invisible and the like; those who repeat it when burdened with affliction are freed from their troubles and become happy. Thus there are in the world four kinds of Râma-worshippers, all four good, boly, and beneficent; but of these four salls they are the most dear to the lord who wisely rely upon his name. His name is great in the four Vedas and in all the ages of the world, but in this fourth age especially there is no other hope.

Dola 26.

Free from sensual passions and absorbed in devout affection to Ráma, the soul disports itself like a fish in the ambrosial lake of his beloved name.

Chaupdi 23.

The Supreme may be regarded either as unconditioned or as incarnate; under either aspect it is unspeakable, unfathomable, without beginning and without parallel. To my mind the name is greater than both, for it has prevailed to bring both under its sway. My friends must not take this as an exaggeration on my part, for I say it confidently and with sincere devotion. This dual distinction of the Supreme is like the two kinds of fire, which is either potential in the wood or visible externally; each is in itself unapproachable but is easily approached by means of the name; and therefore I say that the name is greater than either Brahm or Rama. For the one immortal, true, centient, complete, and blissful Brahm is all-pervading ; yet though such an unchangeable lord is in our very soul, the whole creation is in slavery and wretchedness, till he is revealed in definite shape, and is energized by the name; as a jewel is not valued till it is so called

I The minacolous powers that can be arreticed by power shinks on evaluation of said lable, are reconcil as eight in number, and set a called a sind, address, grants, 145 lines, profest, problemys, unter, and resulted. These would denie the facility letter, of becoming infinitely many; eith of becoming infinitely july; 30%, of obtaining whatever ministry heavy; eith of becoming infinitely july; 30%, of obtaining whatever ministry heavy; eith of becoming infinitely july; 30%, of obtaining whatever ministry heavy; and a label the supervised in the control of the said of of the said

Doha 27.

Thus the virtue of the name is infinite and transcends the Supreme, and in my judgment is greater than Rama himself.

Chaupdi 24.

From the love that he bore to his followers, Rama took the form of a man and by himself enduring misery secured their happiness. By incessantly and devontly repenting his name, all the faithful may attain to felicity. Rama himself redeemed only one woman, the ascetic's wife! ; but his name has corrected the errors of millions of sinners. To gratify the Rishi Visyamitra. Rama wrought the destruction of Suketu's daughter Taraka with her son Maricha and his army ; but as the sun puts an end to night, so his name has scattered all crime and pain and despair. In his own person Rams broke the bow of Siva, but his glorious name has broken the fear of death?; the Lord bimself restored to life only the forest of Dandakes, but his name has sanctified countless reperations; the son of Ragho destroyed many demons, but his name has destroyed all the evil of the world.

Dold 28

Raghunath conferred immortality on Savari and the volume Jatayut and his other faithful servants; but his name, precious thems of the Vedas, has delivered innumerable wratches.

Chaurde 25.

Rams, as all men know, extended his protection to Sugriva and Vibhishans; but his name has protected

I Abelya, the wife of the Rishi Gantama, having liven enfaced by the prid fairs, was cursed by bee indignant but, and dismod to remain alone solinishtic in the forest for thomasods of years till famus should crosses bed redeem her

² lies in a play upon words which cannot be sewerted in the transbition, I of inches first half of the proof let five word laters in to be taken as a humon of size, while in the second half it means like or rather death, since, around not in Handd liters, all consolvan Lie is morethy a preparation for institute death. Compare Editor's expression — This exercise half of death could be a size of the death of the control of the con-

³ Ibandaha is the mame of the path lead sent mear the Gularart, where

d Tre that laters project the chart of to which with must congress of the history and many project the chart of the function that the chart is recovered to the tent of the second of th countless sapplicants, shiring forth gloriously in the world and Veda. Ráma assembled a host of bears and monkeys, and even then h d no little trouble to build his bridge; his name can dry up the ocean of life; meditate thereon, O ye fatthful. Ráma killed in buttle Rávan and all his family, and returned with Sitat to his own city, a king to Aradh, bic capital, while gods and saints hymned his praise; but his servants, if only they affectionately meditate on his his servants, and officulty in vanquishing the whole army of error, and absorbed in devotion live at ease without even a dream of servary.

Doha 29.

The name is greater than either Brahm or Ráma, and is the best gift of the best giver; this Mahadeva knew when he selected it from the hundred crores² of verses in the Rámáyana.

Chaupdi 26.

By the power of this name the blessed god of ourst attire, even the great Sira, acquired immortality; by the power of this name Sukadera, Sant-kumfar, and all saints, sages, and ascetice have enjoyed heavenly raptures: Nárad too scknowledged its power, himself as dear to Hara and Hari as Hari is dear to the world; by repeating this name Prahlidd, through the Lord's grace, became the crown of the faithful. 3 Dhruvs in his distress repeated the name of Hari, and was rewarded by a fixed and incomparable station in the beavens! ty by meditating on his holy name Hanumán

¹ Sugrava, the monkey chief, as told at full length later on in the poem, assisted Rāma in his scarch for Sita; and Rāma rewarded him by installing him as sowereign of Kushindhyā in the place of his brother Ball. Similarly, Vibbishnan was made king of Lunkā in the room of Rāvan

^{2.} Of these bandeed cores at it said that Shina distributed 28 covers to each of the three words. The one crore that remained core it established the control of the con

³ Prable I, the places and the implore Biranya Kasipu, who was destroyed by Vishnu in the Narenth artiar, was made equal to Indea for life and finding mined with Vishnu

⁴ Dheuva, the sun of Uttanapada, leling slighted by his ateromother, left his bosone with the determination of winning binnell a name in the world. By the addice of the seem Rishi, he decorted himself to the service of Vishous and was finally exalted by the god to the beavens, where he attimes as the pole-stand.

won and kept the affection of Rama; by the power of Harl's name Ajamil' and the elephant and the inrior all three obtained silvation; why further extend the list? not even the incarnte Rama could exhaust it

Dol4 30.

The name of Rama is as the tree of paradise, the centre of all that is good in this wicked world; and whoever meditates upon it becomes (ears Tails blas) transformed as it were from a vile hemp-stick into a sweet-smelling tubi plant.

Chourds 27.

In all four ages of the world ; in all time, past, present, or lature; in the three spheres of earth, beaven and help, soy creature that repeats this name becomes blessed. This is the verdict of the Veds, Poréaus and all the saints—that love of Mann is the fruit of all virtue. In the first age, contemplation; in the second age, storifice via the Dvépar age, temple-worship was the appointed projitation; but in this vile and impure iron age, where the soul of man flotat like a fish in an ocean of sia, in these fearful times; the name is the only tree of life, and by meditating on it all commotion is stilled. In these will days neither good deeds, nor plety, nor spiritual wisdom is of any avail, but only the same of Rifiam; his name is as it were the wisdom and

The 8th chapter of the 11th Skandba gives of the penitent promittute, Progoda.

^{1.} According to the bistory given in the 6th Nandtha of the 8th Nandtha Alphini was a Frahman of Kananj, of most disabilite and shouldned the By a hoppy chance the youngest of the ten annu whom he had by a prestitute was named Kananyan, and the father when are he point of "each happend to Namono him to his add. Dat the post Nayan, those castally inviked, himself the state of the post of the post of the demonstration of the state of the post of the demonstration of the state of t

The story of the slephant is given in the 8th Standhard the same Parlian An alligator has teamed him by the four which belating, and should be story, and story the start and the standard for the enemy, find superantly for 2,000 years he was marked to fit humself on him enemy, pilled superantly for 2,000 years he was marked to fit has marked to be entirely to the standard the standard to the standard that the standard the standard that the standard that the standard that the enemy that the standard that the creations must be the committed in presence starteness and that God silms could standard that the standard that the might of Hanuman to expose and destroy the Kalanemi-like! wiles of the wicked world.

Doha 31.

As marsinh was manifested to destroy the enemy of heaven, Hiranya kasipu, and protect Prahlad, so is Rama's name for the destruction of the world and protection of the pious.

Chaupdi 28.

By repeating this name, whether in joy or in sadness, in action or in repose, bliss is diffused all around. Meditating upon it and bowing my head to Raghunath, I compose these lays in his honour ; he will correct all my defects, whose mercy is mercy inexhaustible. Thou art my good lord, I thy poor servant; bear this in mind and graciously protect me. The world and scripture alike declare these to be the characteristics of a good master, that he bears prayer and acknowledges affection. Rich or poor, villager or citizen, learned or pulearned, pure or impure, good poet or had poet, all according to their ability extel their king as being good, amiable, and gracious, lord of incomparable compassion; and he hears and accepts their honest attempts, recognizing in their words both devotion and a measure of ability. This is the way with earthly kings, and Rams is their crown; he is satisfied with simple piety, though in one who is duller and feebler of intellect even than I am-

Dold 32-33.

The merciful Ráms will regard the love and zest of his poor servant, he who made a ship out of rock and wise ministers out of monkeys and hears; although I am a byword, and every one says Ráma is exposed to ridicale, in that he, being such a lord, has such a servant as Tulsi Dás.

Chaupai 29.

My presumption is indeed very and and villainous enough to disgust hell itself; I am quite sware of this and tremble

I Silazem was the nucle of Rivan, who commissioned him to till Rusmina. Accordingly, he assumed the guide of according the Grand and a maje hermitane, where he was soon after which he Hannam. The latter accepted the hospitality of the high on as he took him to be, and for excepted the hospitality of the high on as the took him to be, and for the state of the second that the state, it was secred by a crow-like, which, however, he soon silled; when the second that the second to think of it; but Rimin ower dreamt of taking notice. The hord listened and with his own eyes attentively considered my faith, and thereapon applanded my devout intention of the hording my story is spoilt by the telling. Rimin is satisfied and accounts it good, since the will is good. The lord is not mindful of a chance fault, but on every occasion he considers the heart. Thus the very crime for which he like a buntsman killed Ball was in turn the sin of Sugriva, and again of Wibbishan; but in their case Rams uld not dream of country, but thenoured them both at his meeting with Bharat and commended in one court.

23

Dalid 34 - 36.

The monkeys too that ecrambled up in the boughest the tree under which the lord sat, even these he held dear as binself: anys Tulai, there is no master so generous as Raims. O Risms, thy goodness is pool to all, and if so, then good to Tabis also. Thus decisring my merits and defects and again bowing my head to all, I proceed to tell the glorious sets of litegabular, by the sound of which all the sin of the world is effaced.

Chaujdi 30.

Now listen all in friendly wise while I relate the story as I have heard it as it was commonicated by Ysiparaklya to the great ange Ilharadwaji. It was first of all composed by Siva and graciously revealed to Uma, and again declared to Kika-libuundi, known to be chief among the votaries of Kaina. From him Yajanvalkya reviewed it and he sective it to Ilharadwaji. These litteners and reciters were of equal virtue and that an equal insight intel listri's sportive sections. Their intellect comprehended all time, as it were a plom in the pain of the hand. Other intelligent totaries of Harsi have also in different ways heard, understood and rooken.

Dold 37-38.

As for myself, I heard the story from my moster at Sukar Abet (i.e., Soron), not understanding it, when I was quite a child and had no sense. How could such a dult

3 & 8

I storm, the modern same, is a computer of bulers g amount of a record of the control of the con creature, being both ignorant and exten up with we impurities, understand so mysterious a legend and a dish between such sage interlocutors?

Change 31.

But my master repeated it time after time, till at let I understood as much as could be expected; and I now it down in the vulgar tongue for the Letter comprehen of my ideas; with a heart inspired by Hari and using the little sense, judgment and ability that I possess. story that I have to tell clears my own doubts as if c every other error and delusion, and is a raft on which cross the ocean of existence. The story of Rama i resting-place for the intellect; a universal delig destroyer of wordly impurity ; an antidote to the venom passion ; a match to enkindle the fire of wisdom ; the com identy in this tronuge ; an elixir to make good men imm tal ; a terrestrial stream of nectar ; a destroyer of death snake to devour toad-like error; the annihilator of hell, I as Parvati on behalf of gods and spints annihilated : stmv of demons; like as Lakshmi was born of the sea. conceived in the assembly of exists; immoves ble as the ext that supports all the weight of orestion; like the Jamus to put to shame the angel of death; like Kasi, the saviour all living creatures; as dear to Rama as the pure tulsi; dear to Tulsi Das as his own heart's desire ; as dear to Si us the daughter of Mount Mekal (i.e., the Narmada), bestoer of all perfection and pro-perity : like Aditi, gracio mother of all the gods ; the perfect outcome of love as devotion to Raghubar

Dold 39.

The story of Rama is as the river Mandakini and a god intention like Mount Chitrakut, while sincere affection the forest where Rama and Sita disported themselves.

Chaupdi 32.

The legend of Růma is like the delectable withing atone or as a fair jewel for the brital adormment of saintly wit dom; ill sperfection is the jey of the whole world, frangh with the bleachogs of vittee, westles, and eternal salvation a true teacher of wisdom, assetticism and spiritual contempla tion; like the physician of the gods to heal the Lestic diseases of life; the very parent of devation to Sita son Iláma; the seed of all holy owns and practices; the destroys of sin, of pain, and of sorrow; our guardian in this world and the next : the Prime Minister and the General of Kingly Counsel; a very Agastyal, to drink up the illimitable ocean of desire ; a young lion in the forest of life to attack the wild elephants of lust, anger, and sensual impurity; as dear to Siva as the presence of a highly honoured guest; as an abundant shower to quench the fire of meanness ; a potent spell against the venom of the world ; effacing from the lorebead the deep brand of evil destiny ; dispelling the darkness of error like the rays of the sun ; like a shower on a ricefield refreshing the aridity of prayer; like the tree of paradise granting every desire ; like Hari and Hara, accessible and gracious to all servants; like the stars in the clear antumn sky of the noet's mind; like the richness of life enjoyed by Rama's votaries; like the perfect felicity that is the reward of virtue ; like the assembly of the faithful in benevolence and composure ; like a swan in the pure lake of the believer's soul : like the abundant flood of Ganga's parifying stream.

Doka 40-41.

Háma's perfect merit is like a strong fire to consume the dry wood of soliism and heresy, evil practices and worldly deseit, bypocrisy and infidelity. It is not a relike the rays of the full moon that give pleasure to all, but a specially consoling to the souls of the pions like the lotus and the actiat?

Chaurái 33.

All the questions that Bhaváni asked, with Sankaraireplies therein, I now proceed to give in substance, with agreeable diversity of style. No one is to be astonished if he should happen out to have beard any particular legged before. A philosopher, on hearing for the first time any marvellors acts, will feel no sucprise, reasoning thus with hissalf; it know well that there is no limit in the world to the stories about fidms, for be his in various forms become learnest, and verses of the Rámáyana are some thousand millions in number; his plorious acts are of myriad diversity.

I had gustya was one day worshipping by the sca-sife, a wave came and washed away some of his altar furniture, whereupon in three draughts be drank the whole occas, day.

and have been sung by sages in countless ways. So indulge no doubts, but listen reverently and devoutly.

Dala 49

Rama is infinite, his perfections infinite, and his legends of immeasureable expansion; men of enlightened and understanding will therefore wonder at nothing they hear.

Chaurdi 34.

Having in this manner put away all doubt, I place on whose due douts from the lotus feet of my master, and with folded hand-making a general obeisance, that no faul may attach to my telling of the story, and bowing my hear reverently before Siva, I proceed to sing of Riam's excellent glory. In this Sambat year of 1631, I write with my head at Haris feet, on I caseday the 9th of the sweet month of Chait, at the city of Avath, on the day when the scriptures say I Kima was born; when the spirits of all high places there assemble, with demons, serpents, birds, mensints, and gods, and there offer homage to Itagliunstitt, while the cnlightened keep the great birthday festival and hymn I Kima's high glory.

Doha 43.

Pious crows bathe in the all-purifying stream of the Sarjú and murmur Rama's name, while his dark and besutiful form is imprinted on their hearts.

Chaurái 35.

The Vedas and Perfans declare that in is cleaned by the more sight or touch of this holy stream as well as thy bathing in or drinking of it. Its immeasurable grander is indescribable even by the pure intelligence of Saravati. The city, exalting to Risma's heaven, beautiful, colobrated through all worlds, is so all-portifying that counters as the number of animate species that result from the four modes of birth, yet every individual that is freed from the body at Avadh is free for ever. Knowing it to be in ever tal ir both measure are catended.

^{1.} This has note been grasped on all ables, nor has ever been entraced cutting by the mind of man, and no mean gaze attentively much street, which, is always old, without discovering these because that are always now. These world of Alp. Debungs express in abstract form the very sense than that the Hadd post has presented in the concern. The concern control of the property of the concern of the concern control of the control of the concern control of the control of way charming, a bestower of success and a mins of suspicionenes, I there made a beginning of my sacred song, which will destory in those who hear it the mad phrensy of lost; its mere name—lable of Ráma's acti-serves to taftrah the car, while the send like an alephant escaping from a forest on fire with lost, planges into it and zeins relief; delight of the sages, as composed by Samblan, holy and beautiful; contaming the three ill conditions of sin, sorrow and want; potting an end to the veri practices and imparities of the wicked world; first made by Mahádeva and buried in deep lake of his own sout till at an earpicious moment he declared it to Umá; thus Sira looking into his own soul and rejoicious gave it the excellent name of Ráma charit-mánas!. And this is the blessed legand that I repeat: hear if, good people, reverently and attentively.

Dold 44.

Now meditating upon Umā and upon him who has a buil emblazoned on his stendard (i.e. Mahādeva) I explain the connection, showing how it is a lake and in what manner it is formed, and for what reason it has spread through the world?

Chaupdi 36.

By the blessing of Sambbu a bright idea has come into the poet Talsi's mind regarding the Ridmetharite-mans, which I will state as well as I can, subject to the correction of the poet and the state of the state of ¹ From this it will be seen that the name which Tolus 19th inswelf gave to his press was on? the Enhayana, but the Ridoc-Isati-mana, a mane, which may be interpreted to mean either the lake or the soul of Ridock acts. In the standards how translated the word in first taken to the one sense and then in the other, and as there is on English worl with the same double Rigolackian, nonce obscurit js unavoidable.

² The words may also bear the following secondary meaning, I relate the whole blatter, showing how the great each become invariate, and why it duelt to the world.

collected in the channel supplied by the ence, and i late the lake of the soul fill it and then settle down mently, cool, beautiful and refreshing.

Dold 45

This pure and holy lake has four beautiful gldd the four charming dialogues contrived by divine wislor

Chaujdi 37.

The seven Books are its beautiful flights of steps, the eyes of the soul delight to look upon the unqu and unsulfied greatures of Raghapati may be des as its clear and deep expanse; the glory of Rams and S its ambrosial water; the similes as its pretty wavelets stanzas as its beautiful lotus beds; the elegance of esion as lovely mother-of-pearl; the chhands, sorathde complets as many-coloured lotus flowers : the icompa sense, sentiment, and language as the pollen, filament fragrance of the lotus; the exalted solion as best swarms of bees; the sage moral reflections as swans rhythm, involutions, and other poetical artifices as di graceful kinds of fish; the precepts regarding the four of life, the wise savings, the thoughtful judgments, the styles of composition, the prayers, penance, abstra and asceticism, of which examples are given, are all be ful living creatures in the lake; eulogies on the fait the saints and the boly name are, like flocks of water-bi the religious audience are like circling mango groves, their faith like the spring season; the expositions of all phases of devotion and of tenderness and generosity like the trees and canopying creepers; self-denial and yows are their flowers, and wisdom their fruit; the love Hari's feet as the sound of the Vedas; and all other sto and episodes as the parrots and cuckees and many k of birds.

Dold 46.

The hearer's emotion is some grove, garden or parte where sportive birds symbolise his delight and Piety gardener pours a stream of devotion from the water-pot his eyes.

¹ The nine poetical styles for Indian Muses) are the Sringarras, or enthe Háryaras, or comic; the Karunkras, or elegiac; the Birras, or beroic Randraras, or tragic; the Bharbankras, or melancholic; the Vibbarsa prestific; the Shadr ras, or dijlactic; and the Adbbulyas, or sensationa

Chaupdi 38.

Those who diligently recite these lays are like the vigilant guardiance the lake; the men and women who reverently hear them, these excellent people are like its owners. Sectual wretches are like the owners and crows that have an part in such a pond not ever come near it; for here are no prorised and seductive stories like smalls, frogs and coum on the water, and therefore the lustful crows and greedy crass, it they do come, are disappointed. There is much diffusily in getting to this lake, and it is only by the favour of Hams that any one recebes it. For had company makes much steepness and difficulty in the road; their evil sayings are so many tigers, lions and serpents; the various entanglements of domestic affairs are vast insurmountable mountains; senural desires are like a dense forest full of wild delation; and unsound reasoning is a raping flood.

Dahá 47.

For those who have not the support of faith, nor the company of the saints, nor fervent love for Raghunáth, for them this lake is very hard of access.

Chaupdi 39.

Again, if any one laboriously makes his way to it but " becomes over-powered by sleep and feverishness, strange torpor and numbness settle on his soul, and though he is on the spot, the luckless wretch makes no ablution. Having neither bathed in the lake nor drunk of it he goes away in his pride, and when some one comes to inquire of him he abuses it But no difficulties deter those whom Rama regards with affection. They reverently bathe, are relieved from the fierce flames of sin, sorrow, and pain, and being sincerely devoted to Rama will never abandon it. If, my friend, you would bathe in this lake, be diligent to keep company with the good. As for myself, having thus with the mind's eye contemplated it, my poetical faculty has become clear and profound, my heart swells with joy and rapture and overflows in a torrent of ecstatio devotion. My song pours on like a river flooded with R' 't renown : like the river Sarju, fountain piety and theology for its two fair bolding the plous soul (or born of the "" away all worldl.

Doha 48.

The three kinds of hearers in the assembly are lik towns, villages, and hamlets on the river-side; while saints are like the incomparable city of Avadh, full that is auspicious.

Chaurdi 40.

The beautiful Sarja, as it were the glory of Râm united with the Gauges of devotion; and the magnif river Son, like the warlike power of Râma and his bro has joined them as a third. Between the two, the Ga stream of devotion shines clear in its wisdom and self-con while the combined flood destroying the triple cure humanity is absorbed in the mighty ocean of very RT. The united stream of the Mânas-born Sarja and the Ga purifies the pious listency, while the various tales episodes interspersed here and there are the groves gardens onlist opposite banks; the details of the marriand wedding procession of Umā and Sīva are like innomerable fish in the water; the joy and gludnes's attended Râma's birth are like beautiful swarms of bees the ricele of the lake.

1)ohd 49.

The childish sports of the four brothers are like (goodly lotus flowers; the virtuous king and queen a their court like the bees and water-birds;

Chaupdi 41.

The charming story of Sita's marriage like the brig gleam of the flashing river; the marsy ingenious question like the bosts on the stream; the appropriate and judicio answers like the bostmen; again, the argomentative discosions show like crowding travellers; the wrath of Birigané like the realing torrent; Riamis soft speech like it well-arranged gife; the marriage festivities of Riama as Lakshman like the grateful swell of the tide; the thrill it pleasure that speech through the delighted audinors like the sectatic fessings of the vartoous bathers; the sasphoto typeparations for marking Ham's foreless with the tide like the crowds assemt led on boildys; and like river on it Kalistyiavil coanset, the cause of many calomities.

Dohd 50.

Like prayers and sacrifices effectual to remove every misfortune are Bharat's virtuous acts; while the cortuptions of the world and sinful men and slanderers are like the scam on the water and the cranes and crows.

Chaupát 42.

This river of glory is beautiful in esob of the six season, britan and high season in the state of the marriage of Siva with the daughter of the snowy monatains is like the winter: the glad rejocing at the Lord's birth we like the dewy season; the account of the preparations for Riama's wedding are like the delightful and supplious pring; Itiana's intolerable bankment is like the bot weather, and story of the rough journeyings like the state of the state o

Dold 51.

Their looks and words at meeting, their mutual love and laughter, the true fraternal affection of the four brothers, are as the water's sweet odour.

Chaupát 43.

My soppliant address and self-depreciation and modesty correspond to the singular lightness of good water, which is anything but a defect. This marvellors lymph works its effect by the mere hearing, quenching the thirst of desires and cleaning the soul of impurity; it resurcitates tree love to Rúma and puts an end to all the sin and sorrow of the would, draining lite of its weariness; comforting with true comfort; destroying sin and pain and poverly and erro; dispelling leut and passion and phrenay and infatuation, and promoting pure intelligence and detachment from the world. Those who reverestly drink or battle in this stream, from their soul is effaced all sin and distress; those who do not cleanes their heart in it are wratches whom the world has ruined, turoing book, hapless creatures, like a panting deer that has seen a river in a misar!

I The six Hodu seasons to which allowin is here made are Hemant, whiter; Nisir, the early spring. Basant the spring; dishim, the hot weather; Varda, the rains; and Jarma, the antismu.

Dold 59 - 51

Thus I have declared to the best of my ability the virtues of this excellent water, and having plunged my own sod in it, and ever remembering Blazani and Sackara, I proceed with my delectable story. I will first repeat to substance the original conversation, with the questions problem to the original conversation with the questions by by Bharadvaji when he found the Mani Vajnavalkya; an laying my soul at the lotts ret of Reginqual and the ecouring bis patronage, I will sing the meeting of the twe great saints and their amplicious discourse.

Chaufdi 44.

At Prayig lives the sint Bharadraja, deroted beyon, measure to Hama's feet, a self-restrained ascetic full of sobriety and benerolence, supremely skilled in divine knowledge. In the month of Magh, when the sun enters the sign of Capricora, every one visits this chief of holy place; gods, demirgods, Lianarra, and men in troops, all deroutly bathe in the triple flood and worship the lotts feet of Madhava while they have the happiness of tonching the imperishable fig-tree. At Bharadraja's hallowed hermitage—so charming a spot that even the saint loved it—is ever a concourse of seers and sages come to bathe at the holiest of all holy places; and having with gladness performed their ablations at break of day, they converse together on the glories of Hari.

Dohá 55.

Discussing the nature of the deity, the kinds of religious observance and the classification of primordial entities; and declaring faith in God to be the epitome of wisdom and suiritual delichment!

I This couplet ment up the characteristics of the pencepal prismal filling hallowage with the Valenta using child; accorded with an interest deficiel as, Braken Jjanen, an inquiry into kenature of God; the Mindistribution as prismal or translates and Verio delectrone; the banklay a region of translates and Verio delectrone; the banklay a region of the prismary perion, or electronic, and of high-translates delectronic and the subject of the prismary perion, or electronic, and of high-translates delectronic between the prismal prismal period in the subject of the prismal period in the period

Chaupdi 45.

After thus bathlog every day that the sun is in Capricorn, they again return each to his own cell, and every year there is a similar rejoicing when the saints meet for the annual ablution. On one occasion, when the bathing time was over, and all the holy men had left, Bharadvigh chaped by the feet and detained to supermaly wise saint Yajavankya, and having revently laved his lotes feet and seated him on a pre-eminent throne, he with religious cere-may extelled the saint's glory, and finally thus addrest him in mildest of tones, "Sir, I have a great doubt, while in your greap are all the mysteries of the Ved; I am afraid and abhamed to speak, but if I speak not, I lose a great eportunity.

Dold 56.

This, sir, is a maxim of all the saints, and is also declared by the Vedas and Paránas, that there is no sound wisdom in his breast who conceals aught from his ghostly lather.

Chaupái 16.

Remembering this, I lay bare my folly—take pity, my ford, on your faithful servant and dispel it. The might of Rámás name is immeasurable; so tell the saiets, the Praéass sou the Vedic commentaries; is he immortal Sambhu, who is the Lord Sira, the perfection of wisdom and goodesse, is ever repeating it; though all the four groups of soinstate beings in the world attain to salvation if they die in his city Ráa, yet O king of saints, it is by the virtue of Rámás name; and therefore Sira in his comparsion enjoins its use. I ake dy ou, any lord, who is this Rámar De gracious enough to instruct mo. There is one Ráma, the prince of Avadh, whose acts are known throughout the world who suffeced infinite distress by the loss of his wife, and waxing wrath dew Rávan in battle.

Dohá 57.

Is it this Rama, my lord, or another, whose name Tripurari is ever repeating?. Ponder the matter well and tell me, O wisest and most faithful of men.

Chaupdi 47.

Tell me the whole history in full, my master, so that my overpowering perplexity may be solved." Said Yajnavalkya with a smile,—"All the glory of Haghopati is kno gen are a votary of his in heart, word and deed; should you strategem. Whiting to hear the most of Ham's schierements, you have questioned his affectation of great simplicity. Litten then, my devont attention while I repeat the fair legend, we quishes every monstrous error, as dread Deri the demon Mehichkard, but which is drank in by at the light of the mon to the deads was rangested by Bhaváni, Mahádera expormatier:

Mohd 58.

And I now, as best I can repeat their connothing both its time and occasion; on hearing it, t all difficulties vanish.

Chang de 48.

Once upon a time, in the second age of the Sambhu visited the Bithi Agastya; with him went the of the world, the Linkhol Bhaváni. The bermit meaner, for he recognized them as the sovereignes of the and recited the story of Rama, with which Maha delighted. The bermit then asked him about true Hari and Santhu instructed him, for he saw hi deserving. In such converse the mountain-lard passed some days there, but finally took his leare and home with the daughter of Dakha. Now at there had become incarnate, in the family of Rasha, destroyer of the burdens of the world, who at his word sorrowfully left the throne and wandered, and though he was, in the Dandaks forest.

Dol.4 59.

Siva kept pondering as he went,—'How can I is sight of him? for every one knows that the lord has incarnate secretly; if I visit him, every one will kn he is.'

Serathé 5.

In Sankara's heart was a great tumplt, but Sati comprehend the mystery; says Tulsi, the hope interview filled his soul with agitation and his eymistfulness.

Chaupdi 49.

'Mkwu has obtained the boon of death at the hands of man only and the lord has willed Brahmá's word to come trac. If I do not go to meet him, I shall ever regret it is that all that he could do be could not hit upon a plan. At the very time that he was thus lost in thought, the ten-headed Riwan, taking that he was thus lost in thought, in the most assumed the form of a false deer and treacherously in his folly carried off. Situ, not knowing the lord's great power. When Riams returned with his brother from the chase and saw the empty hermitage his ayes filled with tears; like a mortal man distressed by the loss of his mistress, he wanders through the forest in earch of her, he and his brother; and he who knows neither union nor breavement musilested all the pangs of separation.

Dold 60.

 Rama's ways are most mysterious; only the supremely wise can comprehend them; the dull of soul and the sensual imagine something quite different.

Chaupdi 50

Then it was that Sambhu awu Râum, and great joy access to his soul. It is says were Silled with the visition of the most beautiful, but it was no fitting time to make himself known, and he passed on exclaiming: 'Usil, Sporeum Being, Telesmer of the world.' But as he went on his way with Sai, his whole body thrilled with delight; and in Sait's soul, when he observed her lord's emotion, a great doubt arons,—'To Sankars, the universally adored and sovereign lord, gold, men and saints all how the head; yet he his made obscience to this prince, sainting him as the Surpersen God, and is so euraptured with his beauty that it is only to-day he has

Dold 61.

What I the omnipresent and unbegotten God, the creator, who has neither parts nor passions, and is no respecter of Persons, whom not even the Veda can comprehend!, has he taken the form of a man?

¹ The reference is to such texts as the following in the Upstart & From whom words are back, together with the mul , not reach as him, if a time, II, 3). "The goes goes not further, no spec h, no smind? (Kens, II, 3). "Chimbandha, margachatha, if Mandatas, 2]. The proceed of Carnelland and the state of the state of

Chaurdi 51.

According to what Siva rrys, though Vishnu in heaven's behalf assumes a human shape, he remains all-wise 1 yet here, as if quite at lowe, he is hunting for his wife, this founds of wisdom, this lord of Lak-luni, this wanquisher of demons. Still Sambhu's word cunnot be faire, nor can his knowledge be gainsid. Thus an infinite doubt has come into my mind, and there is no way of solving it. Although Bhavain did not speak out, Mahideva can read the heart and know her thoughts, and said,—"Litten to me, Sait; you are jost like a woman, but you should not entertain these doubts; this is that Râma, my special patron, whose story was sung by the Rishi Agastya; in whom I exhorted the saint to have faith, and who is ever worshipped by seers and sages.

Chhand 2.

Seers and sages, saints and hermits, fix on him their reverent gaze, And in faint and trembling accents Holy Scripture bymes his praise. He, the omnipresent apirit, lord of heaven and earth and hell. To redeem his people, freely has vouchsafed with men to dwell."

Soratha 6.

Though he spoke thus time after time, his words made no impression upon her; and at last Mahadeva, recognizing Rama's deceptive power, smiled and said:

Chaupái 52.

"As the doubt in your mind is so great that it will not leave you till you have put the fact to the test, I will stay here in the shade of this fig-tree till you come back to me, after having evolved some device by which to satisfy your overpowering doubt." So Sati went by Siva's order, saying to herself — 'Come now, what shall I do?' while Sambho reflected, — 'There is mischief in store for Sati; her doubts will not yield to my argument; truly no good can ever heroght about against the will of sta; whatever Rama has ordained will come to pass, so why spin out any longer discussion?" So saying, he began the repetition of Haris name, while Sati drew night to the Lord of grace.

Dohá 62.

After many an anxious thought she assumed the form of Sits and went and stand in the way where the king of heaven was coming.

Chaupdi 53.

When Lakshman saw her in her disguise, he was much satonished and perpiert. Whe as a be was, he could say nothing, but discreatly switted for the revelation of the lord He, the beavenly king, described the deceit; for he sees all things slike and knows them, the all-wise lord Riman, the mere thought of whom district, the all-wise lord Riman Sati attempted to deceive—see how covered. The tween bim Sti attempted to deceive—see how the same through a state of the same showing the same show the same show

Dohá 63.

When she heard these simple but profound words, a great awe came upon her and she returned to Mahádova, full of fear and distress.

Chaupai 54.

"I would not listen to Sankara, but must go and expose my folly to Ráma; now what answer can I give?" Her distress as most grievous. Then Ráma, perceiving her veration, manifested in part his glory, and as Sati went on her way he beheld a marvellous vision; in front of her were Ráma, Sita and Lakshman; when again she locked beck, there too she saw the Lord with his brother and Sita in beauteons apparel; whichever way she turned her eyer, there was the lord entbroned with saints and learned doctors ministering to him. Innumerable Siras and Brahmás and doing homage; all the host of heaven with their different stributes.

Dohd 64.

Sati too and Sarasvati and Lakshmi in marvellous multiplicity of form, according to the various appearances assumed by their lords, Brahmá, Vishnuand Mahádeva.

Chaupdi 55.

Each separate wision of Rāms was attended by all the gods and their wires, and by the whole animate creation gods and their wires, and by the whole animate creation with all its multitudinous species. But while the adort gods appeared in diverse dressev, there was no diversity of form in Rāms. Though she sum many Rāms, and with him an oft-repeated Site, it was always the same Rahma, the same Lakshman, and the same Site. Sait was awe-striken as she gazed: with fluttering heart and unconscious frame she closed her eyes and sank upon the ground. When again she looked up, she saw nothing, and oft howing her head at Hama's feet, she returned to the spot where Mahideva was waiting for her.

Dola 65.

When she drew near, he emiled and ask if all were well, saying,—'Tell me now the whole truth, how did you put him to the test?'

Chaupdi 56.

Sati remembered the glory of the lord and in her awe concealed the truth from Sivra, saying: 'O sir, I tried no test, but like you simply made obeisance. I was confident that what you said could not be false.' Then Sankara perceived by contemplation and understood all that Sati had done, and bowed to the might of Rama's delastive power, which had been sent forth opt a lying speech into Satismouth. 'The will of heaven and fate are strong'; thus he reflected, ingreat distress of mind; 'as Sati has taken Sitz's form, if now I treat her as my wife, my past devotion will be all cancelled, and it will be a sin to me.

Doha G6.

My love is too great to be forgotten, yet to indulge it is criminal.' He uttered not a word aloud, but in his heart was sore distress.

Chaupái 57.

At last, having bowed his head at Ráma's feet and mediated on his name, he thus resolved and made a vow is his mind,—'So long as Sati remains as he is now, I will never touch her.' With this firm determination be turned bounwards, repeating his Ráma rossry, and as he went there was a jubilant or you in the besree,—'Glory to thee, Mahádéra, for thy stanneh devotion; who other but thou, O lord most streng in faith, would make such a vow ?' Sit was trouble when she heard the heavenly roice and tremblingly saked when she heard the heavenly roice and tremblingly saked tow.' But though she saked once and again be told her not.

Dolld 67.

Then she guessed of herself,—'The all-wise has discovered it all, though I attempted to deceive him; silly and senseless woman that I am.'

Sorathd 7.

Water and milk if mixed together are both sold as milk; but see how like the union is to that of lovers; the introduction of a drop of acid, or of a lie, at once causes a separation.

Chaupdi 58.

Deep in thought and reflecting on what she had done, as words could express her infinite sorrow, and she kept saying to best.—The gracious but impenentrable Sira hat not openly mentioned my offence, but my lord has abandoned me. This disturbed in soul by Sankara's straness at thicking of her sin, she could say nothing, but all the more smooldered within like a fornace. When Mahdorn as her so sorrowful, he began to amuse her with pleasant sites, relating various legands all the way till be came to Kailas. Then recalling his vow, he scatted himself under a figure of the statistical of contemplation and by an immediate control of all his members passed into a long and unbroken

Dold 68

There Sati dwelt in Kailás, sorrowing grievously; not a soal knew her secret, but each day that she passed was like an age.

Chaupái 59.

Ever growing more sick at heart, "When shall I emerge iron this sea of trouble? I who put a slight upon Ráma at dook my hasbaud's word to be a lie. The Creator has repaid me and has done as I deserved. Now, O God, think out thus within thyself that I can live without Sankara.

by Literally teached, the above passage would stand thus ;—"Tribiaing Petraling that Stati was dealer and the state of t

The anguish of my beart is beyond words; but I take comfort when I remember Rims, whom men call the lord of compassion, and when the Velst kymn as remover of distres. Him I explicate with folded hands. May this body of mine he specified voluted. As my lore for Sir is undergreat in thought, word and deed, and as his word cannot fail.

Del 4 69.

Do thou, O impartial lord, hear my prayer and specify device a plan by which I may die without pain and avoid this intolerable calamity."

Chaufdi 60.

Thus sorrawing and weighed down by griesous and unterable pain, the royal ludy had passed $7,000 years, when the immortal Sambha awoke from his trance and began to report lidama's name. Then Sati perceived that he had returned to consciousness and west and howed berself at his feet. He gave her a seat in his presence and began reciting the divine praises. Now at that time Daksha was reigning, and the Creator seeing him to be thoroughly fit had made him a king of kings. But when he ad obtained great dominion he waved exceeding proble Never was a man born into the world whom kingship did not intoxicate.

Doi:4 70.

By the priests' suggestion all began preparing a great sacrifice for Daksha, and the gods who accept oblations were all courteously invited to attend.

Chaupdi 61.

Kinnars, expents, saints, Gandharras, all the god and their wives, except Vishne, Brahma and Mahádera, proceeded thither in their chariots. Sati saw the strangely beautiful procession going through the sky, with the heaven you may be suing a sound the same and the same and the same strain and the same strain would be broken by the sound of it, and she asked glad when she heard of her father's scorifice and thought,—"If my lord will allow me, I will make it an excess rogoing to stay a few days with him." It was such sore pain to leave her lord, that she leng dare not speak, remembering her transgression; but at last with soft and timid voice, overflowing with modesty and suffection, the said:—

Dohd 71

There is great rejoicing at my father's house; with my gracions lord's permission I will duteously go and see it." Chaupdi 62.

Said he,— 'It would please me well; but there is a difficolty, as you have not been invited. Daksha has summoned all his other daughters, but has left you out on account of his quarrel with me, for he took offence at my behaviour in Brahma's court, and that is the reason he slights me to-day. If you go without being asked, there will be loss of temper love and honour. One may go, no doubt, without an invitation to the house of a friend, or master, or father, or confessor; but no good can result from going where an enemy is present. Thus Sambhu warned her over and over again; but fate was too strong, she would not be convinced. Said the lord, - 'To go unasked is not right, as I take it.'

Doha 72.

When Mahadeva saw that no amount of talking world make her stay, he appointed his chief ministers as her escort and allowed her to depart.

Chaupái 63.

When Bhavani came to her father's house, from fear of Daksha no one greeted hear; only her mother met her kindly and her sisters received her with a smile. Daksha uttered not a word of salutation and burned with rage to see her. When Sati went to look at the sacrifice, she could nowhere anything for Sambhu : then Sankara's words came back into her mind, and her heart so burned within her at the slight upon her lord, that the former pain she had felt was not to be compared to her present emotion. There are grievous pains in the world, but nothing so bad as a family slight. The more she thought of it, the more farious she grew, though her mother tried hard to pacify her.

Dollat 73.

This insult to Siva could not be borne; her soul refused to be pacified : and thrusting away from her the shrinking crowd, she cried, in wild accents :-

Chaurdi 64.

"Hear all yo elders of the usembly, who have talked over this slight upon Sankara. Speedily shall ye reap your dee reward, and dearly shall my father rue it. Whenever blasphemy is speken against the sairts, or Simbha, or Vithina, the ordinance is either to task out the blasphemer's tengue. If it is in your power, or else to close your errs and run away. The onleveral spirit, the great tot, Pracket, the father of the 'world, the triend of all, he it is whom my becoulted father has revilled. Therefore this body of mine, begotten of his eved, I hasten to abind on, and impress one my woult the finings of him who hears the moon as his creat and a hull as his device. Asshe thus spoke, the finness consumed her body is great cry of lamentation went up from the whole averable.

Dold 74.

When Sambhu's attendants heard of Sati's death, they began to deatroy all the sacrificial offerings; but the great saint Bhrigu, seeing the destruction, came and saved them.

Chauf di 65.

When Sambhu got the news he sent Birthudra in his wrath, who went and scattered the scerifice and required all the god as they descreed. Daksha's act is famous throughout the world as an example of hostility to Sambhu; and as the story is on well-known. I have told it in brief. Sati at her death asked this bonn of Hart, that in every successive birth she might show her love to Siva. On this account she was born in the form of Párvati, as the daughter of King Himálaya. From the time that she entered the house of the monarch of mountains, it was pervaded by fortune and prosperity, and hermits made their homes all about it, in fit places assigned them by the king.

Dohá 75.

Strange trees of many kinds, with never-failing flowers and fruits, appeared on the beautiful bills, and mines of jewels discovered themselves.

Chaupái 66.

All the rivers flowed with the purest water; inids, deer and bees were all equally joyous; every animal forget is instinctive antipathies and dwell lovingly on the monatain, which was as glorified by Girji's coming as a man is glorified by the spirit of faith. Every day was some new delight in the king's palace, and Brahmá and all the gods vied in singing its praises. On hearing the news, Nárad went to visit the mountain king, who received him with high honour and bathed his feet and led him to a throne. The queen too bowed her head before him and sprinkled the whole house with the water sanctified by his use. Then the king told all his good fortune and summoned his daughter also to the presence and said;—

Dold 76.

"Thou who knowest all time, past, present, or future, and who hast traversed the whole naiverse, tell me, hest of saints, after well considering the matter, what there is good and what had about my daughter."

Chaupai 67.

The sint replied with a smile, in soft but profound word,— "Vor daughter is a mine of parfection, beautiful, amiable and intelligent, whether she be called Umá, or ambitis, or Bhaviani; a maiden with every quality that endears a wife to a husband. Firm as a rock her good fortune, and in her parents are blessed; she shall be worshiped throughout the whole word, and in her service shull be fruition of every desire. Through her name woman shall be caused to walk the path of wifely duty, though it be like the edge of sword. Such, O king, are thy daughter's merits; but you have now to hear two or three drawbacks, A person who has neither beauty nor dignity, without father or mather, an acceptio with no thought for any one.

Doka 77.

A mendicant recluse with matted hair, a celibste with naked body and hideous accountrements—such a one shall be her lord, as I read by the lines on her paim."

Chaupai 68.

When the faiber and mother heard the saint's words, and knew they must be true, they become sad; but Umai rejoiced; nor did Narad even understand, for all seemed affected alike, though the cause was different. All dirigis attendant, and she berrell and her father and her mother state, and she berrell and her father and her mother blains, were trembling and had their eyes full of tears; Bet Umai cherished the saint's words in her heart, aying.

"They caunot be false: and her love for Siva's lotus feet revived; though the doubt remained, how difficult to find

I like is to say, they all shed texts, but the parents wept for sorrow and Uma for por him! But as it was no fitting time for a di suppressed her emotion and went back to it the playmates. They and the parents were diet thought of the saint's infallible utterance, as with an effort, cried aloud,—"O sir, tell me w to devise."

Dohd 78.

Said the saint, -" Hear, O Himsvant, who written on the forehead, not god nor demon, m nor saint, is able to efface.

Chaupái 69.

Yet one mode of escape I will tell you, will be you of heaven may avail. Uma's bridgeroc fallibly be soon a one as I have described to you the bad points that I have escaped I fad to exaccount his vices as victoes. Though Hari take for his couch, the wise hold it no fault in him fire and the son devoor saything they come across therefore calls them blind; though its stream findee pare and in another sullied, no one won Ganges impore. The powerful, my friend, at faultless, like the san, fire or the Ganges.

Dohá 79.

The fool who in the pride of knowledge presume them, saying ' it is the same for a man as for a g be cast into hell for as long as the world lasts'.

Chaupdi 70.

Though they know that wine is made with water, yet asints will never taste it; but the Gang A spinite decrease the period in the XM Deed of the Parkat.

The transposable of states and the daring sets with second in specific being must not be charged as tables specified by the second in specific being must not be charged as tables against the persons. Let up one box a specific being ever own in Howelth again. Being, then, that the saints as monothers as the second a body. Grantel those reasonable limitations which we have been supported by the second as t wherever found, is always pure; and herein is seen the difference between mastery and subjection.\footnote{\text{The Index Sambhais all-powerful and an alliance with him is in every way surpticious. But it is hard to propitiate him yet? If poances is undergone, he is quickly satisfied. If then, your daughter will peattine penance, Tripurais will be able to yet was the lines of fate; and though there may be many bridgerooms in the world, the only one for her is Siva, and none else. He answers prayer, relieves the distress of the faithful, is fall of compassion and adulght to his servant; unless he is propitisted, no one will attain his heart's desire, though he practice infinite reances and authority.\footnote{\text{desire}}

Dohd 80.

So saying, and with his thoughts fixed on Hari. Nárad gave his blessing to the king and added,—' Now fear not, all will turn out well.'

Chaupăi 71.

Having thus spoken, the saint returned to Brabmá's court. Hear now the end of the story how it came about. Mina finding her husband alone said to him,—" My lord, I do not understand the saint's meaning. If the bridgeroom and his position and family are unobjectionable and such a belif your daughter, then conclude the marriage; but if not let her remain a maiden: for, my lord Uma's as dear to me as life. If she does not get a husband worthy of her, every one will say the mountain-king is himself a mere block. Remember this, and so marry her that there may be no hearthering hereafter." With these words she laid her bead at his feet. The king affectionately replied,—"Scorer shall froe bords only in the moon than Naras's word be gain-yild.

Dold 81.

Put away all anxiety, my dear, and fix your thoughts, on the good God who has created Parvati and who will protect her.

Chaupdi 72.

Now, if you have any love for your child, go and thus almonish her. I renance is the means of approach to Sira, and there is no other way of escaping serrow. Narad's

I The meaning is wise, though male of Garges outer itself impute but the danger itself is always give, even though ours may have been justed into it. words are pregions and full of meaning: Mahadeva is in fact be autiful and accomplished; recognize this truth and doubt not; he is in every may irreproachable." When she heved her husbards words she was glad of heart and at once rose and went where Unia was. On seeing the girl berepes filled with tears, and she affectionately took her in her lap and again and ngain pressed her to her broom; but could not say a word for the choking in her throat. Then the mother of the universe, the all-wise Bhaváni, her mother's delight, said softly:—

Dob4 82.

"Listen, mother, to the vision I am about to tell you; a fair and lovely Bráhman prince has thus instructed me:—

Chaupdi 73.

Go, mountain-maid, and practise penance, reflecting that Nárad's words are infallibly trae. Your parents, too, are pleased with the idea, for penance is full of peace and puts an end to pain and sin. By the virtue of penance Virban redeems the world; by the virtue of penance Sambhu destroys it. It is by the virtue of penance that the Great Serpeat supports the burden of the earth, and in short the whole creation, Bhaváni, depends upon penance; do you then practise. On hearing these words her mother was astounded, and sent for the king and declared to him the vision. Then, after consoling her parents in every positionary. Umá in gladness of heart commenced her penance; while they and all their loving dependants grew sad of face, nor could speak a word

Doha 83.

Then came Vedasiras and instructed them all; and when they had heard of Parvati's glory they were comforted.

Chaupái 74.

But Uma, cherishing in her heart the feet of her dear lord went into the forest and began her penance. Though her delicate frame was little fit for soch austerities, she abandoned all food and became absorbed in prayer, her devotion so growing day by day that all bodily wants were forgotten, and her soul was wholly given to penance. For a thousand years she ate only roots and fruits; for a bundred years she lired on vegetables; for some days her only sustenance was water and sir, and on some she muitatined a yet more absolute fast. For three thousand years she ate only dry leaves of the helf tree that had fallen to the ground, and at last abstained even from dry leave, whence she acquired the name of aparans ('the leafless'). At the sight of her emociated frame, Brahmá's deep voice recounded through the heavens.—

¹ Vedasiras, a son of Markandeya and, Mundhabya was, by his wife firari, the Progenitor of the Bhargara Brahmans.

. Dohá 84.

"Hear, daughter of the mountain knig! your desire is accomplished; cease all these intolerable afflictions: Tripurari will soon be yours.

Chaupái 75.

Though there have been many saints, both resolute and wise, not one, Bhaváni, has performed such penance as this valual now to my commands, knowing them to be ever trea and ever good. When your father comes to call you, cases to resist and go home with him; and when the saven sages meet you, know this to be the test of the heavenly prediction." When she heard Brahmá's voice thus speaking from on high, Girjis thrilled with delight. Now with her we have done for a time, while we turn to Sambha, From the day when Shi's spirit left the body be bremes a rigid seatic, ever telling his beads in Rima's name, and stlending the public resistations in his honour:

Dohá 85.

Even he, Siva, the pure intelligence, the abode of bliss, exempt from last, frenzy and delusion, wanders about on earth with his heart fixed on Hari, the joy of the whole world.

Chaupai 76.

Now instructing saints in wisdom, now expounding Mam's praises and though binned! the all-wise and pavoin-less lord got, yet excludened by the sadness of a brewared dispile. In this way many ages passed, while his love for Mam daily increased. Then the generous and merciful god fol of groce and benignity, seeing his steadfactures and affection, and the unchangeable stamp of devotion of his toot, became manifest in all his glory and landed him highly, for none other had ever accomplished as In diverse ways he instructed him, telling him birth and of her virtuous deeds, all at full leng infinite compassion.

I The bel tree (.Egle Marmelos) is specially sacred to Sies.

÷

Doha 86.

"Now, Siya, if you have any love for me, I request: go and marry the mountain-maid and de you."

Chaupdi 77.

Said Siva, "Though it is not what I approve, a master speak is must not be gainesid. It how to your order, for obedience is the highest of man would proper, he must do, without thinks told by his parents, or his confessor, or his superior in every way my benefactor, and how to your or The lord was pleased when he heard Sankara's replot fishly, knowledge, and religious feeling, an 'Hars, your you has been kept; attend now have told you. So saying he vanished, but trenvined impreved in Sankara's rout. Then serven Bibbis to visit him, and he addressed the pleaant wise:—

Dold 87.

"Go to Parrati and make trial of her love, send her father to fetch her home and removdoubles."

Chauses 78.

When the Hishis saw Gaari, she seemed to I Penance personified, and they cried,—Hear, O of the mountain! Why practice anch grievous se feating? When Moyer worship and what do you result in the Market Hear of the strangely moving terms,—"I strick from telling my secret, for you will unite at when you hear it; but my sood obtinately set and their interaction, though I am like one halling, upon the water, or as one who would fly without relying only on the truth of Niraids' repriecy, saints, the vatered of my malores. I have for the ministry that the malores. I have for the mountaints of the water of my malores. I have for the mountaints and the malores.

Dohá 88.

The Rishis smiled on hearing her speech, and said:—
"You are a true daughter of the parent rock; but tell me who has ever listened to Nárada's advice and had a home?

Chaupái 79.

"Did ke not advise Dakain's sons, and they never awe their father's house again? It was he, too, who tuined Chitrakata's faulty, and also Hirsanya kaipa's." Whoerer listens the state faulty, and also Hirsanya kaipa's." Whoerer listens to be a second to be the s

Dold 89.

And now he never gives her a thought, but goes about a-begging, and eats and sleeps at his ease. What

It is as by Namal's adress that the sons of Datchs were distinctly from multiplying their raw and scattered themselves all over the world in the loops of acquiring knowledge. Not one of them were returned, and the whappy father, thus described by all his children, donounced as a curse upon Narvisa that he, tro, should always be a homeless wanderer on the face of the earth.

Eing Chitraketz was childlen, though he had a thousand wire, at last, by the blesque of a same, now of them bore has a son; but when it was a pear old they all conspired beginner and pseudod it. The king the son of contract the son of which he put on the fire without perceiving that there were in it is the son of the which he put on the fire without perceiving that there were in it is the son of the which he woman who gase the first, and the hermit who used it, he was the mother and the chilt, whom increable the had this pushed of for their former and is indirected. After fauthong this calphantia of for their farmer and is indirected the son of the son of the son of the abelia, belongoid the through and pear a course of pears, and is beginned as the son of the respectable woman could ever stay with such a confirmed solitary?

When Kayaldu, the wife of demon-king Biranya kanpu, was about to bring forth; she received instruction from the sage Nariad, whose words bring forth; she received instruction from the sage Nariad, whose words ranched even to the ears of the child in her womb. Accordingly from the moment be was born he devoted himself to the series of Vibran, and thus provoked his implous father to the acts of persecution, which resulted in his own destruction and the estitation of his royal line.

Chaupdi 80.

To-day if you will hear my words, I have thought of an excellent bridgeroom for you, so beautiful and honourable so pleasant and amiable, that even the Veds byman his praise—the faultless and all-perfect lord of Lakshmi, who reigns at Vaikentha. He is the husband that I will bring you." On hearing this Bhaváni smiled and replied,—"You said tree that I inherit a rock-nature, and would soone die than yield. Gold, again, is another product of the rock that cannot be changed by any amount of burning. Nor will I change my faith in Nárada's word: whether my house be full or desolate, I fear not: whoever doubt the word of his spiritual adviser most never dream of obtaining either happiness or riches.

Doba 90.

Mahadeva is full of faults, while Vishnu is all-perfect; but the heart concerns itself only about the object it happens to fancy.

Chaupái 81.

If, reverend sirs, I had met you sooner, I would have submitted to your advise; but now that I have given my life for Sambhu, it is too late to weigh his merits and defects. If you are farmly resolved upon making a match, you need not stand 'dle; the world is full of young men and maidens; but as for me, though I hold out for a million lives, I will either wed Sambho no remain a wirgin. I will not forget Nárad's admonition, even though Mahāders himself and squin told me to do so. I, who am styled the mother of the world, fall at your feet and bid you return home; your time is lost." When the sages beheld her devotion, they cried—" Glory, glory, glory, to the great mother Bharkain.

Dohá 91.

United as Mayá to the god Siva, the parents of the universe?" then bowing the head at her feet and thrilling with rapture they left.

Chaupdi 82.

And sent King Himavant, and with many entreaties brought Girijá back. When they returned to Siva and told him Uma's whole history, he was delighted to hear of her sifection, and they weat picley home. Then the all-wise Sunbha, firmly directing his intention, began a meditation on Riama. Now at that time was a demon Táraka, of gigastic strength of arm and high renovm, who had subduced the sovereigns of every region and robbed the gods of all their hyppiness. Knowing ustiler age nor death, he was forwinghligt and the powers of heaven were vanquibed in innumerable battles. At last they all went and cried to the Crestor, and he seeing them so dismayed.

Dohd 92.

Re-assured them, saying, -"the demon shall die when a son is born of the seed of Sambhu, who shall conquer him in fight.

Chaupdi 83.

Having heard what I say, derive a plan by which much a lord may arise and assist you. After Satt quitted the body at Dakshi's scriffor, she was born again as the daughter of the Ilimálaya, and has been practising pensons in the hope of obtaining Sambhu to hashadad. He, on the other hand, has left all and sits absorbed in contemplation. Though it will be a difficult business, yet list to what I propose. Send Kama, the good of love, to Siva to agitate his sool, and then I will appreach with bowed head and arrange the marriage, and in this way your object will be attained. All exclaimed that the plan was good, and heartily applanded it. Then came the god with the five arrows and the fibst-standard.

Doha 93.

And they told him their distress. He heard, and after reflecting a little replied with a smile,—" Sambhu's displeasure will work me no good,

Chaupái 84.

Yet I will do you this service. The scriptures say charity is the highest of virtues, and one who gives his his for nother is ever the praise of the saints." So saying he bowed, and cook his leave, he and his attendant, with his bow of Bowers in his band. And as he went he thought within himself. — Siva's displeasure will sarely be my death.' Therefore he heatened to exhibit his power, and for a time reduced to subjection the whole world. If Love is provoked, the stepping-stones of the law are swept away in a moment; religious vows and obligations, self-control, ceremonial observances, knowledge and philosophy, virtuous practices, praye, penance, self-mortification, the whole spiritual army, is pasie-stricken and put to flight, Chhand 3.

¹ Kamadeva's attendant is Eituraja, or Basants, the spring season.

Virtue's grand force is routed in panie and dismay, And in dark nooks of holy books her champions skulk away, Greak god of fate I in this dread state what saving power is nigh? 'Gainst man's one heart Love's fivefold dark wins easy victory.

Dohd 94.

Every, creature in the world, animate or inanimate, male or female, forgot natural restraint and became subject to love.

Chaupái 83.

In every heart was a craving for love: the free bent its boughs to kiss the creeper; the overflowing river ran into the arms of ocean; lakes and pends effected a meeting. And when such was the case with invainants creation, what meet to speak of man? Reasts on Inda and birds in the air, under the influence of love, were unmindful of time and reason; all were agitated and blind with desire, and the swan regarded neither night nor day!. Gods, demons, men, financars, serpents, ghosts, witches, gobbins and Imps were all at once enalared by love; even saints and hermits, sages and ascritic. Learne serial enough of the findeacce.

Chhand 4.

When saints as f hermits own his eway, why speak of serf and thrall, God's whole creal in, recrease grown, as reclore was all to all, Each freuent dame, each am rous awate, frond bearen in kire's embrace; Two hours apod part, here still stool fast an I regned to Bashma place.

Arathi 8.

None is so hold but love steals his heart, and only they whom Hams protects can then escape.

Chaupai 86.

For two hours this triumph lasted, till Kamadera drew nigh to Samthu. On meing him Love trembled, and the whole world returned to itself. Every living creature at once

I The male and female chaked fewer, or rather Erabinated their are domined for ever to more read properties, and are mad to pass the night on the opposite banks of a river, vally call gift work other he sizes. Energy Laves wheat the single his system was be done removed. giese calm, as when a drunkard recovers from his drunkenness. When Love looked at Sivs, the invincible and mappreachable god, he feared; then returned shame too strong for words and, resolved upon death, he formed his plan of atlack. Forthwith burty Spring stepped forth, and every tree broke into blossom; wood and grove, lake and pond, every quarter of the heaven, gladdened and overflowed as 'it were with love, and even the deadest soul quickened at the sight.

Chhand 5.

At love's touch the dead were quickened, blossomed all the wood so dark, While a breeze soft, cool and fragrant, fannel the love-enkindled spark, Lacogha the lake with many a lotus, buth the bees with drowsy sound, Swans and parro's chatter gaily, gladly dance the nymphs round

Doká 95.

Though he tried every trick and manifold device, yet he and his army were defeated; Siva's unbroken trance still continued, and Love grew furious.

Chaupdi 87.

Seeing a mange tree with spreading boughs, he is his folly elimbed up into it; then fitted a shaft to his flowery low, and in his great passion taking aim and drawing the low, and in his great passion taking aim and drawing the string forms to the ear, he let fix and lodged the five serows in his heast. Then the trance was broken and Sambhia wooke. In this own was great agistion: he peeped his yes, and looking all round saw Kamadeva in the mragority. At his case the series of the series

Chhand 6.

The saints were freed from torment but Rati swooned for wee, and in and guise with weeping eyes at Niva's throne fell low, Sore waiting and ismenting her deat lord's hapless fate:
Till quick to pardon spake the god in words compassionate:

Dold 98.

"Henceforth, Rati, your husband's name shall be called Anang (the bodiless), and thus etherealized be shall pervade all things. But hear how you will age hereafter.

1 With this whole narrative compare that in the Eunden Sembadea of Kalidan.

Chaufdi 88.

When Kridon becomes incurate in the famile relieve the world of its bardeas, your wexture to reason in Fradyumna; this my wor fail?" On hearing this prophecy of Sinkras's, Its I now turn to another part of my story. Whe and the other gold heard these tidings they first Viskontia, and thence, with Vishon, Brahms rest, into the presuce of the merciful Sira, and the story with Vishon Fahms of the story of th

Dohá 97.

In the mind of all the gods is one idea. S love-emitten, and we would fain with our own exmarriage.

Chaupdi 89.

O destroyer of the pride of love, let us feast on this glad event. In granting a huchand to Ri Känndeva had been consumed you have done we of compassion, in punithment remembering me, great have ever an easy temper. Accept now it minable penance that Parvati has condered. On Brahma's speech and perceiving its purpt, be exjoyfully, "So be it!" Then the good sounded that drums and raised down flowers, and cried,—"! victory to the King of heaven!" Then, perceiving the proper time, the avere agree came and were der by Brahma to the Himálnya where first they Brayati and addressed her in mild but deceptive te.

Dohá 98.

"You would not listen to us, but rather took N advice; now again is your yow proved vain, for the love has been consumed by Mahadeva."

Chaupái 90.

Bhavani replied with a smile,-" O wisest of sage by Mishiders — imply a belief that aforetime Sambha was liable to change. But I know him to be from everlasting an acctic, facilities, loveless, parsionless: and if, knowing him to be good as he is, I have served him devotedly in heart, word and deed, so gracious a lord (be assured, O sages) will bring my now to accomplishment. Your saying that liarn has destroyed Love betrays great want of judgment. Fire, my friend, has an unalterable nature, and to cannot exist near it; brought near it must inevitably perits in and so must Love in the presence of Mahádow. I

Doh4 99.

On hearing this speech and seeing her love and confidence the sages were delighted and bowed the head before her, and went to King Himachal.

Chaufai 91.

And told him the whole history. When he heard of Love's annihilation be was much distressed, but was again conforted when told of Itali's promised hashand. After pondering on the majesty of Sambhu, he reverenly summoned the wise men, and at once had the day fixed according to Vedic prescription, selecting an ampleious date, and plant and hour. Then he gave the letter to the seren sages, hombly falling at their feet, and to you reading it, but at once preclaimed it aloud. The whole company of heaven was delighted: there was music and a shower of flowers, and in every quarter festive preparations were commenced.

Dohá 100.

All the gods began adorning the different vehicles on which they ride abroad, the Muses sung for joy, and all was bliss and happiness.

Chaupdi 92.

Siva's attendants began to dress their lord, arranging his serpent-creet and crown of matted locks; with snakes for his ear-rings and bracelets of snakes for his wrists; his body smeared with ashes, and a lion's skin about his loins; his hard, his eyes three in number, and a serpent for Brahmenical cord ; his thenet black with polenn ; a w of dead men's skulle about his breast. In such gi attire was arrayed the great god Bira. With teider hand he atranced riling on a bull, while the drams and instruments of music were played. The fe distributes all smiled to see him, and said, "The work no bride worthy of such a lover. ' Vishing and Bra an I all the company of heaven followed in the process each on his own carriage. 'The gods make a fine si but still the procession is not worthy of the bridegroom.

¹ The line thus translated stands in the original An Manmatha Makea ko mar There is an entirely different resulting in some copies just bringals in packet spaces, the as Sampathi inc. the wings; Sampath was the brother of Jarayo, and in his prike flew as high into the beaver that his wings were consumed by the heat of the sun. See Book 14, 666a 27.

Hold Int. So cried Vishnu with a smile and then commander the heavenly warders-" March separately, each one t his own retinue. Chaurdi 93.

Otherwise on going into a strange city they will la and say what a sorry procession for such a bridegroom The gods smiled to hear this speech, and marched seg ately, each at the head of his own followers. Mahad smiled too, not understanding Hari's joke, but taking it a most friendly auggestion, and sent Bhringi to bring his attendants. On receiving Siva's order they all ca and bowed the head at his lotus feet. Then Siva laughed see the bast in their motley attire, riding every kind vehicle; some with monstrous heads, some with no be stall; some with many bands and feet, and some w none ; some with great eyes, some with no eyes; some ve stout some very slim.

Chhand 7.

All, stout or slim, or foul or trim, la graccome panoply. With skulls for wine-cups filled with blood, from which they qual with ciee : With head of dog, or ass, or hog, a host no tougue can tell, Chosts, goblins, witches, every kind denizes of hell. Sorathá 9.

All the demons went singing and dancing with wonder ful contortions, such as never were seen, and uttering sorts of strange cries.

Chaupdi 94.

Like bridegroom, like procession-an extraordinar sight as it went along the road. There King Himschi erceled a canopy more splendid than words can tell; and every bill in the world, small and great, more than man can come, and every wood and sea, river, stream and lake, all were invited to attent; and assuming Corns of exquisite brauty, with all their retines, mals and female they flocked to the plance singing songs of gladners. First of all the king had built a number of guest-houses, and so tastelly stranged them, that, after a glauce at the beauty of the city, the Creator of the world seemed a contemptible architect.

Chhand 8.

Little seemed the world's Creator, and his skill of nothing worth.

Lake and foundam, grove and garden, shous more fair than aught on earth,

Wreaths and arches, flags and banners, made each house a goodly show:

Osliant youth and lovely maidens set a sand's heart all aglow.

Dohd 102.

The city in which the great mother had taken birth surpassed description; joy, prosperity and abundance were ever on the increase.

Chaupdi 95.

When it was known that the marriage procession was close at hand, the stire in the city and the brilliancy of the decorations grow more and more. With ammenua carriages and all doe equipment the heralds started for the formal reception. When they saw the srmy of gods they were glad of heart, and yet more so when they bebeld list. But when they perceived Sixu's familiars, every beast they consider the contract that the contract that the same shows the same summoned up courage to stand, but the children all ran for their lives straight back home, and when their parents questioned them could only reply trembling all over,—" What can we say? It is beyond telling; it is no marriage procession, but the army of Death; the bridgeroom, a maniac, mounted on a bull yields and ashes to solve his makes and skulls and ashes to storm him.

Chhand 9.

Skulls and snakes and streaks of ashes, matted locks and body bare. Wireles, imps, and frightful golding, and appalling ghouts are there. Happy man who sees such horrors not dies at once of fright?" So from house to bouse they babbled on Uma's stading night

Dold 103.

The fathers and mothers smiled, for they recognized Sira's familiars, and reassured the children in every possible way, saying,—" Do not be afraid; there is no cause for fear." - 44

Chaupdi 96,

The heralds brought in the procession as them all pleasant quarters. And Maina, havin an elegant scorificial lamp, and lastrous water is bowl, proceeded gladly to move it round over i while her attendants sang festive songs. When his terrible attire, the wo nen feared greatly and the house all of a tremble. Mahádava advan gnest-room and Maina, sorely grieved at heart, daughter, and in the most foring manner took it jup, while her lotus yees overflowed with tersy—that the Creator should have made you so beat then give you such a raving fool for a bridgeroom

Chhand 10.

How can God send such a raving groom for such a larely bri What a them bush is our withing-tree, the trait for which a From mountain-top, in sec or fire, I'll cast me down with th Welcome disgrace, so they be gone, this medding me'er shall

Doká 104.

All the ladies were distrest when they saw the sad, who in her deep affection for her daughter weep and make great lamentation.—

Chaurái 97.

"What harm had I done to Narada that he she my home desolate and give Uma such advice, to penance for the sake of a road bridgeroom? In g he is fancy free and passionless, an ascetic who wan money, nor house, nor wife, and therefore in d another's forme he has neither shame nor compune what does a barren woman know of the pangs 'birth?" When Bhavani saw her mother's distinct the pangs in the pangs of the first thing and discretely.—"Be not my mother, with these thoughts, for God's plans a terable. If late decrees me a mad husband, thould any one be blamed? Can you blot out the writing of the Creator? Then refrain from prepreaches.

Chhand 11.

Cense from profitess representes, nor in value bemone my fate, I most po where'er my destined jupanol sortiwe for me walt." Hearing Umi's pione snawer, all her latter felt surprise. Mu'n here talked of Ool's injustice, while the Learn besewed it

Dold 105.

At that time came Nárada, and with him the eages (for they had beard the news), and at once belook themselves to the king's palace.

Chaupdi 98.

Then Nárada instructed them all, and resited in full the past history, aying,—"Hear, O Maina I my words are true; your, damphter is Bhaváni, the mother of the world, the overlasting famile energy; without birth or beginning; Sambha's inseparable balf; the creator, supporter, and destroper of the noirezes; who at will assumes the semblance of human form. First she was born in Daksha's house, Sail by name, of excellent beauty. Then as Sat is he married Sankars, and her story is famous throughout the world, how once, with Stra, be met the sun of Ragha's lotss line (i.e., Ráma), and in her infatostion was not obedient to Sira, but was beguiled jate samouning the form of Sita.

Chhand 12.

For the crime of this assumption she was widowed many s day, Till in the fire before her sire her sins were burnt away. Now born your daughter, for her lord in penitence she stayed; And Sira aye shall be her lord; know this, nor be dismayed."

Doha 106.

On hearing Nárada's explanation the sadness of all was dispersed, and in a moment his words were spread from house to house throughout the city.

Chaupai 99.

Then Mains and Himarant were glod and fell again and again at Pairrati's facet. All the people of the city, whatever their up, men and women alike, were equally delighted. Songs of joy began to sound in this street; golden raws were displayed; meast were displayed; in the realized of pastronomic science. But the banquat table in the palace inhabited by the great mother Bhaváni was altogether beyond description. The murriage guests—Vishon, Brahms and all the heavening orders—were coorteously entreated and took their sents line after line. Then the skillid severes began to seven and the women, when they found the gold were sat down, began to jest sod bonter in pleasant strain.

Chlani 13.

In pleasant atrain with dark private they bird at large delight; Unarmed with the sing, the pulse all live, they have the stating pight, With growing was seen herb having paret prolongs the feeting boar. At fact they now, twick to be feet and a rich to be apparate bower.

Dold 107.

Again the sages came and reminded Himarant of the marriage; and he, seeing the time was fit, sent and summoned all the gods.

Chaurdi 100.

Whom he courteously addressed, and assigned to each ampropriate seat. An altar was prepared according to Verlio ritual, while the women chanted festal strains; and a divinely beautiful throne was erected, the handwork of a god, leyend description. Then Sirs, after howing to the Brahmans, took his seat, renembering in his heart his own to the strain of the strain o

Chand 14.

A myriad tongues were all too few to sing her matchless grace: When gods and more shrink abashed, for Talsi's rhyme what place if With downcast eyes the glorious dame passed up the ball, and fell, Rec-like, at Siva's lotes feet, the lord she lored as well.

Doha 108.

At the injunction of the priests, both Sambhu and Bhavani paid divine honours to Ganes. And let no one be perplexed on hearing this, but know well that they are gods from everlasting.

Chaupái 101.

The whole marriage ceremony was performed by the beautiful and the father, with keuz grass in his hand, took the bride and gave her to Siva. When the two had joined hands, all the gods were glind of beart; the chief priests uttered the scriptural formule, and the cry went up of "Glory, glory, glory to Sankara i" all kinds of music began to play, and flowers were rained down from heaven. Thus was accomplished the marriage of Hara and Girija amidst general rejoicing. The dowry given defies description-men-servants and maid-servants, horses, carriages, elephants, cows, raiment, jewellery, things of all sorts, and wagonloads of grain and golden vessels.

Chhand 15.

Thus great and more the dowry's store that King Bimachal brought , Yet falling low at 810a's feet he cried that all was nought The gracious lord cheered his sad aire in every way most meet, Then Mains came, most loving dame, and clasped his lorus feer

Dobá 109.

" Uma, my lord, is dear to me as my own soul ; take her as one of your servants, and pardon all her offences : this is the boon I beg of your favour."

Chaupdi 102.

After Sambha had in every possible way reassured his wife's mother, she bowed herself at his feet and went home. there called for Uma, and taking her into her lap gave her this excellent instruction,-" Be ever obedient to Sankara: to my ' My lord and my god ' is the som of all wifely duty." At these words her eyes filled with tears, and again and again she pressed her daughter to her bosom, -" Why has God created woman in the world, seeing that she is always in a state of subjection, and never can even dream of hanniness ?" Though utterly distracted by motherly love, she know it was no time to display it, and restrained herself, Running to her again and again, and falling on the ground to class her feet, in a transport of affection beyond atl words. Bhavani said adieu to all her companions, and then again went and clang to her mother's breast. Chhand 16.

Still clinging to her mother a breast she cheered her weeping train. Then with her handmal is worth her spouse, jet off looked lack again "Midst beggar's blessing, richly bought, forth rode the royal pair The glad gods raised down flowers, and sounds of music filled the air 11014 110.

Then went Himayant most loringly to escort them, till with many words of consolation Mahadeva bid him return.

Chaupdi 103.

Then he came speedily to the palace, called all the bills and lakes, entreated them courteously with words and gifts, and allowed them to depart. They proceeded each to his own realm, and Sambhu arrived at Kailan. How shall I tell list delights when thus occupied by Rambhu and Bhaváni, the father and mother of the world, and their attendants? They legen to indulge in sport and delilines, and serey day some new pleasure. Thus a length of time was presed and the six-headed child (Kartikeya) was born, who vanquished in lattle the demon Tackk. His bitch is ening by all the accred books, and his deeds are known throughout the world.

Chhand 17.

All the mostly knows the study of the birth and the glury of Mahadera's six healed and .

And this is the cause why so briefly I pages on the generica decile he hath diese

Man or mail, who shall tell, or sing trace and well, how Size took Uma to wile.

Whall be happily wel, and, with Mersings be-track, live at case all the titer of his life.

Dold 111.

The amorous doings of Girija and her beloved are an occan-like depth that not even the Yeda can sound; how then can an ignorant clown such as Tubi Dás succeed in describing them?

Chaupdi 101.

When the sainted Bharudrájs had heard all this pleasant and delectable history of Sambhu's doings, he was delighted and longed to hear yet more. With overflowing eyes and every limb thrilling, he was so mastered by love that his tonge could not atter a word. On seeing his condition the great sage was pleased,—"Blessed is thy lirth, to whom Gaur's lord is dear as life. He who love not Sixa's lotus feet can novee dream of pleasing Háma: a guileless love for Sixa's feet is the surest sign of faith Ráma. For who is so faithful to Ráma as Sixa, who for ne fault thus lett his wife Sati and made a vow, the pleage of unwerving fidelity? And whom does Ráma hold more dear than Sixa?

Dold 112.

I have begun by telling you of Sira's deeds, knowing well your secret, that you are a true servant of Ráms, without any variableness.

Chaupdi 105.

I understand your character and disposition; listen therefore while I proceed to recount Rama's adventures. I cannot say how gial I am at this meeting with you to-day. Though Raim's decis are beyond measure, and not a myriad serpent kings could tell them all, yet I repeat the late as it has been revasied, after faining my thoughts on the god with how in hand, who is the lord of the queen of speech. For Saravati is as it were but a poppet, and Kingham the measurer who plays the hidden strings. When he finds a true believer, he graciously sets her to dance in the courtyard of the poet's fancy. To him, the merciled, Raghanáth, I how before commencing the recisial of his god. Of all mountains the most heavilful was Kuilás, since Siva and Umā had make it their home: —

Dold 113.

Saints, hermits, ascetics, gods, linnaras, sages, and all pions souls came there to dwell and adore Mahadeva, the coot of all good.

Chaupdi 106.

But exemise of Hari and Hara, who had no love for vittee, could never even in a drama find their way to the place. On this mountain was an enormous but tree, which no time nor season could robe it is beauty; ever stirred by rotic, cool, fragrant breezes and a shade from the hottest wan; the Vitay tree famous in source cong as Mahadeera's favoratic hands. Once on a time the lord shad game under it, and in an excess of delight spread with his own hands his tiger-skin on the ground and there at a tesse; his body as fair in has as the jamine or the moon, his arms of great length, a hermit's sloth warp about his loins, his feet like lots blossems, and his tow-noils like gleams of light to dispet the drakness of faithful souls; his face more splendid than the moon is automa: and his decorations, repress and strakes of attacks.

Dold 114.

What his twisted coils of hair for a crown; with the Ganges springing from his head; with full-orbed eyes like the lotes, and with the crevent moon on his brow; the dark-throated god abone forth in all his brilliancy.

Chauses 107.

So sat the enemy of Love, as it were Quietism embodied. Then Parvati, who is the great mother Bhavani, approached, seeing her time. In recognition of her love he received r most courteously and enthroned her on his left side. yously she sat beside him and recalled her former life; d reckoning on his augmented attachment she spoke ing fain to hear the salutary tale, - " O lord of the world y lord Purari, your greatness is known throughout all ree worlds : things moving or motionless, serpents, men d gods, all do homage to your lotus feet.

Doha 115.

You are the lord of all power and of all knowledge; the entre of art and science; the great storehouse of meditaon, of wiedom and of a ceticism; and your name is as the ee of life to the afflicted.

Chausdi 108.

If, O blieful being, I have found favour in your sight, nd you know me to be your own devoted slave, then, my ord, disperse my ignorance by reciting to me the story of lama. How can be who dwells beneath the tree of paradise know aught of sorrow that is born of want? Consider,) moon-crowned god, and relieve my mind of this erplexity. The saints, who preach salvation, declare that liams is the uncrested god; Seshnag, Sarasvati, the Veda, the Puranus, all sing his praises; you too, night and day, great conqueror of Love, reverently repeat his name. Is this Rama the son of the King of Avadh, or some other uncreated, passionless, invisible Being ?

Lohd 116.

If a king's son, and so distrest by the loss of his wife, then how the Supreme God? When I compare his acts that I see with the cologies that I hear, my mind is completely distracted.

Chaupái 109.

Instruct me, my lord, with regard to him who is the passionless, all-pervading, omnipresent god. Be not wroth at my ignorance, but take steps to remove it. In the wood, though I was too awe-stricken to tell you, I beheld the majesty of Raina, yet my mind was so doll that I did not understand, and I reaped a just reward. Again to-day I am in doubt, and with clasped hands I beg of you to compassionate me : be not angry, nor say you have been taught already ; the past is past ; my infatuation is gone, and I have a hearty longing to hear the sacred story of Rama's virtuous deeds Declare it, O glory of the serpent king, great lord of heaven.

Dohá 117.

Laying my head in the dust, I worship your feet, and with folded hands entreat you to tell me all Raghubar's excellent glory, as extracted from scripture and philosophy.

Chaupái 110,

Though a woman is not entitled to initiation, yet 1 am in a special degree your servant; further, the saints do not forbid mystic lastruction to a woman in great distress, and it is in extreme distress that 1 call upon you, heavenly king, for so account of Ridma. First, weigh well and declare to me the cause why the invisible Brahm assumed a visible body. Then, my lord, tell me of this incorrention and his pretty actions when a child, and how he wedded Jónaki, and for what fault he left his father's kingdom, and what he did when living in the woods, and how he saw Ridma, and how he amused himself when he recovered the throne; tell me all shoot him, most amistle Saukara.

Daká 118.

Then tell me, gracious lord, of his marvellous acts, and how with all his subjects the jewel of Raghu's line proceeded to his own abade,

Chaupái 111.

Next tell me, my lord what it all means; explaining to me in full data! what is the intelligence that as absorbs the wisest asints; what is first, and widom, and approme knowledge and datechment from the world. Tall an also, O lord of purest understanding, the many other mysteries connected with Riam; and if there he saylving which I have omitted to ask, he kind enough not to suppress it. You, as the Vedas say, are the great teacher of the three worlds; what can other poor creatures know?" When Sira heard Umá's winning and guilliess speech he was glad; the whole of Riams acts througed in upon his soul, his eyes were bedewed with tears and his very limbs thrilled with rapture; for the vition of Riams filled his heart, and his eestatic joy was beyond measured.

Dohá 119.

For a brief space Mahadeva was lost in contemplation; then recovered himself and began with great joy to tell the tale of Rama.

Chaupdi 112.

"Not to distinguish between the false and the true is itse mistaking a rope for a anake; while as a dream vanishes way on awakening, so is it with those who look well and nake sare. I reverence the child Râma, most easy of access to all who repeat his name. Come to me, O home of bills and bane of wor, as when thou useds to sport in Dasarsh's courty-ard." After thus paring homage to Râma, Triparti began his mellifluous recital,—"All blessings on thee, O daughter of the mountain-king, there is no such benefactor as thou art. Thou hast asked for Râma's history as potent as the Ganges to saneity the world; and it is on the world's account that thou hast asked, being thyself full of love for Râma's feet.

Dohá 120.

By the blessing of Rama, O Parvati, not even in electical doubt, error, delusion, or distress enter into your mind; this I know well:

Changeli 113.

But you have so ordered your certainty as to keepfi all who speak or hear. For the ears that hear not Rema's mame are more snake-holes; the eyes that have not seen his true vision are like the false eyes in a peaceck's tail; the heads that have not bowed at the feet of Harl's priest are of no more worth than bitter pumpkins. They whose hear is not impired with faith in Harl are more animated correst; those who sing not his presses are like creaking fregs; and hard and impenetrable as a thunderbolt is their break who hear his deeds and take no delight in them. Listen O Giriji, to the deeds of likims, which are to gods a delight and to demons a delation?

Pold 121.

Who is the good man that will not listen to the story of Rama, which is like the heavenly cow, that fulfils every desire of the gods who tend it.

Chausdi 121.

The story of Riam is like a fair pair of cymbals to the three away the birds of doubt, or like an area the root of the tree of sin; listen reverently, O daughter of the montain-king. How sewest is the name of Riams, and his ways and his detail is his test and his actions are declared by the ectipiares to be beyond number. And as there is no end to likins, so the legends about him and his glory are endlers yet, sering the greatness of year love, I will attempt to tell them to the best of my allility and as the ectipiares have resuled. Your inquiries, Uma, are most becoming and prefitable, such as the exists approve, and I too am pleased to hear that there was one thing I did not like, though you replace that the inflatence of a decision; for you said,—I to these some other Illiam whom the Vedas sing, and whom seven love to contemplate?

Dold 122

This is what is said by the vile wretches whom the demon of delusion has in his clutch: heretics, who are the enemies of flari and know no difference between truth and falsehood, Changdi 115.

Ignorant, unlessned and blind reprolates; the mitros of whose mind is clouded by a film of seanality; lustful, treacherous and desperately preverse, who have never even in a dream attained to a vision of true faith. They nater doctrines reprognant to the Vedi, with no outerstanding of loss or gain; their glass is dim, their eyes are nught; how there can such happers wights see the leastly of Rians? Unable to distinguish between the material and manaterial, they jakber many lying words, and under Ham's delutive influence go utterly attray in the world if for whom no words are too strong. Windy, devilink, dranken, they can atternabling to the purpose, and are so intoricated with a strong delution that no one should inverse at the review.

Soratha 10.

Being thus assured in your heart, discard all doubt and fall in adoration at Rama's feet. Listen, O daughter of the mountain-king, and the sun of my words shall disperse all the mists from your soul.

Chaupdi 116.

There is no difference between the material and the immaterial, so declare anias and sage, the Veds and the Paránas. The formlers, invisible and uncreated Immaterial, out of love for the faithful, becomes materialized. How can this be? In the same way as water is crystallized into ice. But how can lie be subject to consul delesion whose very mans in like the sun to disperse the darkness of error? In

The All of the Emman House profession of the world would be explicitly for a solution of the world between a solutions are provided by the Emman House profession of the American for the Emman House profession of the

C 44 111

The Parist Court, the glorine front of light the strainfully for for more district, the fewal of the foreign of growth are not for five field. I god the meaning Sing thread life of

Chamba Et:

I Table to a segment of their very very what associated which follows the first substitute to the control of the second of the whole of the second of the se

DA4 128

Things below as the gloun; at a polished shell, or as a new enemil by the inn a runs, yet no one, at any time, i, present or terure, ear risk homest of the delicion.

1 Leugal 144.

And such is the world in its commention with Hari: yet high neved livers cases pully in the same way as a min dreams that his head its cut off, is in pain till he awaken, a can declare his beginning or his mai, though holy there has bymmed him as less its could. He moves Erm inanimate navare has no unconstitutional intelligence, season, order ctivity paramie the material aniverse, the mineral as well as the animat exclude himploma.—Necori. without feet, he hears without ears, and works in manifold ways, yet without hands. Without a mouth he enjoys all tastes, and without a voice is the aptest of speakers; he cru see without eyes, touch without fimbs, and without a nove catch every seent. His actions are thus in every way supernatural, and his greatness is atterly beyond description.

Dohd 125.

He whom Scripture and Philosophy have thus sung, and whom the saints love to contemplate; even the Lord God; he is the son of Dasarath, the beneficent King of Kosala.

Chaupái 119.

By the power of his name I scalt to the regions of the bleat any creature whom I as eed ging at Kai; he is the sovereign of all creation, animate and inanimate, my lord Raghubar, who reads all hearts. By repeating his name the most abandoned of sinners cancels the accumulated trimes of many persions existences, and by those who devoutly meditate upon him the ocean of life is as easily croased as a puddle in the road. Rams, O Bhaváni, is the Supreme Spirit, and the error to which you gave utterance on this point was most improper. Such doubt, when existrationed in the heart, destroys knowledge, sobriety and vary virtue." On hearing Siva's luminous exposition, the whole structure of hearts field to pieces; he love and devo-tion to Raghapati grew strong, and her sore incredulity passed away.

Doh4 126.

Again and again, clasping her lord's lotus feet and suppliantly folding her hands, her whole soul overflowing with affection, Girija thus spoke and said,—

Chaupái 120.

"My griavous delesion, like the feverish heat of autumn, has yielded to the mone-like spell of your voice. In your compassion you have removed all my doubt, and I now understand the very Réms. By my lerd's mercy my distress is all gone, and I am made glad by his favour. Now regarding me as your own immediate servant, though I am but a poor ignorant woman, if I have really found grace.

I Nows hat hebeld his, none.

our sight, reply to those my former questions. If Rams the invisible and immortal God, without parts and ions, and whose temple is the heart, why did be take form of a man? Declare and explain this to me." On ing Uma's modest speech, and perceiving her sincere re to be instructed in Rams's history. Dohd 127.

2000 120

The all-wise Sankara, the destroyer of Kamadeva, was of heart, and with many words of praise was thus sed to speak,—

Sorathá 11-13.

Listen, Bharáni, while I recite in anspicious strains Kâmecharitemâna, or pure lake of Râma's deeda, as of Bhusundi! declared it in the hearing of Garur, the king hearing and the strain of their exalted verse, after which you shall bear of Râma's incernation his all-glorious and sinless deeds. Hari's virtues and sare infinite, and his history and his manifestation and number or measure; I tell them as best I can; listeo, is with respect.

Chaupái 121.

isten, Girijá, to the grateful tale of Hari's great and hely as they have been recorded in the acriptures. The of Hari's incarnation is not to be dogmatically defined; on my mind, Bharáni, Ráma is beyond the grasp of intelor soul, or speech; yet, as saints and sages, the Veds and Yaránas have partly and to the extent of their capacity inted the matter, so I, fair dame, will now declare to the cause as I understand it. Whenever virtue decays, wil spirits, waxing strong in pride, work iniquity that it be told, to the contains of Brádmans, cowa, gods arth-itself, the compassionate Lord assumes some new y form; relieves the distress of the faithful.

Dohá 128.

lestroys the evil spirits; reinstates the gods; maintains say of salvation; and diffuses the brightness of his

All becomes of the first state of Apollyh, was by white of his intributy according to the form of the first state of the first glory throughout the world. Such are the motives of Ráma's incarnations.

Chaupdi 122.

Singing his glory, the saints escape the waves of life, and it is for thir sake only that the Compassionate assumes a body. The causes of Ráma's incurnations have been many and various, each more wooderful than the other. I will relate one or two of his previous births, if, Bhavani, you are prepared to give me your devout attention. Hari had once two loving door-keepers, the famous Jaya and Bijaya: both brothers, in consequence of a Brahman's curse, were born again in the form of the malignant demons Hiraya-kasip and Hiraya-kas

Dold 129.

Then the evil spirits went and took birth as the bold and powerful warriors Kambha-karn and Ravan, who. as all the world knows, subdued even the gods.

Chaupdi 123

Though killed by the deity, they did not attain to salvation, for the Brahman had doomed them to three births. They then were come the cause why the cherisher of the faithful assumed a body, and at that time his parent Kasyan and Aditi were incarnate as Dasarath and Kausslyn of glorious memory. Thus it was that in that age of the world he descended from heaven and wrought awing deeds on earth. In another age, sessing the gods distrest and waging ineffectual battle with Jalandhar, Sambhu warred against him times without number, but could not subduce the valiant glant, for the exceeding virtue of his wife protected him squint Yardris' severy attack.

Dohá 130.

By a stratagem the Lord broke her vow and effected the will of the gods. When she discovered the deception, then in her wrath she cursed him.

Chaupdi 124.

And Hari did according to her curse; for though the Lord God, he is full of playfulness and of mercy. So Jalandhar as born as Rāvan, and being killed in battle by Rāma tained to high glory. This then was the cases of one birth 1d the reason why Rāma then assumed a boman form. Each ratār has its legend, which the poets have sung in various aya and according to Iradion. "On one occasion it was arrad a curse that cansed him to become incrente." At this tying Girijā was astonneded, ..." Nārad is a wice saint and a otary of Vishun's: what was his reason for uttering a curse? Pata offence had Lakhonis lord committed? Tell me the thole story. Purāri; it is passing strange that a saint should en subject to rasion."

Doha 131.

Then suswered Mahadevs with a smile, - There is seither wise nor fool, man is ever such as Rightipati will take him to be Swithd 14.

I sing the glory of Rama; listen deroutly, O Bharadvája; and do thou, O Tulei, put away the infoxication of pri io no i worship Ragbunath, the destroyer of death

Charpai 125.

In the Humalaya mountum is a very sacret, care close to the holy Ganges. Seeing this pure and delightful here matege, the drine sign Narad was greatly pleased; and as he gated upon the beauty of the rocks and the forces fluides for was filled with large at food, and as he shought upon that the caree was broken and his spotlers and fell all at two-fitts a transe. When the king of hereon are the sign's state he ferred, and in terms of high respond addressed I mell to Kamalaya. — Go, 1 leg, with your assistend I mell to Kamalaya. — Go, 1 leg, with your assistend in the large of the want very girlly, has in India's mind was great alarm, for he thought, — The sent would reb me of my large for the sent would reb me of my large for Miller word force, a galland or a meer it as 1100, 417a, 1 of interference as it as these here.

10.04 131

lake a west bed by that on sening a fron room away and the for its two and taken in senith, for face it about the taken from a man to the sake of the national manner.

Chaurdi 126.

When Love reached the hermitings, his deceptive power created to false pring. All the trees broke out into many-coloured blossoms, there was a mormaring of cankoos and a humming of hees. A delightful sir, soft, cool and fragrant, aprung up, fanning the flame of desire; while Rambhā and the other heavenly nymphs, all well skilled in the art of love, began singing songs in every variety of measure and disporting themselves in the dance with waving hands. When Love saw himself so well supported, he was gide and again manifested his creative power in diverse ways; but his devices had so effect upon the saint; and guilty Love hegan to tremble for himself. Who dare and guilty Love hegan to tremble for himself. Who dare graedlan?

Doha 133.

In dire dismay both Kamadeva and his accomplice confessed themselves defeated, and went and clarged the holy man's feet, addressing him in accents of the deepest humility.

Chaufái 127.

There was no anger in Nárad's noul, who in friendly term replied to Kámadeva and reavured him. Then, howing the bend at his feet and accepting his commends, they both retired, the god and his companion; and repairing to Indra's court there related all their own doings and the sind's chemney. As they list-ned to the late all were studied, and bowing the head to Blair extolled the sind. Then went Nárad to Sirs, greatly proud of his victory over Leve, and told him all Lorés doings. In acknowledgment of his affection Mahideva gives him good advice,—"O great sind, again and again I beg of you never to repeat to Hari his story that you have now told me; should it happen to be brought forward, kepri is a lark as possible."

Dold 134.

Good as the advice was, it did not please Naral. O Bharadvája, listen to the strange recital and see the strength of Hari's will.

Chaup de 128

What Rama wills to have done is done, and there is no one who can alter it. As Sambhu's words did not please the solah he went straight to Brahmá's court, and, to the accompositions of the famous tue that he had in his hand, amp right through the excellent song of Hari's praises. Then he paved on to the milky ocean, where abider Vishna, the glory of revelation. The Lord can to meet him in great joy, and side by side they sat together. Said the avereign of the nuiverse with a smile,—'Havread sir, 'tis long aron you fast did me this honour.' Then Nárad declared all Love's doings, though Sira had beforehand cautioned him; the deceptive power of Ragbupati is so strong that there is no man living who can resist in.

Doha 135.

Then spoke the great god, with an austere look, but in flattering terms,—"Self-delation and the intexicating arrogance of love shall perish at the remembrance of your doings.

Chaupdi 129.

Know, O saint, that infattation prevails in a sool that is devoid of wisdom and self-control; but what pain can how cause to one so steadlast in ascetterium as poursell?" Said Narad in his pride,—'It is all your favour, my Lord. The Compassionate saw into his heart and thought within himself,—"Pride like a huge tree has spronted in his soul: must at cone tear it up by the root; ever to relieve my servants is the vow that I have made. I will surely contive some sportive device on behalf of the saint." Then Narad bowed his bead at Harri's feet and took his leave, swelling with pride; while Vishun gave orders to the spirit of delesion. Listen owe to his strange contrivation.

Dohá 136.

He constructed on the road a city a hundred leagues in circumference, with everything more perfect than even in Vishan's own capital.

Chaupdi 130.

And inhabited by such graceful men and women that you would take them all to be incarnations of Kamadera and

I Six's speech is a ambiguosity model that it really concept a crasser, while Name interpret is at a complusent. The bidden meaning the literature when you reflect spon this incident and all its commonwealth of the commonwealt

Rati. The king of the city, by name Sila-nidhi, had horse, elephants and troops beyond number chis royal pamp like that of a hundred Indras i himself a centre of power, policy and magnificance. His daughter Viva-noubant was so beautiful that even Lakhmi would be put to the blash and by Hari's delawise power was in every way so exquisite that no words could describe ber. As the princess was selecting a bushand, kings beyond number came as suitors. The saint too, came to the fairy city and began making inquiries of the people. When he had heart all that was going on, he proceeded to the pulse, where the king most respectfully gave him a sear.

Dohá 137.

And then brought his daughter for him to see, saying,— 'Tell me, good sir, after consideration, all that is good or bad about her.'

Chaupdi 131.

When Nárad saw her beauty, he forget his vow of chaslity and continued long graing pone her. Her features quite fascinated him; yet he would not in words express his beart's delight. "Her bridegroom must be one of the immorful, juvicoible in battle, reversoed by all creation; such a one most fill-niddit's daughter wed." But, though he calcolated her fortune thus orrectly, he kept it to himself, and after saying something or other to the king, to the effect that his dughther would be of good fortune, he went away full of natiety, considering.—"What scheme can I devise now, so as to make her marry me? No time is this for prayers or penance; good God, how am I to get the girl? Datal 138.

D3Na 155

I must on this occasion make myself exceedingly charming and beautiful, so that the princess may be pleased when she sees me and give me the wreath of victory.

Chaupái 132.

I will ask Harf for the gift of beauty in going to him there will be much daily hot I have no other such friend, and this is an opportunity for him to help ma." So be offered up a fervest prayer and the meriful Lord appeared to him in a vision. The saint's eyes brightened at the sight and he rejoiced in beart, anying,—'My object will be accomplished.' He then with the attoors thandity bold his tale, and added,—"O, my Lord, be gracious and assist me. Bestow on me beasty equal to your own; for in no other way can I get possession of her. Make haste to accomplish my success; for lo. I am your slave." When the Compassionate saw the mighty influence of the deception he had wrought, he smilled to himself:

Doha 139.

"Hear, O Nárad; I will assuredly bring about your highest good—that and naught else; nor shall my words prove vain.

Chaupdi 133.

If a sick man in the weariness of disease ask for what will harm, mark me, holy ascetic, the physician will not grant it. In the same way will I act as is best for you." So asying the Lord vanished. The saint was so demented by the power of the delasion that be did not understand Harris hidden meaning, but hastened at occs to the spot where the marriage areas had been prepared. The Rájis were scaled rank upon rank, each with his rations in grand stitre. The saint thought joyfully within himself,— My beauly is such that he will never leave me to wed another. But the mercifal God, the saint's true friend, had made him hideous beyond all description. Every one recognized him as Nárad and bowed the h-s l, knowing nothing of what had taken place.

Dold 140.

Now there were there two of Sira's attendants who knew the whole secret. Desired like Brahmins, they seemed to be spectators of the show, walking here and there and looking about.

Chaupdi 131.

Both went and set down in the same group with the wint to ground of his benety; and in their Brahmanical attive they attracted no notice. They say in just so that Maral might hear,—" Here has a given this man unch excellent beauty that the princes will be claimed with his appearance and will occlude we blim, taking him for Hark homealf. The saint was a unterly subjugated by passint that Familhar's acreasts could hapk and just as they hind, and shough he beard their mackers, his latellest was too benildered to miserate this. No one perceived the transformation was only the princess, who, on beholding him just as he was with his monkey face and deformed body, was quite disgusted at the sight,

Dohá 141.

And with her handmaids glided like a swan through the long line of kings with the wreath of victory in her lotus hands.

Chaupdi 135.

She would not let her eyes rest for a moment on the spot where Nirad was sitting in his pride. The saint in his namiest kept 6dgetting about, and Siva's attendants smiled to see the state he was in. Then entered the Compassionate, in form as a king, and gladly the princess cast on him the garhand. Then Latshmi's bord carried off the bride, to the despair of the assembled kings. The saint was much disturbed; in his inflattation his reason was quite gone, like a diamond dropt out of a hole in a bag. Then Siva's attendants said with a smile—"Get a glass and look at yourself; and having so said both ran away in great alarm. The saint looked at his reflection in the water. When he aw himself, he was furious and cursed them with a grisvous curse;

Dohd 142.

'Go false and guilty pair, and take birth as demons of the night. Be this your reward for mocking me; mock again a saint, if you dare.'

Chaupde 136.

Looking again in the water be saw himself in his proper form; yet still he was not content at heart, but his ling quivered with rage, and in haste ho betook himself to Yishun. 'Shall I carse him or kill myself, seeing that he has made a mock of me throughout the world?' On the way the conqueror of demons met him, and with him Rama and the princess. With a smile and in gentle those he said, —'Winere goes the saint, like one distracted?' On hearing these words, his anger rose, and infatuation utterly mastered his reason,—"You never could hear to look upon another's properly i yone reny and deceit are notions; at the churning of the ocean you drove Siva mud and made the god quaff the poisoned quy.

Chaupái 139.

Siva's two followers saw him on the road rejoicing and in his right mind. In great alarm they drew near, and clasping his feet made their supplication: "O great saint was aren to Harbmans, but sevenate of Mhahdwar, and have reaped the fruit of our great sin : in your mercy remove the coarse." Said the compassionet Narad, —"Von must both be born as demons of vast power, majesty and strength; but when you have subdued the universe by the might of your arm, Vishus shall take upon him human form, and dying in battle at his bands you shall statia to salvation, nor ever be born again." After bowing their head at his feet, both went their way and in doe coarse were born as demons.

Doha 146.

In one age this was the reason why the lord became incarnate, to gladden the gods, to comfort the saints, and to ease earth of its burdens.

Chaupdi 140.

Thus Hari's births and actions are many and various, but all of them glorious and beneficent. In every age be has manifested himself and evength many excellent works; and on each occasion great sinits have sung his acts in holy strains of choicest worce, relating marvellous histories of diverse kinds, which the wive bear without any anazement. For as Hari is without end, so are there endless verses about him, which are beard and repeated by scripture and the faithful. The delightful adventores of Riambandara could not all be sung in a myriad ages. This story that I have now told, Bharáni shows how Hari's deceptive power can infatuate even saints and arges. He, the lord, is sportive, gracious to soppliants, accessible to his servants, and a remover of all servor.

Sorathá 15.

There is neither god, man, nor saint whom unreality has not infatuated Reflect upon this and worship the great master of the unreal.

Chaurdi 141.

Hear, O daughter of the Himálsy, a second reason, which I will proceed to relate at full length, why the ancreated, the passionless, the incomparable Brahm became King of Kosala. The lord, whom you saw roaming in the forest with his brother in hermit's attire; at whose doings, Bhyand, you in Sati's form lost your sense, and still to this day have a touch of disease; the recital of his adventures will heal all your sickness. All his sportive acts in the increasing your acontrops. All the sporters acts to O Bharadraja, on hearing Sankara thus speak, the modest and affectionate Uma smiled for joy, while her lord continued,-" the cause of the incarnation."

I am now about to explain (listen, great saint, with attention to the delightful story of Rams, which can cleanse all the stains of the world and bring man to heaven). Chaupdi 142.

Manu, the son of the self-existing, had to wife Satarupa, and of them were born the whole human race; even to this day the fame of their virtue and conjugal fidelity is celebrated in the scriptures. Their son was King Uttanapada, who begot Hari's faithful client Dhruya. The younger son, wao orgo: nari s taunui cuent innuva. Iue yoonger sout, by name Priya-vrata, is mentioned with praise both by the Vedas and Poránas. Their daughter, Devahuti, became the devoted wife of Saint Kardama, and in her womb the eternal Lord God, in his mercy and compassion, planted Kapila, the author of the Sankhya philosophy, the dirioe exponent of the theory of entities. This Manu reigned a long while, keeping all God's commandments.

But in a palace complete detachment from the senses is impracticable. Old age came upon him, and he thought with grief, - My life has been spent without any true devotion to Hari. Chaupdi 143.

Then perforce he resigned the throne to his son, and with his queen repaired to the forest, to Naimisha, famous with an queen repaired to the torest, to Naimish, tamous success, all holy places as especially sacred and liberal of success, Glad of heart. King Manu sought the rot where the company of saints and espect; and as the resolute pair the company of saints and espect; and as the resolute pair the company of saints and espect; and as the resolute pair the company of saints and especially and are the company of saints. passed along the way they seemed incarnations of Wisdom and Faith. On reaching the bank of the Gomati, they lathed with delight in the clear stream; and there the inepired with delight in the clear stream; and there the inepired with delight in the clear stream; recognizing in the king raints and sages came to meet them, recognizing in the king recognizing in a champion of religion. Devoutly they took them to visit each different shrine, and with wasted body, clad in hermit's robes, they are ever in the assembly of the faithful listening to the Puranas.

Doha 148.

Devoutly repeating the twelve-lettered charm1, and with their whole soul directed to the lotus feet of Vásudevá.

Chaupái 144.

Meditating on the Supreme Brahm, they live on leaves and fraits and roots. Then down genance as before Harl, they gave up proots and fruits for water only. In heart an endiess craving,—"O that we might see with our eyes the very God, without parts or pussions; without beginning or end; whom the presohers of salvation contemplate; whom the Vedas defines at the unatterable; the pure spirite, without attributes and beyond all comparison; as part of whom are produced in various forms the lords Sambhu, Brahms, and Vithan. Yet so great a god submits to his own servants, and for their sake assumes in sport a body. If this be true, as the scriptures have dealared, our desire will of a surety be accomplished."

Dohá 149.

In this way they spent six thousand years living only on water; and then seven thousand, living only on air.

Chaupai 145.

For ten thousand years they gave up even this and remained both standing on one leg. Now Bredma, Hari and Hara saw this interminable penance and repeatedly came near to Mann and tempted this, saying,—" Ask your boon"; but for all their pertuation be was too steadfast to move. Though his body was reduced to a skeleton, there was not the least pain in his soul. Then the omniscient lord knew this the king and queen were his servants and had this single object in practiting such austerities. A solemn voice full of ambrosial grace sounded in the sky, saying; Ask, ask; a voice so blithe that it would wake the dead. As it dropped upon the ears of their soul, their bodies became again as comely and stout as if they had only that day left their home.

¹ The twelve-lettered charm in Om Aumo Bhagarate Launderaya.

Dold 150.

As the ambrovial voice rung in their ears, their body quive ered and thrilled; and falling on the ground in an irrepressible transport of love Manu thus spoke. --

Chaupdi 146.

"Hearken, O thou that art as the tree of paradise or the sared cow to thy servant; the deat on whose feet is even worshipped by Brahmá. Hari and Hara; accessible to the faithful; bounteous of all good; protector of appliants; lord of all creation: if, O friend of the friendless, I have found swour in thy sight, then in thy mercy grant me this boon: Let me with mine own eyes behold thee in that form in which thou dwellest in Siva's breast, which the saints desire to see; the swan in the take of Rhumund's soul; the sum and the negation of all attributes; the theme of the Veda: do me this grace. O thou that healest the woes of every appliant. This gentle, submissive and allrectionable speech of the wedded pair went to the heart of the generous and mercifal col; and the sovereing of the universe manifested binnell.

Dold 151.

In hee as the lotus or the sapphire; dark as a raincloud; of such lustrous form that a myriad Loves could not be compared to it,

Chaupdi 147.

With a face perfect in beauty like the autumal moon; with lovely checks and chin and dimpled neck, red lips and gleaming teeth, and a nose and smile more radiant than a moconbeam; eyes bright as a bluts bud and a glance to fascinate the heart; brows surpassing Love's bow; on the forebead a sectarial mark and glisteding star; golden fits his ears and a bright crown on his head; crisp carling hair like a swarm of bees; on his breast the Striats jewel and a long wreath of aweet wild flowers, and jewelled adornments about his neck; a waist like a lion, a comely Parkmanical thread, and exquisite clasps upon his arm, long and round as an elephant's trunk; with a quiver at his side and how and arrow in his band;

Dohá 152.

His yellow apparel more lustrous than the lightning; his body charmingly dimpled, and his naval like a bee hovering over the dark wave of the Jamuna;

Chaupdi 148.

His feet beautiful beyond description, lotes haunt of the bee-like souls of the suits. On his left side shies in equal glory the Primal Energy, queen of beauty, mother of the world; of whose me ubers are born countless Umás and Rámas and Bráhmanis, sil alike perfect; by the play of whose epchrovas a world flashes into existence, even Sitá, enthroned at Ráma's side. As Manu and Satarúpa beheld this vísion of Hari in all his beauty, gazing fixedly with open eyes, they adored his incomparable magnificence, nor could be satisted with the sight. Overcome with delight and transported out of themselves, they fell flat on the ground, clasping his feet in their bands. Bott hey racious lord potting his lotus hand upon their heads qunckly raised them up.

Dohá 153.

And again said, - "Be assured that you have found favour with me: ask whatever boon you will, the largest gift you can think of."

Chaupái 149.

On hearing the lord's words they clayed their hands in prayer, and taking courage that spoke in timid scents, —"U lord, we have seen your lots Irel, and our every object has been accomplished. Ter one longing remain, and I know not complished the constraint of attainment. It is easy, my master, for you to give; hat so far as my meanness is concerned, it is difficult. Like a legger who has found the wishing-tree, but trembles to ask for too good fortone, not realizing its fall power, so my heart is troubled by doubt. O my god, you read all hearts and know what I wish; grant my desire."—"O bing, feat not, but ask of me; there is nothing I woull not give you."

Daha 154.

"O gracious lord, I will declare honestly the crowning boon; for what concealment can there be? I would have a son like you."

Chupái 150.

On seeing his love and hearing his sincere words, said the Compresionate, "So be it." "Where can I go to find your equal?" "I myself, O king, will be born as your son." Then seeing Sataruje with her hands still chaped, —"O lady, ask whisterer hoon you please." "O my lord, the boon my hutband has wirely asked is what I too should not be the still be soon my hutband has wirely asked is what I too should not have confirmed it. You are father of all the gold, the lord of the world, the supreme spirit, the combined is the lord of the world, the supreme spirit, the combined is a suprementally to the lord of the world, the supreme spirit, the combined is a suprementally the supremental spirit words cannot fail. O my god, the blirs that is supject and the future state that is stained by your owns servasis—

Dala 155.

In your mercy grant to me even that bliss, that state, that devotion, that love to your feet, that knowledge, and that existence."

Chaupai 151,

Hearing this modest and deeply tonching petition, the Compassionate gently replied:—"Fear not; whatever your mind desires that I have granted. O mother, your supernatural wisdom by my favour shall never fail." Then again spoke Mann, howing at his feet,—"I too have another petition, my lord. Is there any one who will not call me fool for devoting myself to your feet simply on account of a son? As a canko's hood without a jrwel, or a fish without water, so is my life dependent upon you. Begging this boon, ho remained classing, his feet till the All-mercifal said,—"Be it so: now, as I order, go and dwell at Indra's capital.

Sorathá 18.

There, father, enjoy yourself freely; and again, when some time has passed, be born as the King of Aradh, and I will be your son.

Chaupdi 152.

Volontarily assuming human guise, I will manifest myself in your house, father, and, with every element of my divinity incurants will do great deeds for the consolation of my people. Blessed are they who listen reservenly; quitting the vain conceits of self-they shall gast over the ocean of life. Even the Primal Energy, by whom the critible world was created, that self-sume shadow of me here present, shall also become incarnate. I will accomplish your desire; true is my promise, true, aye i true." Again a gain thus saying, the compassionate lord vasibled out of sight, and the wedded pair, full of faith in the All-meroiful, stayed for a while at the hermitage, and then, when their time was come, passed painlessly out of the body and took up their abode in Amaravati, the city of the immortals.

Dold 156.

Such was the pious legend which Siva related to Umá. Hearken now, O Bháradvúja, to yet another motive for Ráma's incarnation.

Chaupdi 153.

Listen, great saint, to the boly and boxey tale as it was repeated by Sambhu to Girjiá. There is a world-kamone country called Kekaya, and Satya-ketu was its king. A champion of religion; a storehouse of good policy; great in glory, magnifecence, virtue and power. He had two gallent sons, atannch in fight, endowed with every good quality. The sleft and the heir to the kingdom was named tratigabhána, and the other Ari-mardan, of unequalled strength of arm and hies a rock to stand the brant of lastice. The sympathy between brother and brother was perfect, and their mutual affection without either flaw or disgoined. To the elder son the king resigned the realm, and with-drew into the wood to dected himed to religion.

Dola 157.

When Pratapa-bhann became king, proclamation was made throughout all the land: Under a sovereign so skilled in sacred lord not a speck of sin will be allowed anywhere.

Chaupdi 154.

The prime minister, Dharma-ruchi, a second Sokrat, was as deroted to the king as he was wise. With a prodent connection, valued kinsmen, himself a glorious leader in war, with a countless host of horse and foot, and chariots and explants, and lighting men teyand number, all eager for the fray, the king might well rejoice as he impretted his army 'mil the clash of tumottroom smiss.

I I read this couplet as follows: Bhilds bhilds person seads, solds describilities for laid of annits teem lengthemed and spring print. Both is brown to fire point on arreine, but in the particular bothshort it as pears to fractionable the contrate who have to the tear-read substitution all more of length the more to the particular bothshort in the particular substitution all more of length following to the more of the particular substitution all more of length following the more substitutions all more of length following the more substitutions all more of length following the more substitutions and substitutions are substitutions and substitutions are substitutionally substitutions and substitutions are substitutionally substitutions and substitutions are substitutionally substitutions are substitutionally substitutions and substitutions are substitutionally substitutions and substitutions are substitutionally substitutions and substitutions are substitutions.

² The report of the plant | Fukra (Venue) in the preceptor of the Dairyan, of Tiese.

a special force, bent on universal conquest. In all his cross battles, wherever they took place, the pride of a was abased; all the seven continents were reduced he might of his arm, and their princes escaped only syment of tribute. At that time Pratapabhanu became ole monarch of the whole round world.

ing selected an auspicious day, he marched forth

Dona 158.

laving thus subdued the universe by the might of his be re-entered his capital and devoted himself in turn siness, duty, love and religion.

Chaurdi 155.

be grateful earth, invigorated by Pratapabhanu's became a very Kamadhenu, and all his subjects, both and women, happy and free form all annoy, grew in and beauty. The minister Dharma-ruchi, devoted it of Hari, lovingly instructed his lord in state policy; it did his king ever fall in due reverence either to his all teacher, or the gods, or the sints, or his departed ors, or the Brahmans. All the duties which are edupon kings in the Veda he carefully and gladly med; every day he made large offerings and heard riptures read, both the Veda and the Paraines; and instructed many baths and wells and tank, flower is and beautiful orchards, handsome monasteries mules, and shor restored everyancing thing.

Doka 159.

r every single excribice enjoined in the scriptures or ranss the king in his zest performed a thousand. Chauses 156 his heart there was no siming after alvantage, but as his supreme knowledge and intelligence that he sed to God the whole merit of all his thoughts, words, sinces the day he mounted his gallent steed and such his retinus equipt for the chape, into a dense with his retinue equipt. For the charge, into a dense, if the Vin hispar's immunities and killed many fine. As he ranged the wood, he specia wild hour, showil the foliage Lie Hight with the moon in his clutch; too large to be emissible in his mouth, though his of the foliage like fight with the moon in his clutch is too large to be entired in his mouth, though his till not saffer him to entirely decorge it. The res hear with steepled lid tooks, as I have described them, and its wast limbs of immeasurable bulk, growled when he heard the tramp of the horse : it, too, at the sight started and pricked up its ears.

Daha 160.

On seeing the buge boar, resembling some purple mountain-peak, the horse started saide, and it was only by much spurring and persuation that the king could prevent it from breaking away,

Chaupdi 157.

When it saw the horse coming on with speed, the beast took to flight swift as the wind, keeping close to the ground as it went, and ever regarding the shaft which the king had at ance fitted to his bow. Taking steady sim he let it fly ; but the boar saved bimself by his wiliness, and rushed on now well in sight, and now altogether hidden, while the king in much excitement follow closely on his track At length it reached a dense thicket impenetrable by horse or elephant. Though slone in the wood and distressed by his exertions, still the king would not abandon the chase; till the boar seeing him so determined slunk away into a deep cave. When the king perceived that there was no getting near him, he was quite sail, and moreover he had lost his way in this hant through so great a forest.

Dol.4 161.

Hongry and thirsty and exhausted with fatigue the king and his horse kept searching in much distress for a stream or nond, and were half dead for want of water.

Chanpdi 158.

As he wandered through the forest, he spied a bermitage where dwelt a king in disguise of a holy man the had been despoiled of his kingdom by Pratapabhann, and had left his army on the field of lattle, knowing that his adversary's star was in the ascendant and his own in the decline. Too proud to meet the king, too much mortified to go home, nursing the rage in his heart, he like a beggar, though a prince, took up his abode in the wood in the garb of an anchorite. He at once recognized King Pratapabhann as he drew near ; but the latter was too tired to recognize him, and looking only at his dress took him to Lea bely man, and alighting from his horse saluted him ; be was, bowever, too setute to declare his name.

Deld 162.

Seeing the king to be faint with thirst, he pointed out o bim a fine roud, where he bathed and drank, both he in I his horse, with much glulness.

Chaurdi 159.

All his weariness passed away and he was quite happy again. The hermit took him to his cell and, as the sun bal now set, showed him where he might rest; hat yet enquired of him in courteous tones,-" Who may you be, and why, thus young and beautiful, do you risk your life by roaming alone in the forest? You have all the marks of a great sovereign and at the sight of you I am quite move !." "Know then, reverend sir, that I am the minister of King Pratapabhanu ; in pursuit of the chase I have lost my way, and by great good fortune have been brought into your presence To get a sight of you was no easy matter, and I am satisfied that something good is about to befall me." Said the hermit, -" My son, it is now dusk, and your city is seventy leagues away.

Dokd 163-4.

The night is dark, the forest dense, and the road not easy to find. Tarry then here for to-day and start to-morrow at dawn. Says Tulsi-Fate is furthered in its own way; either you go to meet it, or itself comes and carries you off.

Chaupdi 160.

"Very well, my lord, I obey your command; "and so saying the king tied up his horse to a tree and came and ant down. With many flattering speeches he bowed at his feet, extolling his own good fortune, and at last in modest and winning terms put the question, - " Regarding you, my lord, as a father, I make bold and beg of you to look upon me as your son and servant and to declare to me your name." Now the king did not recognize him, but he recognized the king, and was as false and crafty as the king was honest: moreover, being an enemy, and at the same time both a warrior by caste and of royal birth, he was bent on accomplishing his own ends, whether by fraud or by right. In his enmity he was grieved to see the king's prosperity, and his heart within him burned as with the fire of a furnace; but on hearing the prince's simple words he controlled his resentment and was glad at heart.

Dol.4 165.

And uttered yet another smooth but false and ariful speech, -" My name is now Bhikhári, a homeless beggar."

Changdi 161.

Baid the king,— Philosophers like you, with whom all rell-consciousness has been extinguished, exer conceal their own personality, and are in every way blessed, though their outer gath be wretched. Therefore the minist procision should in men's area that it is the poor whom lists holds most dear. A poor and homeless begger, such as you are, is an analety to Birchmá and Sixus at all events. I protrate uspell at your feet and beg of you to grant my your grace. When he was the kings simple affection he wared all the more confirmt, and won him over in every way, using world with a still greater show of freed-liness,—"Hearken, O king, while I relate the truth of the matter. I have for a long time deed there.

Bal4 166.

And till now neither has any one come to me, nor bare I spoken to any one; for worldly honour is like a fire, and remance a forest for it to consume."

Soratha 19.

East Tulei:-Pools are decrived by last appearances, but not nise ment though a peacock is fair to look apon and its voice is pleasant, it yet it devours the soaks.

Chaujde 162.

"Therefore I have returned as the would, and, was Hari, have no craw whatever. The Lord knows everything without being tell you what to to be guard by conclusting the world? But you are no good and sensite that I cannot beat leary not in return for the faith and confidence you have lared in mee and if I were to send you away, my con, it would be a very greerous no on my part." I he more the

I The quarted a more than marrier to the and glomesta to proof that of most be not to make a time as pulse of the country to the ... Therefore following the state of the transfer of the state of the following that the state of t hermit talked of his detachment from the world, the more trustful graw the hing; till at lest the false anchorite, sening him completely in his power, said,—"My name, brother, is Ektanu" (one hosly). The king bowel and sakel further,—"Tell me, I pray, the meaning of this name, for surely I am your servant."

Dola 167.

"At the first dawn of creation my birth took place, and my name was Ektann, for this reason that I have never taken any other hody.

Chaupdi 163,

"Marrel not in your mind, my son; for nothing is too difficult for penance. By the power of penance the Creator created the world; by the power of penance Sishun is the great redeemer; by the power of penance Sira works destruction; and to penance stere is nothing in the world impossible." The king, as he listened, was charmel, for home creating old-world stories; many legends of plous deeds and holy lives; examples of ascoticism and drivine wisloun; takes of the birth, preservation, and destruction of the world, and innumerable other marvellors arratives. The king, as he listened, yielded completely to his influence, and proceeded to tell him his true nume. Said the hermit, —"O king, I knew you; though you tried to practise a trick upon me, took it quite in good not.

Sorathá 20.

"Hear, O king; it is a political maxim?that on some occasions a king should not declare his name; and when I observed your excellent aggacity I conceived a great affection for you.

Chaupdi 164.

"Your name is Pratápubhánu, and your father is king Satyaketu. O sir, a spiritasi man knows everything, there is no need of another's telling. Ah, my son, when I beheld your natural goodness, your faith and trustilaess, and your knowledged state-oraft, there sprung up an affection for you in my soul, and I told you my own story as you saked me. Now I son well pleased with your doubt not, but ask whatever you will." On hearing these his words the king was delighted, and clasying his feet entreated him supplicantly,—"O merciful saint, by the sight of you the four objects of human desire have all come within my grasp. Yet, as I see my lord so gracious, I will ask so impossible boon and be happy for ever.

Dold 168.

May I die of old age, free from bodily pain; may I never be conquered in battle: may earth sid of every foe be all under my sole sway, and may my empire last for a hundred ages."

Chaupdi 165.

Said the anchorite,—"O king, so be it; there is, however, one difficulty; has it. The age shall bow down before you, with the sole exception of the Brithmans. By the victor of pecacoa a Brahman is ever powerful, and there is none who can deliver from his weath. If you can reduce them to your will, Brahma, Vishun and Mahidera will also be at your command. But against a Brithman might is of no avail; with both arms raised to beaven I tell you this solemn truth. Hearken, O king, if you escape a Brithman's carse, your destruction shall never be." On hearing his promise the king was glad,—"Then, my lord, my destruction will never be; by your favour, most gracious sir, I shall be prospectors for all time."

Dehá 169.

"Amen," eaid the false bermit, and added with crafty intent, -- "If you let any one know of your losing your way and your meeting with me, that will not be my fault.

Chaupái 166.

"For I warn you, sir, that it is most inexpedient to repeat the matter; if it come to a bird pair of ears, I tell you true it will be your ruin. If you divalge this secret, or if a Brihman occurs you, you are modene, O Prasipabhan. When Hari and Hara are wroth, wretched man has no other way of ecceps." "Tree, my lord," said the king, clasping his feet; "who can deliver from the wrath of a Brihman or a spiritual director? The gure can save from Brahma's anger, but if the gure hisself be worth, there is none in the world that can save. If it do not follow your advise, I have disturbed by one fear; the occurs of a Brichman is comething most terrible.

Dohd 170.

"Of your great goodness, tell me in what way I can win over the Brahmans: for except you, my gracious lord I have no other friend."

Chaupdi 167.

"Hearken, O king, there are diverse expedients among men, but hard to put in practice and of doublitd issue. There is, however, one very simple plan, though even this lavedvee a difficulty. Its contrivance depends upon me, and for me to go to your cepital se not of the question; for to this day from the time I was born I have never entered house or village. It I do not go, it will be a misfortane for you; and thus I am in a dilemma." The king replied in gentle tones, "I tis, my lord, a maxim of scriptors that the great show kindness to the small; thus mountains ever bear tiny grasses on their head; the fathouses occurred to the draw of the draw in the fortune of the draw in the floating foam, and earth on its head bears the draw."

Dold 171.

Thus eaying and embracing his feet, the king cried,—
"Be gracious, O my lord, ever pitiful to the faithful in distrees, and take this trouble on my behalf."

Chaupdi 168.

Perceiving that the king was altogether under his influence, the hermit, the arch-deceiver, said,—" Hearken, O king; I tell you truly there is nothing in the world I cannot do, and as you show yourself in thought, word and action to be devoted to me, I will assuredly accomplish your object for you. The power of magical devices, peannes and spells works only when secreey is maintained. If, O king, I act as cook and serve, without any one knowing me, whoever tastes the food so prepared shall become amenable to your orders; and, further, any one who eats in their house will, I tell you, be in your power. Go now and carry out this scheme: make a wor for a whole year.

Dald 172.

and every day entertain a new set of a hundred thousand Brahmans with their families; while I, as long as the yew lasts, will provide the daily banquet.

Chaupái 169.

"In this way, O king, there will be very little trouble, and all the Bráhman will be in your power. They again will perform ascrificial services, and thus the gods, too, will be easily won over. And I will give you a sign. I will not come in this dress, but by my deliusive power I will bring away your family priest, and by the virtue of penance will make him look like myself and keep him here for the year; while I ho his form will manage everything for you. The night is far gone, so now take rest; on the third day we will meet again. While you are saleep I, by my penilectial rower, will couver you home, both you and your horses.

Dold 173.

"I will then come in the form I have told you, and you will recognize me when I call you on one side and remind you of all this."

Chaupdi 170.

The king, as ordered, retired to his couch, while the archiceciere took his wonted seat. Deep sleep came upon the weary king; but what sleep for the other, distraught with care? Then came the demon Kalakte, who was the boar that had led the king artsy, a great friend of the bermit king, and skilled in manifold ways of deceit. He bad a headred sons and ten brothers, commatched in villainy, the terment of the gods; but they had all before this been killed in battle by the king, who raw the distress they had canced to the Brahman, smitt and powers of hearen. The wretch, nursing this old quarrel, combined with the bermit king in devising a plot for the detrectation of his enemy. The prince, overmantered by fate, knew nothing of the

Dola 174.

A powerful foe, even though surprised alone, is not to be lightly regarded; to this day likhu, though he has nothing left but his head, is able to awney both sun and moon.

Chaurdi 171.

When the bermit king saw his ally, he rose in great joy to meet him, and told his friend the whole story. The demon was glad and said,—"lifear, O king, I am ready to settle your enemy if you will take my advice. Free yourself of all anxiety and sleep quiety beer; without taking any me icine. Got has carel your complaint, I will aware away the enemy, root carel branch, and in four drys will be back again." Having thus cheered the bennik took the parties Preshpobling will askep, but him and his barre is the king be put to bell bride his queen, and the hourse has the day in this wall.

Dold 175.

Again he carried off the king's family priest, and by supernatural power depriying him of his senses, kept him in a case in the mountain.

Chrujdi 172.

While he himself assumed the priests form and wend and by down on his comptons conche. At daylores the king woke and was astonished to find himself at home. Much impressed with the hermit's power, he rose and went out unperceived by the queen, and mounting his horse rode off the wood without any of the people to he inly knowing it. When it was moon he returned, and in every house there was rejoicing, with music and singing When he saw the family priest, he looked at him in amazement, remuebering the work in hand. The three days seemed like an age, so absorbed was he in expectation of the false hermit's coming. When the appointed time had come, the priest took the king and told him the whole plot.

Doka 176.

The king was delighted to recognize the guru, and was too infatuated to have any sense left, but at once sent and invited a hundred thousand Brahmans with their families.

Chaupái 173.

The priest appenintended the cooking, and in accordance with sacred prescription concocted the six tastes in the four different ways!, preparing a most seductive banquet, with succe and condiments more than any one could count. After dressing a great variety of mest, the wretch introduced into the dish some pieces of a Brábmano's fieth. He then summoned all the Brábmans to the feast and washed their feet and politely showed them to their places. But directly they began to touch the food, a voice came Irom beaven,— "Dr, up, all ye Brishmens and return to your bonnes; though the loss be great, yet teste not the food; there is Brishman's field in the dish." Up rows all the boly men, believing the heavenly voice; while the king, distracted and out of his senses, over-mestered by fate, could not utter a word.

I The six pastes are sith sweet, madhue; mour ands; 'esit,' leceas; 'pangent,' hate; 'bitter,' title, and 'astringent,' hathige. The four ways in which lood can be taken are blackable, by mantication; shejya, by deginition; sheshya, by sacking, and lehya, by inpoing.

Doha 177.

Then cried the Brahmans in their wrath, regardless of what must follow, —" O foolish king, take birth in demon's form yourself and all your family.

Chaupsi 174.

"O noble prince, you invited all this Bráhmanical company here simply to destroy un; God has preserved our honour, and it is you and your race who are undons. You shall perish in the midst of four days, nor shall there be one left to effer libations to your ghost." When the king beard the course how as terror-stricken. Again a votice cause from heaven,—"The Bráhmans have uttered this curse without due consideration, the king has committed no crime." All the Bráhmans were satounded when they heard the heaven-ty voice. The king hastered to the kitchen; there he found neither food nor Bráhmans cook, and he turned away in deep thought, declared the whole history to the Bráhmans, and in his terror and distress threw himself upon the ground.

Dah 178.

"Though you, O king are guiltless, what is fated fails not; the past is unatterable; a Brahman's curse is a terrible thing."

Chaupdi 175.

So sying, all the Brahmans went their way. When the people of the city heard the news, they were uncold worded and abosed Fate, who had begon upon a swan and sended in making crow. The demon conveyed the family priest to the paties and told the hermit all the tidings. Then the westerh depatched letters in all directions; a host of princes came in with their troops, and with blast of trumpets beleagued the city. Day after day there were battless of vurious kinds; all his champions fell in fight, after doing valorously, and the king with his brother, but the dast. Not one of Satyaketu's family escaped, for a Brahman's curse can rever fail of accomplishment. Triumphing over their foe, the chiefs refounded the city, and then, crowned with victory, returned to their own states.

Dola 179.

Hearken, Bharadraja, whoever incars the anger of heaven, for him a grain of dust becomes vast as Mount Meru, a father like the angel of death, and every rope a snake.

Chaupdi 176.

Hearken, reverend sir; in due time this Reji, with his family, was born as a demon with ten heads and twenty atms, a formidable here, by name Révan. The king's younger brother, Ari-mardan, became the valinat Kombhara, while the minister Dharma-ruchi became his half-brother, the world-famous Vibhishan, the all-wise votary of Vishon. As for the king's sons and servants, they were born a flerce demon crew; westches, taking various shapes at will: wicked, moastrous and devoid of knowledge; mercilless, injorious, criminal—a torment to all creation beyond what words can tell.

Dohd 180.

Though born in the incomparably pure and holy lamily of Pulartya, 1 yet on account of the Brahmans' curse all were of hateful mien.

Chaupdi 177.

The three brothers practised manifold penitential observances, serves beyond all description; in the Creator devening to witness them, and said,—" Son. I am well pleased see a boom." The Teo-based sepplicably clarged his feet and cried,—" Hear, O lord of earth i I would die at the land of some save man or monkey." Beahmá and I granted him his boom, saying,—" So be it 1700 have done great penance." Then the lord west to Kumbhakaran, and was astounded at his appearance,—" If this wretch is always easing, the whole world will be hald water." So he said Sarawail to turn his head, and he asked for six month's alumber.

l The pairtanch ?n'astyn was the father of Varana; and the latter, by the bandmains, who had been given him by Kavet, beget [1] fidean and Kuwbha karn, [2] Vichisban, and [3] Khara and Sappanable.

Doha 181.

Then he went to Vibhishan and said,-" Son, ask a boon: "and he asked for perfect love of God.

Chaupdi 178.

After granting these bones Brahms' departed, and they went home rejoicing. Now Mays had a daughter by name Mandodari, of exceeding heatty, a jewel of womankind, whom her father brought and made over to Hávan, and she became the demon's head-queen. Delighted at having obtained so good a wife, he next went and married hit two brothers. In the middle of the ocean is a three peaked monantain, by Brahms's contrivance most difficult of access and jewels, more beautiful and charming thus Bhogavari, the city of the screen kings, or Indra's capital Amaravati, and called it Lanks, a same demost the world.

Dohd 182-83.

The deep ocean was its most, washing its four sides; and its massive walls were of gold, set with jewels in a way that defies description. In every age the Denon King, whom Heri predestines, lives there with his army, as a mighty said puissant chief.

Chaupdi 172.

There had dwelt great demon warriors, but all had been also in but by the gods; and now by Indevê commission it was occupied by a million guards of Kuver's. Réwan happened to hear of this, and at once marshalled his sarry and went and besieged the piece. When the Yakhas saw the vast host of Gerea warriors, they all fled for their lives. Therespon Révan inspected the whole of the city, and was so highly pleased with it that all his trouble was forgotten. Seeing that it was not only a beautiful, but also a naturally impregnable, nie, he fixed the capital three, and assigning quarters to his followers according to their several deserts, made them all quite happy. Upon one occasion he salled forth against Kuver, and carried sway his chariot of flowers at a teophy.

Doha 184.

Again, from mere lightness of heart, he went and overthrew Kailas, and after thus testing the provess of his men of war, waxed yet more jubilant than before.

Chaupdi 180.

His happiness and prosperity, the number of his sons, his army and his allies, his conquests, his might and his superior wisdom, all grew day by day more and more, in the same way as avaries grows with gain. Thus, too, his brother, the stalwart Rumbha-karo, was a champion without a match in the world. After drinking his fill he slept for six months, and at his waking the three worlds trenbled. If he had taken a meal every day the whole world would soon have been stript bare: so unpeakably stanneh in fight was be that no other hero could be compared to him. His eldest son was Meghnád, who held the first place song the world's champion; before whom none could stant in the battle; who was seep harquising the give of heaven.

Doha 185.

And many other demons were there, each by himself able to subdue the whole world, such as the hideous Kumukh, the dauntless Akampan, Kuliss-radd with teeth like thunderbolts the fiery Dhumra-ketu, and the huge Atikāya;

Chaupái 181.

Taking form at will, skilled in every kind of fraud, without ever a thought of piety or pity. One day the Tenheaded was saated in court and reviewed his innumerable retainers, sons and grandsons, friends and servants, troops of demons, more than any one could count. On seeing the host, he swelled with pride, and in fierce tones said,—"Hearken, all ye demon troops, the host of heaven are my enemies, nor dare to stand up in open fight, but flee away at the sight of my great army. Here is none way of effecting their death, which I will declare; now listen to it. Go ye and put a stop to all feasting of Bráhmans, to every sacrifice, oblation and funeral rite;

Dohá 186.

The forthwith the faint and hungry gods will come out to meet me, and whether I slay them or let them go, they will be equally in my power."

Chaupdi 182.

Again he called for Meghnad and exhorted him to yet greater courage and resentment,—"The strong and warlike gods, who venture to confront you, you must vanquish and bring here in chains." Up rose the son to perform his father's commands. In this manner he ordered all, and himself sallied forth, club in hand. As he marched the earth shock, the heaven thundered, and pains of premature labour overtook the pregnant spouses of the gods. The good themselves, on hearing of Riwara's wrathful approach, sought the caves of Mount Mern. As he approached in turn each of the eight quarters of the globs, be found it describe the transfer of the grant of the cave the state of the gods. As the supercached in turn cash of the eight quarters of the globs, and mad with last of blood traversed the whole universe in search of a forman, nor could saywhere disover one.

An interpolation,

When Nárad mes him, he said with a smile,—" Saint, where are the gods? show them to me." Nárad was not pleased to hear of his villaisy, and Iorthwith sent him to White land. When he crossed the ocean and arrived on the other side, he saw a company of women, and said to them.—"Go stell your husbands that the king of the demons is here; then I will conquer them in battle and take you away to my own bone." On hearing this speech an ancient dame waxed wroth and ran and seized him by the feet and threw him up into the air; then after going a long way scratching and clawing, she gave him a good shake and pitched him with great violence into the middle of the sea.

Dohd 187.

Senseless, but by the Brahman's blessing still alive, he sank down into hell; then with a roar sprang up again all unburt, with a soul unmoved either by joy or sorrow.

Chaupdi 183.

After taking and pillinging the Niggs's capital, the enemy of haven passed on to Balis realm. When the Dwarf heard of Risran's coming and how he had scoffed at Nărad the goâl 'teacher, the lord induced his own strength into all the children playing in the streets, who ran and seized him and brought him into the town, while every man and woman in the place flocked to see the sight.—" Where on earth can bearen have brought such a creature from, with its teenty arms and ten heads? "Though the guards bound him and versel him sees, he would rather dis that set il its name; in excell him sees, he would rather dis than set il its name; in the Mervital then had kim a beautiful the passed with the set when the conferented, and the Mervital then had kim a beautiful the passed with the next him one besister.

Dold 188-189.

Shameless, pitiless, and over bent on mischief, the tenheaded miscreant thought to conquer Ráms. Hearken, Bháradvájn; if God is wroth with a man, his diamonds turn to bits of glass that are not worth a cowry.

Chaupdi 184.

Where ever he found a stray god or Bráhman he frightened him into payment of ransom, and this is the way he went on day and night, the black-hearted ruffina. Then haste he came to Fampapar, the seat of the monkey-kin Báli, and beheld the beautiful lake that would charm t soul even of the greatest saint, where the monkey-king a aboorbed in contemplation. He smilled to see the Te headed, and Rávan shouted in a fury,—" You wretche senseless, hypocritical ape, I no sconer heard your nan then I came at once; have done with your cowardice at meet me in battle.

Dohd 190.

Unless you can vanquish me in combat your meditation are vain," said the demon king, gnashing his 320 teeth.

Chupdi 185.

Sail Bill.,—" Away, I want no fighting; he wise an take your ten heads home. Your valour, friend, is undiryuted, for I hear of rone victories all over the world," In Bill's reiterated advice had not the alightest effect; and a last the monkey king aprang up in a rage and selted Rivas and nipped him tight under his arms, and then forgot a shoot him for the space of ten months. One day as braited hat lands to offer a labation to the sun, Rivan aligned out of his catches and ran awar. Next he went, heins still without either shime or scraph, to where the thousand-sarmed Scharzshhaj was sporting in the water.

Dola 191.

Orean was troubled at Ráyan's mights the court began to sink, a '1 Sahamabahu cried in a rage, —' What rival of mice is here to-day?'

Chaupde 186.

Then he went and saw where Rivan stood, by whose gust arms the water was agitated. Potent in artifice as in strength of I mb, he with a load cry seized the king of Lanks and kept him tied up for some days in his stable—a sight of wooder for his wires. He was sabamed to sell his unane, though the wice king was ever saking, and Rambhh and her companions danced about him and set a lightled torch to each of his ten heads. Then saint Pulsatys came and set him free. Next he work and got current by Nals.

Dold 192.

On the road he spied a most incomparably beautiful damsel, with sandal-wood and flowers and leaves in her hand, going to worship Tripurari.

Chaupdi 187.

Urrasi was abashed at seeing him, but Rávan addressed her in gentle tones,—"Who are you haly, and where are you going? She was too much overcome with modesty to give him an answer. Being mad with but, be took no heed, but seized her by the hand, though she was the wite of Kruwrisson. When he recognized her, there came upon him remores and repeatance for the sevil deed, and much troubled at heart the king of Lankis returned to his capital. Urvesi went study to Alaka and told Nala-Kruwr. In great wrath he uttered this curse,—'May the race of Rávan perish.' The curse went to Lanki where Rávan was seated, and stood before him. He trembled with dismay at the sight.

Doha 193.

Submitting to the curse, be thought within himself that be had never taken any tribute from the monks; so in a fury,

Chaupai 188.

He sent four messengers to a holy man's herminge, who on seing them forget sil about the Supreme Spritt and asked them of their welfare, spring,— Tell me, is all well with Ladak's king i. "Reversed sir, all is well with him, and he wants your tribute-moory." On hearing this speech be was much alarmed, and forgetful of his vow began to think within himself,— It is ill going compty-handed to a court where justice is not, and where a pack of villains are banded together. So he gave them sjr, which he had felle with blood taken from his own body, and made it over to the messengers, saying, -" Go tell the king.

¹ Ráran and Karer were both sons, by different mothers, of one father, Vistaras, and Urrasi was thus Ráran's nicce by murriage Hence in violating bet he had been raity not only of adultary but also of increa.

Doha 194.

If the jar is opened, death will come upon you and your family." The messengers in haste took the jar to the king's court at Lanká.

Chaupdi 189.

Rávan was pleased at the sight of the jar, and the Messengers then told him what the saint had said. On hearing the curse his heart harned within him, and he said,—"Take the jar away to the north and carefully put it in the ground where no one can find it." They took it to Jack's dominious and there buried it in a field. There Janak, to the preparing for a sacrifice, was divining a golden plough; the offspring of the saint's blood sprang up out of the furrow and was carried off by Garr. Her blessed name was first Jánaki, but Nárad afterwards came and directed that it should be Sita', and explained all the circumshuces as above related. The great saint then left; the metengers also resurned to Lankå, and Lankå's lord, though worsted in four places, still greatly troubled the gods.

(Here ends the interpolation).

The sun and moon; the wind; Varuna and Kuver; fire, time and death, and every divine power; Kinnar; saints, men, gods and serpents, all were turned out of their course. From one end of earth to the other every living creature, whether male or female, was made subject to Rávan. All in turn do his bidding and cronch supplicatly at his feet.

Doha 195-196.

By his mighty arm he subdeed the whole universe and not a single soul independent, but acting on his and counsel exceised dominion over the whole round world. And many were the lovely dames he welded after conquest, daughters of gods and Yakshas and Gandhurvas and men and Kinantes and Nagas.

Chaupdi 190.

Whatever he told Indrajit to do was done in less time than it took to tell; hear now how the other chiefs soled to whom he gave orders. The whole demon crew, villaious at heart and foul of aspect, the torment of hearen, were ready for any outrage, disgoising themselves by the assumption of various forms and acting in every way contrary to the Veda, in order to evaluate religion. Wherever they find a cow or a Brishman, they at once set firs to the city, town or village; plous observances are no longer anywhere in existence; no respect is paid either to scriptore, or Bethamar, or spiritual instructor; there is no faith in Harl, no sacrifice, no prayer, nor alm-giving, and no one would were drawn of listening either to Veda or Parása.

The worl Site meaning 'a farrow.'

Chhand 18.

At a hint of prayer or of penance, of sacrifice, vigil or fast,
Not a moment's rest, but he hied on its quest, with a you it should be the last.

The world was sunk in lawlessness; all holy sounds were bapued;

To read a sacred text was doubt, or exile from the land, Sorath4 21.

Scratha 21.

The fearful oppression that the demons wrought is beyond description: bent on mischief, there was no limit to their evil-doing.

Chaupdi 191.

The wicked all throve; such as thieves and gamblers, and those who coveted their neighbour's wife or goods, those who honoured neither father and mother nor the gods, and those who exacted service of better ment than themselves. For people who act in this way, Bhawini, resemble demons. Seeing the general persecution of religion, earth was terror-stricken and dismayed,—the weight of mountains, lakes and sax is nothing so heavy as this one tyrant. She saw all stilt perverted, and yet for fear of Rávan could say mothing. After some consideration she took the form of a cow and went to the spot where the gods and sainst were gathered together, and with tears declared to them her distress. There was no help to be had from any one of them.

Chhand 19.

Gods and saints and heavenly minstrels, flocked they all to Bráhman's throne;

With them Earth, a horned heifer, making and and piteous mosn. 104

Pondered Brahma in his wisdom,—'All vain is belp of mine.

But a lord immortal is thy Lord, be hemy help and thine."

Saratha 22.

"Take courage, Earth," said Brahmá, "andremember Hari; the Lord knows the distress of his servants, and will put an end to this cruel oppression."

Chaupái 192.

All the gods sat in counsel,-" Where can we find the Lord and make our cry to him? Said one,- We must go to Vaikunth'; said another,- 'His home is in the ocean. Nay, this is the way of the Lord, he is ever manifest to a faithful and loving soul.' Now, Girija, I too was in the assembly and took occasion to say briefly,-" Hari is omeipresent everywhere alike, but, as I well know, is revealed by love. Tell me any place, time or quarter of the heaven where the Lord is not. Present in all creation, animate or inanimate, passionless and unbiased, he is revealed like fire by love." My words were approved by all, and Brahma exclaimed,-'Well said, well said.'

Dohá 197.

The Creator was glad at heart and thrilled with delight, while his eyes filled with tears, and clasping his immortal hands he thus composedly and deliberately chanted his praises :

Chhand 20-21.

"To the King of heaven be all glory given, refuge of creation in distress and care.

Priests and kine befriending, hell's brief triumph ending, best beloved of Lakshmi, Ocean's daughter fair.

Heaven and earth's upholder, who, than all men bolder, dares to soan the secret of thy strange mysterious way?

Ever kind and loving, humble souls approving, may thy gracious favour reach now to me, I pray.

Spirit all-pervading, fleshly sense evading, hail blokund immoral, lord of blissfulness supreme,

Ever pure and holy, whom the Queen of Folly has no power to tangle in her world-deluding dream.

OHILDROOD 105

Glory, glory, glory theme of endless story, song by saints and sages in an costasy of love.

Daily, nightly gazing on the sight amazing, source of avery blessing, Hari, lord of heaven above.
Triune incarnation, who at earth's creation, wert alone

Triume incarnation, who at earth's creation, wert also presiding, and other aid was none; Phoneh in prayer anable, and my faith unstable. O ar

Though in prayer unable, and my faith unstable, O great ain-destroyer, hear our hapless moun.

Life's slarms dispelling, all disasters quelling comfort of the faithful, be our succour naw; All the gods implore thee, falling low befor thee, with unfeigned submission of body, souland vow.

Lord God Bharavana. Ved and eke Purana. Sarada a

Lord God Bhagavána, Ved and eke Porána, Sáradá and Sesbnág, and all the saintly throng, Find the theme too spacious, only know thee gracious; hasten then to belp us in our hour of wrong.

In all grace excelling, Beauty's chosen dwelling, ark on life's dark ocean, bome of all most sweet, Gods and saints and sages, now this tempest rages, fly in Gods and asints and sages, now this tempest rages, fly consternation to class thy lotus feet."

Doha 198.

Beholding the alarm of the gods and Earth, and hearing this devout speech, a dresd voice came from beaven that removed all their doubt and anxiety, ~

Chaupdi 193.

"Fear oot, Indra and ye saints and sages; for your sak I sm shout to assume the form of a man, with every elemon of my divinity incarnate in the glorious Solar race. For the severe peasance practiced by Kasyapa and Aditi I grantee them the foll boon they asked. In the form of Dassrath and Kassalya they shall take royal birth in the city of Kossik in their home shall become incarnate the four brothers, the pride of the family of Raghu. I will folls all that Narapredicted, by mysell desconding from heaven with my eternal spouse, and will remove the whole of earth's burden."

On bearing the heavenly voice in the air the gods turned and were consoled, and Brahma exhorted Mother Earth who forgot her fears in hopefulness,

計

72 V

H

1000年

10 km

1. přípř 1. př 1. přípř 1. př

he like

Dold 199

Then Brahma proceeded to his own realm after thus instructing the gods,— Go and worship Hari upon earth I form as monkeys."

Chaupdi 194.

The gods went every one to his own abode, and will term that rest. All the orders that Brahma had give they executed gladly and without delay. Taking hirth or carth as monkeys of incomparable strength and dignity, warriors with rocks and trees and claws for weapons, they condidently awaited Harris coming, essaming in every mountain and lorest and divided among themselves into orderly troops. I have told you of their noble acts, and now you must hear of what was doing meanwhile elsewhere. The king of Aradh was nomed Danrath, the jewel of the line of Righu, well skilled in the Vedas, virtuous and wive, a defeader of the Isith, a sincere voltary of Vihnu.

I)oh4 200.

Kauralya and his other loving queens were all of holy life, faithful and affectionsts to their lord, and full of humble devotion to Hari's lotus feet.

Chaupdi 195.

One day the king was sell that he had no son, and going in lasts to his gorn's aloude fill at his feat with new year testiles and told him all his joyr and norrows. Vasibility in rely conforted him in every way.—"The concept, you will have four sone, who will be Limons throughout the three works and rid the faithful of all their feat. Then Varietts summoned Saint Single to perform a societies for the birth of a win. The saint devouly offered the chiltion, and the firegold appeared with the offering in his hall and cried in gracious tones.—"I am pleased some than I can say; whatever Vasibint has imaginal in his beart is all granted for your good. Take this chiltion, the high, and do, it is to such proportions as a proper.

DJ4 201.

Then the fre-god vanished after tailing them all of all that had to be done. The king was transported with contact and contact himself for joy

Chaupái 196.

He at once sent for his loving wives, and Kausatyá and the others came. To Kausatyá be gave a half share, and of the remaining half he made two portions, one of which he offered to Kaikeyi; what remained he again dividad into two, which be placed in the hands of Kausatyi and Kaikeyi, and they gave thom to Samitrá, to her great delight. In this manner all the queens beamn pregensal, and they grave glad of heart with exceeding joy. From the day that Hari was concoived in their womb the whole world was fulfilled with happiness and presperity, and the queens shone resplended in the palace, full of beauty, virtue and glory. Some little time was that happilly speat, till the day artired for the Lord to be revealed.

Dold 202.

我所知以我們可以問於此

Auspicious was the conjunction of the planets in an auspicious louse; auspicious the moment; auspicious the day of the week and of the month; and fall of delight was all creation, animate and inanimate, when Rama, father of delights. was born.

Chaupdi 197.

On the ninth day of the sweet and boly month of Chait; in the bright lumar fortnight; under Abhligh, his favorite constellation; on a seasonable day neither hot nor cold, a shly time of rest for all; with soft, cook, fragrant bereast blowing; midst the delight of gods and heartfelt raptore of the saint; while the woods were full of biscomass the hills with gents, and every river flowed a stream of noctar. When the Creator saw the time so fit, all the gods had their chariots equipped and came forth. The bright heaven was crowded with the bast of them; troops of Gandharvas chanted heroic lays if lowers were raised down by haddals; the sky re-connoided with the bast of kettle-drams; tarpents, saints and gods hymned his praises, and each in his own freshion tendered him service.

Dold 203.

Thus meekly did all the gods return to their several abodes when the Lord was revealed, who is the abode of the world, and in whom all the world finds rest.

Chhand 24-27.

From Kaumlya's blessed womb the great god at last has come, in response to a lost world's plaint,

And she gazes with what joy on the face of her dear by that would rapture the soul of a saint,

A vision of delight, with his eyes so large and brigh and this body as a cloud dark and grand,

By the garland on his breast and his four arms confe

Kharari, with a weapon in each hand.

With fingers locked in prayer she cries,-" How may dare, O lord god immortal, thy boundless praise to tel

Far above the world's confusion and reason's vain intri sion, whom all the scriptures witness incomprehensible

Whom saints and holy sages have hymned through all th ages, the fountain compassion, the source of evergrace.

Who age with Lakshmi reignest, thou, even thou, now deignest to be my son and succour thy sore-tried choses race.

Though we know by revelation, heaven and earth and all creation, in each bair upon thy body may be found,

In my arms thou sweetly dreamest, O mystery supremest, far beyond the comprehension of a sage the most profound."

Smiled the lord at her devotion and would fain bave set in motion the magic that dazzles the crowd, Telling all he had done and the triumphs he had won that his mother of her son might be proud. But harriedly she cried,-" My soul is terrified by these marvels, disperse them from my sight; Let me see thee as a child, disporting free and wild, for in this is my greatest delight." She spoke and he obeyed, and at once in fashion made us un infant began to cry. Know that all who sing this lay, and in faith to Hari pray, shall in peace rest for ever when they die.

Dobd 204.

For the sake of Bráhmans, cows and gods and saints he took birth as a man, in a body formed at his own will, he who is beyond all form, or quality, or perception of the senses.

Chaurdi 198.

On bearing the delightful cound of a buby's cries, all the queees came greatly agitated; their glad handmaids ran hither and all the people of the city were drowned in joy. When Dasarath knew he had a son born, his joy was like that of the blest in heaven; with his son fall of love and his body quivering with delight he sought to rise, but could not till he had collected himself,—"The lord, whose very rame it is bliss to hear, has come to my hone." Thus rejoicing at heart the king sent for minstels to play, and next summoned the gurn Vasishta, who came to the count with a train of Rehmans. He weet and gazed upon the perfess habe, hat its beauty and grace were beyond words to fell.

Dohd 205.

Then after performing the Nandi-mukh Srddhl he completed every caste observance, and the king made offerings to the Brahmans of gold, cows, plates and jewels.

Chaupdi 199.

The city was full of flags and banners and festal wreaths arranged in a manner that defies description. Showers of flowers from beaven and every roul was rept in blies. There was a concerne of troops of women who had come running in their ordinary dress just as they were at the time, with golden vases and salvers laden with things of good omen, singing as they entered the king's owner. After passing their offerings round and round over the child's bead, they strew them on the ground, and again and again throw themselves at his feet, while bards and minstrels, singing men and chorister chant the solemon praises of Raghundith Every one omsde an offering of all that he bad, and no one kept what was given him; while muck, andals and saffron were thrown shout in such profusion that the streets were muddy with perfumes.

¹ The Mindlewich Scidalit is a commensurative offering to the Mance preliminary to any propen occasion, such as ministice, merriage, Ac., in which since balls of ment are offered to the decreased father, grandstater, and great-grandstater to the noticesal grandstater, grands

1344 206.

In every homen there was music and the jubilant shout,— "fountain of joy has been revealed;" and all the men and women in the city were rejoicing everywhere.

Chaurdi 200.

Both Katkeyi and Somitra too gave birth to a lovely boy. At that time the joy, the ampiciounnes, and the crowdi were more thin Sarsevati or the septent king could describe. The city of Aveth was a repleadent as it were Might going to meet her bord. The sun, alwahed at the vision, faired into twilight, where the dicky clouds of income were shott through with red gleams of after the piles of jewels in the temples were like store, and the golden prinntels of the palice as the gracious mono, while the marmering sound of the muttered Veda in the honce was like the evening vong of garraloss bird. Garing upon the spectacle the sun forgot himself, and a whole month passed without his knowing it.

Doha 207.

The day was a month long, but the marrel was noticed of none—while the sun in his chariot stood still at gaze, how could there be any night?

There was not one who observed the strange event, and at the sun set still chanting Ráma's praises. The golds, saints and Nágas too, who had witnessed the spectacle, returned home, congratulating themselves on their good fortene. I will even tell you of a deception I practised myster Bhasandi and I were there together in human form, without any one knowing it. Fall of rapture, love and delight, we roamed about the streets in cestatic uncoarcionsness. Only one on whom rests the mercy of Ráma can attain to the knowledge of these acts of ours. At that time the king granted every one his heart's desire, whatever it might be that he had come for, bettowing on them elephants. carriages, horses, gold, cows, jawels and all servis of appears.

Doha 208.

All were satisfied from their very heart and invoked blessings upon him, saying, -- May all the boys live long, those lords of Tulsi Das.

Chaupdi 202.

In this manner some days were apent, without any one staking thought of none or night, till the king, knowing the time had come for naming the children, sent and called the wise seer, and after reverectly greeting him thus spake,—"Holy father, be pleased to declare the names upon which you have secretly determined." "Their smess are many and wonderful; I will tell them, O king, to the best of my shifty. The store-house of delights, the occan of joy, by whose pray three worlds are gladdened, the very home of bilts, the Comforter of the miverse, has for his name Blant ('delight'). The bearer and supporter of the world in named Blant ('the supporter'), while he whose very thought brings victory over the foe is celebrated in the Veda by his ame Rature.

Dold 209.

For the auspicious, the beloved of Rama, the stay of the whole world, was reserved by Saint Vasishia the noble name of Lakshman ('of auspicious appearance').

Chaupai 203.

After paming them the saint pondered in heart and said,-" O king, your four sons are the very Veda itself; the saint's treasure ; the believer's all in all ; the darling of Siva, who is delighted with their childish sports" Even from his earliest days Lakshman knew his dear lord and devoted himself to Rama; while the affection of the two other brothers. Bharat and Satrughea, grew also as between master and servant. In both couples one was dark, the other fair : and their mother, as she gazed upon their loveliness, would break a blade of grass to avert the evil eye. Though all four were full of amiability, beauty and intellect, yet Rams was a higher joy ; his kindliness of heart was like the bright moon, which manifested itself in the radiance of a most winning smile; while now in the cradle, and now on her lap his mother fondled him and called him her own dear darling.

Dok 210.

The omnipresent god, who has neither passion nor quality, nor sensation of pleasure, and who is from everlasting, lay a babe in Kausalya's arms, overcome by devout affection.

Chaupdi 204.

With all the beauty of a myriad loves : dark of hus as the lotus or a heavy rain-cloud; the glistening nails on his rosy feet like clustered pearls on the leaves of the lily : the print of the thunderbolt, the flag and the elephant-goad distinctly to be seen : the tinkling of his anklets enough to charm a saint; with girdled waist and dimpled body and deep navel, such as no one could believe who had not seen ; with long arms covered with many jewels and lovely set of tiger's claws upon his breast; with necklace of gems and sparkling amulet, and soul-ravishing print of the Brahman's feet! with shell-marked neck and exquisite chin, and a face flushed with the beauty of all the loves : with wellmatched teeth and ruddy line and nose and forehead-mark beyond description; with heautiful ears and charming cheeks and lisping prattle most delightful to hear; with eyes dark and full as the lotus, add heavy brows and a fair pendant on his forehead ; with lustrous carling hair that his mother was ever delighting to stroke ; with his body clothed in little vellow drawers, crawling on knees and hands upon the ground : peither scrinture por Seshnag could do justice to his beauty, nor without a vision could any one imagine it.

Doká 211.

The all-blissful god, who is above the reach of delusion and transcends all intellect, speech and perception of the senses, became subject to the strong love of his parents and sported like an impocent babe.

Chaupdi 205.

In this way Rams, the father of the universe, showed himself the delight of the people of Kosala; and they who love their god, O Bhayani, show themselves like his earthly

I Ram in here identical with Vanhu, of woon the following legends to full in the Majagard Period as — The particals Blatting, being in death which of the three gods, Frahmd, Valhun or Sira, was the greatest, determined to patthe matter to the test. He first went to Drahms and earther this court without making any obeleasors, an afford it with the showed binestly executingly in Righting and the state of the showed binestly executingly in Righting and the state of the showed binestly and the showed binestly and the showed binestly and the showed binestly and the showed with his foot to awaken him. The god earned up, but needing the his foot in the showed binestly and the showed being the showed by the showed being the showed by the showed being the showed by the sh parents. But his enomies, though they struggle for ever, will never extricts themselves from the bonds of existence. The delistive power that has subdoed all life, whether in animate or insninate creation, trembles before the Lord, who with the play of his spechwar forces it to dance like a pappet. If we leave such a Lord, whom else can we supplicate? Nether in thought, word nor deed to everwise; god is mercifol only to those who pray. Thus the Lord sported as a child, to the delight of all the people of the city; and now his mother would take and dindle him in her arms, and one ynt him down and rock him in his cradle.

Doh4 212.

So lost in love that day and night succeeded one another unobserved, while in her fondness for her boy she kept singing to him narsery songs,

Chaupái 206.

One day his mother, after washing and dressing him, unt him to sleep in his tradle, and prepared an offering for presentation to her partron divinity. When the service was over and she had made her obtaine, she returned to the place where she had dressed the food; but when also omes there also beheld Rāms in the set of eating. In a great right she san to the nursery and there found the child again sleeping; but coming both once more she still saw the boy. Then she trembled and was much disturbed in mind, for she saw two children, one here and one there and was utterly bewildered; awing,—"Are my senses at fault, or is this a miracle?" When Rāms saw his mother's distress, he broke out into a merry hugh.

Doha 213.

And exhibited to her his whole marrellons form; with a myriad worlds gleaming on each individual hair of his body;

Chaspel 207. With nanumbered suns and moons, Sivas and Brahmás; with many mountains, rivers, oceans, lands and forests; with time, fate, merit, demerit nature and every power there manifested, even though gatknown by name. When she beheld the askful vision is keep the work of the hands, chaped in prayer; for all why askes in metion and the "e. With hands.

quietring host and speechless mouth she cloud her aget and howed her head at his feet. Seeing his mother than overpowered with amazement, Itama again assumed the form of a child. But her terror left her not, while she hymned his praises, sping.—I have regarded the great father as my own offspring. Again and again Hari exhorted hismother,—See my mother, that you tell this to no one;

Doha 214.

And as often did Kausalya meekly reply with clasped hands, - See you too, my lord, that the delusive power of yours never again visits me.'

Chaupdi 208.

Hari indulged in every kind of childish amusement, to the great delight of his attendants; and after a little time all the brothers grew to be hig boys, gladdening every one about them. Then the gran came to perform the tonsure and again the Bráhmans received large offerings. The four lads run about and divert themselves in all sorts of preity ways; and the lord, whose thoughts, works and acts transvend every human seems, plays in Daurath's courtyard. If the king when at dinner called him, be would not leave his playmates and come, till Kussalyis herself went for him, when he would toddle along with her as fast as he could. He whom the scripture declares to be incomprehensible, of whom Sira could find no end, is picked up by his mother and carried off in a pet, and his father with a smile takes him in his lap, though grimy all over with dast.

Doh4 215.

Quickly glancing here and there during the meal, as soon as he got a chance, he would run away with a scream of delight, stuffing his mouth full of rice and curds.

Chaupái 209.

His pretty innocent childish sports have been sung by Sarasanti Seahang Sambhu and the Veds, and he whose soul does not warm to them has been brought into the world by God to no purpose. When the brothers were all grown up, the guru and their father and mother invested them with the secred thread, and Rafan went to bis guru's house to study. In a short time he mastered all knowledge. The four Verbs are but the breath of his month, and for him atndy was a joke indeed. When they were proficient in scholarship and politeness and morality they began to practice all princely sports. With bow and arrow in hand they showed to fair that all creation was rewinded at the sight, and as the brothers passed along the road every man and woman stort to gaze at them.

Dobá 216.

Rama was gracious to all; and not a soul in Kosals, man or woman, young or old, but held him dearer than life. Chaupdi 210.

Taking his brother with him as a companion, he would go to the forest to hunt; there selecting for death the solbest game, he every day brought and showed it to the king; and each beast, alin by his shaft, fater death went straight to heaven. Taking his meats in company with his younger brother, ever obedient to his parents commands, the gracious god omitted nothing that could please the people. He gave his mind to hear the Verdas and Perfans and them himself taught his brother. It sing at break of day, he first suited his parents and the priest, and then, after obtaining their sanction, busied himself with work in the city. The king was gived of heart when be saw his mode of life.

Dohá 217.

The all-pervading, indivisible, passionless, eternal God, who is without attributes, or name, or form, performs many wonders for the sake of his faithful people.

Chaupdi 211.

I have now song all these his doings; hearken attantively to the remainder of my story. The great and wise saint Vivamitra had chosen a fair hermitage in the forest, where he gare himself up to prayer, searlike and mediation. The demons Maricha and Shahin, on beholding the preparations for scriffice, facet greatly and hastened to distinct him. The saintly son of Oddhi was pained and full of thought,—"There is no killing three accurred demon without list;"
"Then he reflected,—"The Lord has become inextnute to relieve seath of its burdens. I have now an excess for going to wist him and after entresty made will bring hack with met he two brothers. Now I will least up ages with the sight of him who is the abode of all knowledge, piety and goodness."

CHILDITOOL

Dold 218.

His manifold longing brooked no delay on the road, and after bathing in the stream of the Sarju he proceeded to the king's court.

Chaupai 212.

When the Itaji heard of the saint's arrival, he went to meet him with a retinue of Brahmans, and prostrating himself reverently on the ground before him took and scated him on his own throne : then lived his feet and offered him religious honours, saying, -" There is no one so blest as I am to day; and had various kinds of food prepared for him. The great saint was highly pleased. Next, the king brought his four sons into the presence. On seeing Rama the saint forgot his detachment from the world and was as enraptured with his lovely face as is the chaker with the full moon. Then said the glad king,-" Reverend sir, this favour is unparalleled; what is the cause of your coming? Tell me, and I will not delay to accomplish it." "There is a crew of demons that trouble me, and I am come to you. O king, with a request Let me have Raghonath and his brothers ; the demons' death is all I desire.

Dold 219.

Give them, O king, gladly, without any selfish folly; for you it will be a meritorious and honourable act, and it will also turn out well for them."

Chaupdi 213.

When the king heard this cruel request, his heart beat fast and all the brightness of his face grew dim.—" In my old age I have begotten four sons of sir, yon have spoken without consideration. Ask of me land, cattle, goods and treasure, and I will gladly give yow all I have, at once. Nothing is dearer than the life of the body; but even that I would give in a minute All my sons are dear to me as my own soul and, O sir, I cannot spare you IRams. What is this pretty little boy of mine gainst a force and terrible demon?" On hearing the king's word so fraught with love, the wise sain twas glad of beart. Then Vasishta moch exherted him, and the king's doubts were dispelled. Obedienting he seem to for the two boys and pressed them to his heart and fervently exclaimed,—" My two boys are my very life; but you, holy sir, are now their only father.

2

Doha 200.

The king consigned the boys to the saints, again and again blessing them. Then they went to their mother's apartment and bowed the head at her feet.

Soratha 23.

Glad to relieve the saint of his alarm, the two lion-hearted heroes set forth, occans of compassion, resolute of purpose, the whole world's champions.

Chaupdi 214.

Bright-syed, broad-chested, long of arm, dark of hue as the fotus or the tamal tree: with quiver at side pendent from a yellow sash, and in either hund arrows and a comely bow, so marched the two brothers, one dark, the other Iant, the treasure that Visramitra had sequired,—"I recognise the lord god Brithmanya-devai in the child who thus on my secount has left his own father." So thought the saint; and as he went the pointed out Táraká, who on heaving his voice reathed up in a fury. With a single arrow Hari took her life, but recognizing her submission gave her a place in his own heaven. Then the samt knew he had found his lood, but yet instructed him, he all-wise A they travelled they felt neither hunger nor thirst; such their incomparable strength of body and plorious vicour.

Doha 122

After taking the Lord to his own hermitage, he made over to him every kind of weapon, and gave him herbs and roots and Irnit to eat, knowing him to be ever gracious to men of boly life.

Chrupsi 215.

At dybreak loghurai sad to bim,—"Go and make tready the scriffice, and fear not." The brotherhood began preparing the oblation, while he remained to guard the scrifficid fire. On hearing of this, the demon Maricha ranked up in a fury with his army to disturb the saint. Hims smooth bim with a headless shaft, and he fell a hundred leagues the other side of ocean. Then he size Sublink with an arrow of fire, while his brother routed the whole demon host. When they had thus sain the demons and restored peace to the Drikmans, the whole company of gods and sints legan to byton their praise. These linghost the stayed a few dates and showed kindness to the hemits, who devoully repeated to him many legands of the Poranas, though he kness them all lefters. Does the saint respectful informed him. — "There is sight, my lord, which is wort your going to see." When linghmath heard of the orde of the low, he glidly accompanied the noble sage. On the way he spired a herenitage without hird, deer, or any livin creature near it, and observing a remarkable stone languir of the saint about it, who in reply gave him the wholhistory.

Hold 222.

"Gantama's wife was by a curse turned into a lard rock, and is now longing for the dust of your lotus feet: 0 Raghubir, show mercy upon her."

Chhand 28-31.

- At the touch so sweet of his hallowed feet, she awoke from her long unrest,
- And meekly adored her sovereign lord, awaiting his high behest.
- With speechless tongue, limbs all unstrung, and eyes that streamed with tears,
- She fell at his feet in rapture meet, far blest above all her peers. Then bolder grown by the favour shown with a faith that
- himself had given,

 She dared to raise her hymn of praise,—" Great Spirit,
- high lord of heaven.
 Save me, O save, thy succour I crave, boly god, sinfol
- wretch though I be,
 Ravan's conquering foe, joy of all else below who toil
- upon life's troubled sea.
- Though the saint cursed me sore in the ill days of yore, now I hold it a blessing most sweet,
- For my own eyes have seen my Redeemer, and I ween Siva only my rapture could mete.
- Witless and weak, one only boon I seek; as the bee within the lotus loves to stay,
- May my soul upon thy feet, O my god, I thee entreat, dwell in rapture never ending night and day:

Holy feet, the adoration of the lord of all creation, and source of the stream divine,

Which on Siva's head descended, this day have condes-

Thus full of jubilation, with oft-renewed prostration, did Gautama's long lost bride,

With the boon she most had craved, thus graciously venebrafed return to ber husband's side.

Dald 223.

Thus the benevolent lord Huri is compassionate beyond our deserts, Worship him, says poor Tulsa Dás, and cease from all wrangling and hypocrisy.

Chaug di 216.

Hams and Lakshman secompanied the saint to the worldportifying Gangae. Both the lact and his younger brother reverently salated it, and Háma was delighted beyond measure, as the soo of Gádhi told him the legend how the beavenly stream had come down upon earth. Then the Lord and the hermits performed their abbit in a said the Brāhman received manifold gifts. The hermits' champion went on his way rejoicing, and quekly, deve mear to the outpiled of Videlat. When thomas he had the beauty of the city, he said his borther were drightled at the may ponds and will said riversel and streams, with water of ambrossia parity and prevelled multis a delicious sound and hisch of all kinds were sodyle cooling a terminal parity of the city of the city of the received and the companies of the city of the city of the acceleration of the city of the city of the city of the rates of the city of the city of the city of the city of the cooling a sub-distribution of the city of the city of the city of the cool post, fragrant brease was ever delight, and a cool, roth, fragrant brease was ever delight, and

Dold 224.

On all four sides the city was bright with flower-gardens, orchards and groves, the haunt of innumerable birds and full of fruit and flowers and verdore.

Chaurái 217.

The beauty of the city is not to be told; wherever one went there was something to charm the soon Handdomn brafirs and gorgeous lealconies all studded with fewels, as thought the Creater had fashioned them with his own hard; thriving bankers and traders, very Kuvers of wealth, sitting with all their various goods diviplayed; for squares and beautiful streets, that were constantly sprinkted with fragrant waters; magnificent temples to all the good, as bright a if they had been painted by Kámadeva himself; all the people of the city, both men and women, prosperous, well-dressed, virtuous, pious, intelligent and accomplished. But Jank'z palace was such a masterpiece that the gods tired themselves with looking at it, and the mind was quito overcome by the sight of the Fort, for it seemed to have appropriated to itself all that was most brantiful in the wealth.

Dold 225.

With glistening white walls and doors of gold with gen set in different devices, the exquisite mansion where Si lived was far too lovely for words to describe.

Chaupái 218.

All the city gates were most massive with panels cadamant, and were througed with princes and their reit mees of minists, bards and heralls. The vast and well-buil stables were at all hours of the day croweded with horse elephants and chariots: and the ministers, generals an warriors all had residence in the same style as the king outside the city, by pool and stream, the multitudinous princes had pitched their different camps. On seeing a fine mango grove, a most agreeable and convenient spot, the descendant of Kusika exclaimed,—"This is just what I like, let us stay here, Raghnthr." 'Very well my lord,' nawwered the gracious god, and there they nighted with all their hermit train. When the king of Mithila heard the news that the great sint Visamitra was come—

Dold 226.

Taking with him his ministers and many gallant fighting men and noble Brahmans and the chief of his kinsmen, in this fashion the king went forth rejoicing to meet the prince of saces.

Chaupdi 219.

Baving to the ground, he made obeisance, and the saint gladly gave him his blevsing. Then the king tespectfully saluted all the hermit train and congratulated himself on his good fortune. After making many inquiries as to his health and welfare, Visramitra led the king to a seat, and at that very time arrived the two brothers who had gone to see the garden, one dark, the other fair, in childhood's tender bloom, the joy of all beholder's ravishing, the senses of the whole world. When Raghupati came, all rose and Visyamitre seated him by his side. All were charmed at the sight of the two brothers; their eyes filled with tears and their body thrilled with raptore, and the king especially was beside himself with joy' on beholding their sweet and lovely appearance.

I The war is remiered, 'the chief of his kinsmen,' may also be taken to mean this gore ('attanum') and his kinsmen.

Doha 227.

Though feeling bimself overpowered with love, the king discreelly restrained bimself, and bowing his head at the saint's feet, said in suppressed accents choking with emotion—

Chaupái 220.

"Tell ma, my lord, who are these two lovely children. Are thay the plary of a saintly family, or the bulwarks of a kingly line? or are they the twofold manifestation of the Supreme Spirit, whom scripture declares to be anotherable. My mind, ordinarily free from worldly attachment, wearies itself with gazing upon them, as the chaker in gazing upon the moon. Therefore, sir, flog you to tell me the truth and to conceal nothing. My love grows with looking, and my soul perforce is withdrawn from divine contemplation." Said the saint with a smile,—"You have spoken well, O king; your word is always true; there is not a living creature that does not love these boys." Rama smiled to himself on hearing this. "They are the wons of Dasarath, the glory of the line of Raghu, and the king has sent them to help me.

Dohá 228.

Rûma and Lakshman by name, these two brothers, as strong as they are good and beautiful, with their companious, protected my sucrifice and vanquished all the demons in battle."

Chaupát 221.

Said the king, -"O saint, when I behold your feet I cannot tell how richly I am rewarded for any former good deeds. And these pretty twins have conferred a happiness

I This line, Bhagan Videha redeka beekke, contains a play upon words which cannot be preserved in a translation. I literal ren leting would be; particular Videha (i. e., Janak, the long of Videha) became really endeka (i. e., without a body).

² The two manifestations are surges and suges, the boddless and the embodied, upon you, the supremely happy. Their innocent nutual affection is indescribeble to words: a delight to the inneason. Hear me, sir, cried the king in his rapture, it is the the nutural union between the universal sont and the side of man." Again and sgain the king gazed upon the Lord with quivering body and heart bursting with emotion. He with courteous phrase and bowed head he escorted the saint to the dity and there assigned him spartments, which were bright and cheef ful at all times of the day; and finally, after further homage and proffers of service, the king took hill leave and returned to the pulses.

Dold 229.

When Rama and the hermits had taken food and rester a little, he went and sat down by his brother's side: now it still wanted an hour to sunset.

Chaupdi 222.

And Lakshman had at beart a great longing to go and see Jansk's city; but again, for fear of his brother and expect for the sain, the said nothing ont load, but was smiling thimself. Itima understood what was passing in his mind and being ever considerate to his followers was gled and with a most modert and submissive smile, after begging permission of his gurut to speak, said,—"Sir, Lakshman wishes to see the city, but out of respect for you is affer to speak. If you will allow me, I will show him the place of the great of the grea

Dohá 230.

Go, blessed pair of brothers, and see the city; gladden the eyes of all the people by the sight of your beauty."

Chaupdi 223.

After bowing at the saint's fret they went, these tw brothers, the delight of the eyes of the whole world. Whe the children in the market-place saw their exceeding beat their eyes and their very soul fastened greetily upon them (Indi in yellow apparet, with belt and quiver at their side with graceful bow and arrows in hand, a welly pair, on dark, the other fair of the, with andalwood likek in male their complexion; with lion-like waist and long arms, as treast adorned with strings of elephon pearls, with shapel ears and lotus eyes, and moonlike face to assuage the three kinds of plain; with golden dowers for carrings, so beautiful as to steal the heart of every beholder; with a bewitching glance and fair arched eyebrows, and a star on the forehead that seemed beauty's own stame;

Dobe 231.

With jointy cap on comely head, with black curely locks the two brothers were all-heautiful from head to foot and exquisite in every part.

Chaupdi 224.

When the citizens beard that the princes were come to see the form, they all left their bouines and started off like beggars to pillage a treasury. When they beheld the easy grace of the two forethers they were glad indeed, and their grace of the two forethers they were glad indeed, and their off the house at once fell in low with Hama's hearty, and in amorous strain addressed one another.—"They surpass in beauty a thousand love: in citizen among gods, nor men, nor demons, nor serpents, nor deficed stams has beauty and the their serve been heard of. As for Vithna with his four arms, Brahmá with his four heads, and Tarári with his figure faces and wondrous attire, and all the other gods, there is not one in the whole entiress whose boarty, ny triend, can be compared to their.

Dold 232.

Of tender age, the very home of branty, equally lovely whether dark or fair, as though a myriad loves had been lavished on each individual limb of their body

Chaupai 225.

Tell me, friend, is there any one in human form who would not be charmed at the sight of ench beauty? "Said one in geatle loving tones,..." Hear, my dear, what I have been told. This pretty pair of young cynnets are the two sons of King Danrath. They have protected the sensifies of Saint Visramits and asin in battle the invincible demons. The lovely child with dark completion and lotus eyes, who qualled the pide of Micricia and Saikhu and hears the tow and arrownin his hand, is the sever ton of Kacadica, by mem Hains. The fair yould in gallast stiffs, who also has mem Hains. The fair yould in gallast stiffs, who also had not seen that the second of the

Dold 233.

After helriending the Brahmans, and on the road setling free the sage's wife, the two brothers have come here to see the tournament." On hearing this all the ladies were delighted.

Changdi 226.

Said one, after regarding Risma's benuty—" Here is bridegroom worthy of Janaki. If the king does but see his he will abjure his vow and invist opon a marringe with them. Said another,—" The king knows who they are and he received both item and the saint, with all honour. He not, however, gone lack from his vow, but mustered by fast not, however, gone lack from his vow, but mustered by fast is certain to reward every man according to his deserts, there is the bridgeroom Jainki will wed. About this, my dear, there can be no doubt. When such a union is brought about by desting, every one will be satisfied. O friend, I am deeply moved by the thought that if this marriage taket place he will come again some time;

Itolid 234.

Otherwise there is no chance of my seeing him; it is only a long accumulation of merit in previous existences that is rewarded by such intercourse."

Chaurái 227.

Said another,—" Friend, you have spoken well; this is a marriage that will please every one." Said another,—" Siva's bow is hard to bend, and this dark had is of delicate frame; it is really a most unfair test." Hearing this, arother soft voiced maiden said,—" I have once and again heard say of them that though slight in appearance their strength is great. Touched by the dust of his lotts feet, the guilty Abalya attained salvation: and he will never rest till he has broken the bow; this is a belief out of which I am on-how to be obtated. When the Creator fashioned Sits, he predestined for her this dark-complexioned bridgeroom." On hearing these words all were glad and sottly exclaimed,—" May it indeed prove so."

Dohá 235.

In their gladness of heart the bovy of fair-faced brighteyed dames shower down flowers, and wherever the two brothers went there was all the joy of heaven.

Chaupái 228.

Now they reached the eastern quarter of the city, where the lists had been prepared for the tournament. In the midst of a fair and spacious paved area a spotless altar had been gorgeously adorned, with a broad golden platform all around for the reception of the princes, and close behind another circular tier for the spectators of somewhat greater beight and elegantly decorated, where all the nearle of the city might come and sit. Close to this was another large and beautiful gallery of glistening white, painted in diverse colours, whence ladies might view the spectacle with due decorpm, according to their family rank. The children politely show the two lords all the preparations, and with pleasant voice keep telling them what this is and that is; thus, in their affection, finding a pretext for frequently touching their lovely person; while they thrill all over with delight as again and again they gaze on the twin brothers.

Choupai 229.

When they perosived that Bains was won by their devotion, they bringly explain the different places, each according to his own Ianoy calling away the two brothers, who in their kindness are ever ready to come. Rham shows Lakehman everything, still talking in light and merry bone; and be, in obediecos to whose fat Maya in a moment of time created the eatite eniverse, out of compassion to his latiful people, frigns amazement at the sight of a tourney ground. When they had seen all the show, they returned to their gero in alarm at being so late: and he, by whose awe Terror itself is dismayed, thus monifiest the transcendant virtue of devotion. With many kind and courteous phrases they relocatedly take leave of the children;

Dohá 237.

And meekly and submissively, with mingled awe and love, they bow the head at the gurn's feet: nor sit down till they obtain his permission.

Chaupái 230.

. When it was dusk the saint gave the word, and all performed their evening devotions, and in the recital of sacred legends spent two watches of the solemn night. Then the saint retired to his couch, and the two brothers began to shampoo his feet; they whose lotus feet the holiest of men longing to behold practise all kinds of penance and meditation, even they, these two brothers, mastered by love, affectionately shampooed their master's lotus feet. At last when the saint had so ordered again and again, Ráma himself retired to rest, while Lakshman pressed his feet to his heart and reverently cross-ed them with emotions of exquisite delight. Again and again the Lord soil,— 'Sleep my brother,' and at last he laid himself down, but with the divine feet still in his lain.

Deld 238

When the night was spent, at the first sound of cockcrow Lakshman arose; and next, before the saint, we've the lord of the universe, the all-wise Rama.

Chaupdi 231.

After performing all the customary acts of purification and going to bathe, they howed before the guru, and by his permission went out to gather flowers, as befitted the time. As they went they spied a beautiful garden of the kings, where reigned perpetual Spring, planted with ornamidatives of every kind, and overhong with many coloured creprers, so rich in bad and Fruit and flower that in its aboutiness it put to shame even the trees of paradise; while the peacocks danced responsive to the music made by the feather etchoir of chitack, kell parett and chadro. In the milds of the garden a lovely lake show bright with jewelled step of varied designed: its pure expanse gluthened with many coloured lottses and the cooing of waterbirds and the

Dold 239.

Both the lord and his brother were delighted at the sight of the lake and the garden. What a charming pleasance must that have been which pleased even Rama.

Chaupdi 232.

After looking all alout and asking leave of the gurdense began in high glee to gather leaves and flowers. At that very time Sits too came there, having been sent by her mother to visit the abrine of Girijā. With her earne all ter young and lovely companions, singing gles ongs. Now Girijā's abrine was close to the lake, beautiful legond description, the delight of all beholders. When she and her attendants had betthed in the pool, she approached the goddess with a glad heart and after advoration paid with much devotion begged of her a handsome and well-matched bridgeroem. One of her attendant damselt, who had strayed away to look at the garden, chanced to see the two brothers and retorned to Sits quite fore-smitten.

Dold 240.

When her companions observed what a state she was in, her body all in a tremble and her eyes full of terrs, they asked in gentle tones,—' Declare the cause of this rapture.'

Chaurdi 233.

"Three have some to see the garden two princes of tender age and charming in every way; one durk of hea, the elber fair, but how can I describe them? I viole is sightless and eyes are douth." All the dameds were adilightled at her speech, and perociving the intenes longing in Sita's boson, on ear of them exclaimed.—"My dear, they must be the king's son, who, as I hear, arrived yesterday with the sind, who completely factionated with their beauty and sale away the hearts of all the women in the city. Every one is talking of their loretimes; we really must see them; they are worth seeing." These words were most gravited to Sita, whose eyes were restless with longing. With her kind friend to lead the way, she followed, nor did any one know that it was an old love.

Dola 241.

Remembering Narad's words, she was filled with holy devotion, and anxiously turned her gaze on every side, like a startled fawn.

Chaupdi 234.

When he heard the sound of the golden bangles on her hands and leet, I hams thought within himself, and then said to Lakshman,—"I laugine Love triumphaut over the whole world to he now sounding the kettledram of victory." So saying he sayin looked in that direction, and like the moon on the chaker, flashed Situ's is see upon his sight. His yes became as inmovably faced as though Nimit, the winking god, had fled in confusion from his wonted post. Beholding her beauty he was carraptored; but his admiration was all within, and utterance failed him. As though the great Architoca, after occasing the world, had put before

It in this form all the skill with which he had fashioned it; or as if the Benetifel had been beautiful into a temple of beauty and illuminated by a undien flash of torchile lint all the similes of the posts are stale and backneys where one if not any likeness to Janak;

11-14 #19

Dualting in heart on Site's beauty and reflecting on lawn good future, the pure-enaled god thus addressed brother in terms appropriate to the occasion. --

Change 235.

"Brother, this is the very daughter of king Janak In which the tournament has been ordined. She has come with her attending to worship Garri, and a train of light marks her path through the garden. At the sight of within beauty, my ordined; placid bosom is agitated tiol alone knows the came, but of a trath, brother, my lock die is throbbing as though for coming good fortune. I has always been a mark of the race of Right that the green ever set their bratt on evil courses; and thus I am onto dently arrayed that all will be well; for I have never ever in a dream looked upon another man's wife to long after her. And rare, indeed, in the world are the men when the the third word the mark when their back upon the foe in hattle nor cowtheir neighbour's wite, and from whom no legger meets a reboil."

Doha 243.

Thus discoursing to his brother, and with his soul enamoured of Sita's beauty, like a bee sucking honey from a flower, he drank in the loveliness of her face.

Chaupdi 236.

Sits kept looking anzinnily all round, in doubt as to where the princes had gone. Wherever fell her Isaw-like glance, it seemed a rain of glistening lotus flowers. Then her companions pointed out to her onder the shad of the recepers the two lovely posits, the outlet, the other fair of hue. Her eyes, on beholding their beauty, were filled with longing and with the gladness of one who has form a long-lost treasure. Wearied with gazing upon Rainy's clauren, her epsilist forgot to wink, and her whole frame was fulfilled with dwire, as is the partridge when it seen the automand moon. Recoving Raina into her heart by the pathway of vision, she craftily closed upon him the doors of her eyelids. When her companions saw her thus avercome, they were too much abashed to utter a word.

Dold 944

Then emerged the twin brothers from the shade of the arbour, like two spotless moons from a riven cloud.

Chaupdi 237.

Two gallant champions, the perfection of beauty, like a white lotus and a dark, with their hair parted like a raren's wing on their comely head, and here and there bedecked with bunches of flower-londs; their forehead bright with the slids and beaut of prepriation, and their graceful ears adorned with ornaments; with arched syebrows and ourly locks, and eye bright as a losts bad, with lovely chin and nose and checks, and a gracious smile enskwing every soul—such beauteous features as I could never describe; they would put to shame a myriad Loves. With a string of jewels on his breast, with exquisitely dumpled neck, and powerful exces, tike the track of some young elephant on whom Karanders had become incarate; with the flowers and cap of leaves in his left hand, the dark prince, O my friend, is basuffile precedingly.

Dold 245

As her companions gazed upon the two glories of the Solar race, with their lion-like waist and bright yellow stirre, very abodes of bliss and amiability, they lost all self-consciousness.

Chaupái 238.

Yet one summoning up courage, grasped Sits by the hand and raid,—" You can at any time meditate upon Gann'; why not now look at the princes?" Then the modest of Rugho. As the grated on Russ, all beautiful from head to foot, and remembered ther father's vow, the was greatly adjusted. When her companions saw her thus overcome they all cried as if in alarm,—" It is gotting late;" and one added with a meaning smile,—"We must come again at this time to-morrow." On bearing this clever bind Sits was absolved and said, as if in fear of her mother,—"It is late, indeed." Then remmoning up resolution, she fixed the image of Raim in her beart and turned to go; but again she thought how entirely it all depended upon her sire.

100

Dohá 246.

And under pretence of looking at a deer, or bird, or tree, again and again she turned her head, and each time that she behold the beauteous Ragbubir her love was augmented not a little.

Chaupdi 239.

The thought of Siva's unyielding bow made her wild and as she went she kept in her heart the image of the darkhued swain. When the Lord perceived that she was going, he drew in his heart with the indelible ink of love a charming sketch of her infinite beauty and virtue and blissful devotion. Again she sought Bhayani's shrine, and after embracing her feet, thus prayed with clasped hands,-"Glory, glory, glory to thee, O daughter of the mountainking, as fixed in thy gaze on Siva's face as is the partridge on the moon : O mother of Ganes and Kartikeya; great mother of the world ; whose body is lustrous as the lightning; of whom there is neither beginning nor middle nor end; whose infinite majesty is a mystery even to the Veda; cause of the birth, continuance, and ultimate destruction of all being; enchantress of the universe; delighting in thy own supremacy:

Dohá 247.

Among all faithful wives and true women, thy name, O mother, holds the first place; thy immeasurable grandent is more than a thousand Sáradás and Seshnágs could tell.

Chaupái 240.

The four-fold rewards of life are easy of sitsinment by thy servants, O granter of boons, beloved of Tripurári I and all, O goddes, who adore thy lotus feet, are made happy, whether they be gods or men, or saints. These knowest well my heart's desire, for in the heart of man thou ever dwellest; there is no need that I declare is along to thee." So asping, Sits embraced her feet. Bharáol was mored by her hemility and devotion; the image smiled and a garland dropt. Reverently Sits clarged to her bended the divine gift, and Gauri herself with a heart fall of joy thus spoke, —"Hearken, Sita i my blessing is effectable that gover heart's desire shall be accomplished. Nárad's words are ever truth itself; the bridegroom upon whom your soul is set shall, indeed, be yours.

Chhand 32

The dark-complesioned youth, upon whose innate bauty your soul is sat, shall indead be your. The All-meridio in his wisdom knows your loving disposition." On bearing Gauri prosonnee this blessing, Sita and her companions were glad of heart, and in their delight (says Tuisi) retorned again and accent to the termle to adore the goddess.

Sorathd 24.

Finding Gauri so gracious, Sita was more glad of heart than words can tell; and as an auspicious omen, her left side, the seat of good fortune, began to throb.

Chaupái 241.

The two brothers returned to their garu, inwardly praising Sits's lovelines; and Ráms related to him all that had taken place being simplicity itself and atterfy devoid of all guile. The saint took the flowers and performed his devoltons, and then imparted his blessing to the two brothers, saying,—"May your desire be accomplished." Ráms and Lakshman gladdened at the words. Then, after taking food, the saintly sage began the rectinal of sacred legends. When the day was spent, they first taked his permission and then was of the perform their ovening duties. The glorious moon was rising in the eastern sky, and its orb reminded them of Sitz's lovely face; but afterwards they than reasoned within themselves,—"The queen of night is not to be compared with Sita;

Doh4 248.

For she was born of the restless Ocean, with poison for a brother, and by day she is dim and obscure, how then can auch a poor feeble creature be matched with the levely Sita.

Chaupai 242.

She wares and wanes, is the curve of lors-rick maids, and is decorated by Ridin whenever the appointed time comes round; she causes anguish to the chairs and whithers the lotts; O moon, thon art full of faults; It is a great ain and highly improper to compare Jonk's doughter to thee. Thus, finding in the moon a prefeat for attolling Sita's beauty, they returned to their gurn, the hight being now far advanced, and after bowing themselves.

at his feet and obtaining his permission they retired to rest. When the night was over, Haphaniya arose and, looking towards his brother, thus began to say,—"Nee, brother, the day has dawned to the delight of the lotes, the chaker and all mankind." Then said Lakshman in graffs tones and with folded hands, declaring the glory of the Lord.—

Doha 249.

"At the dawn of day the lily fades and the brightness of the stars is dimmed, so at the news of your coming all the princes waxed faint;

Chaurdi 243.

For bright though they be as the planets, they cannot master the night-black bow. The lotus, the chakua, the bee, and every bird-all rejoice in night's defeat; and so, O lord, all your votaries will be glad when the how is broken. Sunrise is an easy triumph over darkuess : the constellations retire and light flashes upon the world. O Raghurai, the sun in its rising shows the chiefs in a figure the majesty of their lord, and your mighty arms are as it were the pass in the eastern mountain through which is manifested the spectacle of the broken bow." The Lord smiled to hear his brother's speech. The All-pure then performed the daily rites of parification and bathed and, after observance of the prescribed ceremonies, presented himself before the gurn and bowed his comely head at his feet. Then Janak summoned Satagand and sent him in basts to Visyamitra. He came and declared his sovereign's message, and also called for the two brothers.

Dohá 250.

After reverently saluting Satánand, the Lord went and sat down by his guru, who said,—" Come, my son, Janak has sent for you.

Chaupái 244.

You must go and see Sita's applials, and who is the happy man whom heaven will benour." Said Lakshman,—"His will be the glory, my lord, apon whom your favour rests." The saints were glad to hear this seemly speech, and all whoch effection gave their blessing. Then the gracious god, attended by all the saintly throng, sallied forth to wilness to remain. No second bad here reconded the areas than the news spread all over the city, and every one put away his work and came through; in, men and women, young and old, and even children in arms. When Janak saw the enormous arousd he gave orders to bis practices services,—" Go round at once to all the people and marshal them to their broner seats."

Doha 251.

With courteons phrase they respectfully seated them all both men and women, according to their respective rank, whether noble, burgher or churl.

Chaupdi 245.

Then stept forth the two princes like beauty beautifield, graceful and accomplished chawpions, one dark, the other fair, but both charming respleadent in the sessembly of princes like two full moons in a circle of stars. Every spectator seemed to see in them an embodiment of his own conception: the princes beheld a gallant warrior, as it were the Herolo incarante: the wicked kings trembled at the sight of the Lord, as a visible presentment of the Terrible; the damons in their princely dinguise thought they aw the image of Dasth while the citizens regarded the twin brothers as the glory of manbood, a delight to the eyes.

Dohá 252.

The women with joy of heart saw what each loved most, as it were a bright vision of the Erotic in utterly incomparable form.

Chaupdi 246.

By sages the Lord was seen in his divine majesty with many faces and hands and feet and syes and heads. And how did he sppear to Janak's family group? Likke a noble kissman and friend. The queen, no less than the king, regarded him with unspeakable love like s dear child to mystich be shown for that seteral Truth, the placid radiance of unruffled Quietiam; while to the pinors the two brothers, appeared as their own benignant patron sains. But as for Sita, when she guzed on Ráms, her hore and pay were unspeakable; if at soudid out the second into the radiag passion of each individual spectator, were the Kosala princes seen by each. CHILDROOD

Dold 253.

Resplendent in the midst of the royal circle in their contrasted beauty, stealing the eyes of the whole universe.

Chaupdi 247.

Both with such facile grace of form that a myriad Loves were all too mean a comparison: with beaming face, that would put to shame the autumnel moon, and tresistilly charming lotus eyes; with a glance so unspeakably winning that it would rob Love of all his pride; with rounded cheeks and ears adorned with pendolous gens: with beautiful chin and lips and water voice; with a smile more rationt than the light of the moon, and arched systems and delicate nose; a broad forehead with glittering rata, and clustering locks with which no awarm of bees could vie; with yellow turban on their shapely head, dotted here and there with Mower-buds; with exquirite neck, marked with a triple line, enclosing as it were the blies of the three spheres of creation.

Dold 254.

Adorned with a necklace of elephant pearls and a tulti garland on their breast; with the shoulder of a bull and the gait of a lion, and long arms very models of strength.

Chaupdi 248.

By their side a quiver along from a yellow brace; with arrows in hand and how on their left shoulder; with a charming Brâhmanical cord, also of yellow tint, and, in short, beautiful from head to foot, beauty all over. Every one who saw them was made happy, nor could for a minute take his eyes off them. Janak, too, rejected to behold the two brothers. Then went he to the saint and embraced his feet, and differentially related to him all his past history, and showed the hermits the place marked out for the game. Whenever the two gallant princes turned, all men's eyes were dezzled; each saw in Rúms what he himself must admired, without understanding that it was a special miracle. The saint told the king the arrangements were perfect, and the king was thereby highly graitified.

¹ The kunjara-mani, as it is here named, or more commonly gajamukla, is a pearl supposed to be found in the projections on the forehead of an elephant.

Dalla 255.

There was one tier of seats bright, spacious and beautiful above all the rest, and here the Raja seated the saint and the two brothers.

Chrupdi 249.

At the sight of the Lord all the chiefe grew rick at beart, like the stars at the rising of the full moon for they felt inwardly assured that beyond all doubt Riam would accessed in bending the two properties of the stars of the star of the stars of the stars of the star of the s

Soratha 25.

"Rams will certainly marry Sita, to the discomfiture of those proud princes: for who can conquer in battle Damrath's gallant sons?

Chaupai 230.

Why thes scoll and throw away your lives to no parçous; imagined weeks stop no main's honger. Listen to this my solemn warning the inwardly assured that Sits is the mother, and Rail and the father of the universe, and feast your eyes to the foll on their beauty. These two brothers, as lovely, no gracious, so full of every excellence, have their home in Sambhu's heart. Why, when you have a sea of ambroris at hand, shoull you leave it to run upon your death in parent of a mirage? But do yo what seemeth you good two have to-day respect our life's event. "No saying the good kings turned to gue with effection on the picture of incomparable hearty; which in haven the gols monnted their chariets to behold the spectacle, and showered down flowers and uttered songs of jet.

I The word are pile in this time to explained in glomanus by which undathermalle, as if from the cost pak in dier into Earber, however, it were to be for any which is had been known, manning an imped meet of difficulty.

11-14 255.

Then seeing the fitness of the time, Janek sent and summoned Sita; and obscioutly she come, with all her lovely and accomplished attendants lier tourty lengt to be told - seeing that she is the mother of the world, the perfection of all grace and good note story comparison seems to me unworthy of her soo appropriate only to mortal woman. In describing Sits, to what can she he likened, or what can the post name that will not rather do her dishonour? If I should liken her to other women, where is there on earth any nymph so lovable; or, if I look to the denisens of heaven, Sarsavati is a chatterer : Ilberani has only bell a body : Rati is in sore distress on account of her disfleshed ford; and as for lakehmi, the twinbieth of poison and strong drink, how can Sita be compared to her? Even though the ocean of embrosis were the Beautiful, and the tortoise Grace, the rope being Fascination, and Mount Meru the amorous continent, while Love with his own lotus hand played the part of churner ;

Charde 251

Dold 257.

Even then, though Lakshmi the source of all beauty end bliss, had thus been born, still the poet would shrink from saying that she could be compared to Sits.

Chaujdi 252.

She came, and with her attendant-maids, singing beauty; her delicate frame resided in a fair white robe, and with a profusion of brilliant and tasteful ornaments, with which her maiden had bedecked her every limb. When she set her foot within the lists, all beholders, men and women alike, were fascinated by her charms; the geds in their delight, sounded their kettlefunns and rained down flowers midst the singing of the opporarozar. The wreath of victory sparkled in her hands as she cast a hurried glance on the assembled kings, with anxious heart locking for Rimm. Not a king but was love-smitten. But by the saint sat the two brothers and on them she fell with her greedy opens as upon a rich tressure.

Dobd 258.

Shrinking into herself from awe of the reverend fathers and at the sight of vast assemblage, she turned her eyes upon her attendants, though at the same time she drew all Rama into her soul.

Chaupát 253.

Not a man or woman, who beheld the beauty of Riam and the loveliness of Sita, could close he ieves for a scoond but all thought with dismay of the king's row and in their heart made supplication to Rahman,—10 God, quickly remove Jannk's obstinacy and make him right-minded as myself. Let the king have no besitation about breaking his vow and giving Sita in marriage to Riama: the world will approve, and we all shall be pleased; but to obstinacy, if sersisted in, will at the last be as a conuming fire in his bosom. "All waves absorbed in the same ardent desire, saying,—"The dark youth is the match for Sita." Then Jamas summond the heralds, who as they came proclaimed bis state and dignity, and bade them go and declare his vow. They went, but in their heart was little joy.

Doha 259.

The heralds cried aloud,—" Hearken, all ye princes: we announce to you sovereign's vow, and with upraised hands call heaven to witness it.

Chaupdi 254.

Though your mighty arms be as the moon, yet Siva's famous bow is as terrible and unyielding as Rahu. When Itavan and Banasur saw it—albeit sturdy champions—they left and went their way. Here is now the great god's massy beam, and whoever in this royal assembly shall today bend it shall be renowned in heaven and earth and hell, and at once without hesitation shall receive in marriage the hand of the king's daughter." When they heard the wow, all the kings were full of eagerness - insolent warriors, savege of soul-and girding up their loins they rose in haste, bowing their heads, ere they commenced, before their patron god. With flushed face and many a close look, they essay the divine bow : but though they put forth all their strength in a thousand different ways they cannot move it. Those, indeed, who had any sense at all did not go near it.

Dold 260.

After straining at the bow-those foolish kings-without being able to stir it, they retire in confusion, as though it had gathered strength by in turn absorbing the force of each successive warrior.

Chaupdi 255.

Next ten thousand kings all at once attempted to raise it, but it was not to be moved and yielding as little as a virtuous wife at the words of a gallant. All the princes appeared as ridiculous as a hermit who has no religion. Their mighty glory and renown and beroism were utterly worsted by the bow, and with much confusion of face and sadness of heart they went and took again each his own place in the assembly. When Janak saw the kings thus dismayed, he cried aloud as it were in anger, -, " Hearing the vow that I had made, many kings have come from diverse realms, with gods and demons in human form, stalwart heroes, staunch in fight.

Dohá 261.

A lovely bride, a grand triumph and aplendid renown are the prize, but God, it seems, has not created the man who can break the bow and win it.

Chaupdi 256.

Tell me now who was dissatisfied with the guerdon or, refused to try his strength on Siva's bow, but let alone lifting and breaking, sirs, there was not one of you who could stir it even a grain's breadth from the ground. Now let no proud warrior wax wroth if I assert there is not a men left on earth. Give up all hope and turn your faces homewards: it is God's will that Sita is not to be married. If I break my vow, all my religious merit is gone; the girl must remain a maid; what can I do? Had I known, sire, that there were no men in the world, I would not have made myself a laughing-stock by recording such a row.
Every man and woman who heard Janak's words and looked at Janaki were sad; but Lakshman was forious; his eyes flashed, his lips quivered and his brows were knit.

Dold 262.

But for fear of his brother he could not speak, though the taunt pierced his heart like an arrow. Yet at last, bowing his head at Rama's lotus feet, he thus spoke in dignified tones:-

Chaupdi 257.

"May there never be repeated in any assembly, where even the lowest of the family of Raghu in present, such a scandalous speech as that now uttered by Janak in the presence of the greatest of the clan. Hearken, thou am of the lotur-like solar race; I state the simple truth, without any vais boasting; if only I have thy permission, I will lift the round world with as mone seas as anable, and will break it in pieces like an ill-baked potter's vessel, and tear up Mount Mere like a pother'b. Edore thy indinite majesty, O my lord god what is this wretched old bow? Only give me an order and see what an arbitition I will make. I will take up the bow as though it were a lotus stalk, and will run a hundred leagues with it to convince vem.

Doha 263.

Inspired by thy presence, my lord, I will snap it like the stick of an umbrella; or if I swear by thy holy feet never to take bow in hand again."

Chaupái 258.

As Lakhman thus spoke in his wrath, earth abook and list slephnat apporters tottered; the whole assembly and all the kings were struck with tercer: Sits was glad of heart and Janak was ashamed; while the saint and Ráma and all the hermits were enreptured and quivered all over with excitement. Then Ráma with a sign checked Lakshman, and lovingly made him at the saids him, while Virsmitrs, perceiving the fitness of the time, spoke in gentle and affectionate tones,—"UP Kāma, hereak this how of Siva's and relieve Janak, my soo, of his sfliction." On bearing the gard's words howed his head at his feet, and without joy or sorrow in his soul cose and stood apright in all his native gran, lordly in gait as a young lion.

Dold 264.

As Raghubar ascended the stage, like the sun climbing the mountains of the east, the hearts of the saints expanded like the lotes, and their eyes were glad as bees at the seturn of day.

Chaupdi 259.

The dark hopes of the kings vanished like the night, and like the serried stars their wants waxed feeble: the arrogant shrivelled up like the lilies, and the false slank away like the owls: sints and gods, like the chairca, were relieved of their distress and rained down flowers in token of homage. After affectionately reverencing the gorulet and asking permisson of the holy fathers, the lord of all creation quickly stepped forth, with the tread of a majestic elephant when infinmed with love. As he moved, every man and woman in the city quivered all over their body with delight, worshipping the spirits of their accessors and the gods, and recalling their own past good deeds, saying,—"ill my virtuous acts be of any avail, O father Ganes, may Rama snap the bow as it were a lotar-stalk."

Doha 265.

After lovingly gazing upon Rams, Sita's mother bade her attendants draw near, and thus spoke with affectionate anxiety.—

Chaupdi 260.

"Girls, every one is bent on seeing the show, and so to spring what would be for my good, there is no one who will tell the king plainly:—These are two mere boys this excessive obstinacy for yours is wrong; Riera and Riera could not tooch the bow, and the kings with all their pride were conquered by it; bow then give it into the hands of these boy-princes? As well might a organic carry off Mount Mern. All the king's good sense is clean gone; Abgirls, god's ways are inscrutable." A sharp-witted mixine gonly answered,—"O queen, the glorious are never to tellightly regarded. Consider the weakness of Agastya and the boundlessness of occan; yet be drained it dry, and his fame has spread through the world. Again, the orb of the son is small to look at, but—at its rising—darkness is expelled from havene and earth and bell.

Dold 266.

A charm is a very little thing, yet it overpowers Brahmi and Vishna and Mahadeva and all the gods; and a mera good governs the mightiest and most farlous elephant.

Chaupai 261.

Love, too, though his how and arrows are but of flowers, has brought the whole world ander subjection. Feen not then lady, but hearken to me—Ráms will awaredly break the bow." Sho took heart at these words of her attendant, her despondancy ceased and her desire was enlarged. Then Sita with her eyes fixed on Ráms, implored with sunious heart each god in turn, praying to them in her inward soil,—"Be gracious to me, O Mahádeva and Bhavání, and reward my service by kindly lightening the weight of the bow O divine Ganes, granter of boons, it is with a view to to-day that I have done your service. Hearken to my oft-repeated amphilication, and reduce the weight of the bow to a mere tries."

Dold 267.

Oft glancing at Raghubir's form, and taking courage from her heaven-ward prayers, her eyes were filled with tears of love, and her whole body was in a tremor.

Chaupdi 262.

With fixed gase also devoured his beauty, and then, as also remembered her father's town, her soul was troubled—"Alas, my father, for your croal resolve, made without any regard to good or evil consequences; not a minister but was straid to give adviso—the more the pity—in the great conclave of connections. Here is a bow as firm as adamant, and here a little dark-honed prices of tender frame. Ugod bow can I maintain my faith "1-5 it possible for a delicativity flower to transplere a diamond? The judgment of the whole awardly has gone satrey; now, O bow of Sambhu, thou art the only hope left me; impart thy own beaviness to the crowd, and grow light thyself at once at the eight of Riams," So great was the agitation of Sita's soul that an instant of time passed as elsevily as an age.

Dold 268.

As she looks, now at the Lord, and now at the ground, her tremulous eyes so glisten, as it were love's two lish disporting themselves in the orb of the moon.

Chaupdi 263.

In her lotus month her bee-like voice hies tound; for modesty, like night, allows it not. In the corner of her eye stood a test-drop, like a miser's buried hoard. Absthed by the consciousness of extrema excitement, she yet : moned up courage and confidence, -" If there is any t in me at all and I am really enamoured of Ragbupati's I feet, then the Lord God, who knoweth all men's her will make me Rama's handmaid; for wherever there is t affection of soul to soul, union will follow beyond a doub With her eyes fixed upon the lord she recorded this ! ing yow ; and he, the most merciful, comprehended it After looking at Sits he cast a glance at the bow, as Gamight glance at a poor little make.

Doha 269.

When Lakshman perceived that the glory of his ra had his eye fixed upon the bow, he thrilled with emotion, and striking the earth with his foot, cried thus alond,-

Chaurdi 264.

"Ye elephant warders, ye tortoise, serpent and boar, hold fast the earth with a will that it shake not, for Rama is about to break the great bow; hearken to my order and be ready." When Rama drew near to the bow, the people all supplicated the gods by their past good deeds. The doubts and errors of the crowd, the arrogance of the foolish kings the proud pretentions of Parasuram the terror of all the gods and saints, the distress of Sits, the regrets of Janak, the burning anguish of the queens, were all heaped together on the bow as on a raft, while Rama's strength of arm was the boundless ocean that had to be crossed, and with no helmsman to essay it.

Dohá 270.

Rams first looked at the crowd, who all stood dumb and still as statues; then the gracious Lord turned from them to Sits, and perceived her yet deeper concern;

Chaupái 265.

Perceived her to be so terribly agitated that a moment of time seemed an age in passing. If a man die of thirst for want of water, when he is oncedend, of what use to him is a lake of nector? What good is the rain when the crop is dead? or what avails regret when a chance has once been lost? Thinking thus to himself as he gazed at Janaki, the Lord was enraptured at the sight of her singular devotion, and after making a reverential obeisance to his guru, he took up the bow with most superlative ease; as he grasped it in his hand, it gleane I like a flash of lightning; and sgain as be bent it, it seemed like the vant of heaven. Though all stood looking on, before any one condisee, he had litted it from the ground and raised it aloft and drawn it light, and in a moment broken it in halves; the awful orash re-echoed through the world.

Chhand 33.

So asful a crash re-chosed through the world that the borses of the Sun started from their course, the elephants of thefour quarters ground, ourth shook, the great serpont, the boar and the tertoise tottered Gods, demons and saints put their hands to their ears, and all began anxiously to consider the cause; but when they learnt that Rams had broken the bow, they attered shouts of Victory.

Soratha 26.

All the deluded crowd who had gone on board 'the Sira's bow' were drowned in the waves of Rama's might.

Chaupsi 266.

The Lord tossed upon the ground the two broken pieces of the bow, and at the sight the undittude rejoiced. Visramitra's love, like the clear unfathorned depth of ocean, swelled to the highest tide of extsay under the full moon inflaence of Hama's presence. There was a jubihant noise of music in the sky; the heavenly aymybs danced and sang; I Drahma and all the gods and delified sairts and sage praised and blessed the hero and rained down wreaths of many-coloured flowers; the kinaers sang melodious strains; and the shoat of 'Victory, Victory,' re-echeed throughout the world. The noise that followed the breaking of the bow defies description. Everywhere the people in their joy kept saying,— Hidma has broken the great bow."

Dohá 271.

Bards, minetrels and rhapsodists raise their loud-voiced greaus, and all the people lavish offerings of horses, elephants, money, jewels and raiment.

Chaugdi 267.

There was a clash of cymbals, taltors, conches, clarions, sockbuts, drums, kettledrums and all kinds of music; and in every place were choirs of women singing anspicious strains. The queen with her attendants was as glad as a parched rice-field at a full of rain; Janak was as pleased and free of care as a tired swimmer on reaching a shallow; the kings were as confounded at the breaking of the bow as a lamp is dimmed at dawn of day; but Sita's gladers can only be compared to that of the chitachi on finding a rain-drop in October; while Lakshman free his eyes on Ráma as the chaker on the moon. The Satánand gare the word and Sita advanced to Ráma.

Dobd 272

Graceful in motion as a swan, and of infinite beauty in every limb; and with her came her fair and sprightly companions, who raise the glad marriage song.

Chaupái 268.

Resplendent in their midst as the Queen of Love among thore, she held in her lotus hand the fair wreath of victory, enriched as it were with the spoils of world-wide triumph. With modest air, but rapture in her sool, her interior devotion was withdrawn from sight. As she drawnear and beheld Ráma's beauty, she stood motionless like a figure on the wall, till a wateful attendant roused her, saying, —' Invest him with the ennobling wreath.' At the word she raised the wreath with both her hands, but was too much overcome by emotion to drop it; till as the lotus, flower and etalk, shrinks at the monolight, so her hand and arm drooped in the glory of his moon-like face. At the sight of his beauty her handmids break into song, while Sita let fail the wreath ponh his breast.

Soratha 27.

When the gods saw the wreath resting on his breast they showered down flowers; and the kings all shrunk into nothing, like lilies at the rising of the sun.

Chaupái 269.

Both in the city and in heaven there were sounds of music; the had were saidened, and the good were glud. Gods, kinnar, men, serpents and saints uttered blewings and shouts of victory. The heavenly nymphs danced and stong, and thowers fell in constant showers. In every place were Brakmans muttering Vedio taxis, and rhapoolists

I The charaks at a missing melanolomous is fabled never to drink, except to be such drips of rain as fall in the south of feetiber, when his son is in the same is not the same is missing as a ground (sold), as time of the great when a shower is a terp rare one urrene. The sone precluse drops of they fall into the expansion transported into perfix a belief to which aliason is under ta page 11.

- 40

reciting lays of posites. Earth, hell and heaven were persusted with the glad news,—"Hisms has broken the bow and will wed Site." The men and women of the city light voite torches and, regardless of their substance, settler gifts in profusion. Sits by Hism's side was as respleadent as if Beauty and Love had met togettler. Her companions whisper,—" Embrace your tord's feet; but in excess of fear the dares not touch them.

Dohá 273

She touches them not with her hands, remembering the late of Gautama's wife; and Rama smiled inwardly at this proof of her supernatural devotion.

Chaufeli 270.

Then, as they looked on Sits, the kings were inflamed with detice, and waxed wroth at soul-cantid dependented tools—and sprung up—the wretcher—and donned their armound lagan a general chorus of abuse,—" Come now, let us carry (if Sits and overthrow and bind fast three two princes; though he has broken the bow, he has not yet gesined his road; for who shall marry Sits while we still live? If the king give them any swistance, we will rout him in battle as well as the two brothers." When the good kings hered here words they answered and put the whole assembly to shame,—"The flory of your might and greatness of your strength were dispaced for ever at the breeking of the bow. Is that the might of which you would not have yo since spoiled something new? Was it not thus that ye reckoned sfore, when God so blackead your face?

Dold 274

Cease from envy and arrogance and folly; feast your eyes upon Rama; and be not like a moth in the fierce flame of Lakshman's wrath.

Chaufdi 271.

like a crow who woold got the king of the birds of an effering; or a rat who would proil a fion; as a man who is passionate without came and yet wither for peace of mind; as as a rettier of firm who wishes for happines and prosperity; as a greedy and covations man who wishes for fair fame, and as a gallant who would have no examind; as an everally the thing of the texts-discretis here called a sources, was to may,

the am of Vigara

and free of care as a tired awimmer on resoling a shallow the kings were as confounded at the breaking of the lo as a lamp is dimmed at dawn of day; but Site's glades can only be compared to that of the chidatii on finding rain-drop in October; while Lakshman fixed his eyes o Rama as the chaken on the moon. The Satanand gare the word and Sits and sanced to Rama.

Doha 272.

Graceful in motion as a swan, and of infinite beauty it every limb: and with her came her fair and sprightly companions, who raise the glad marriage song.

Chaufdi 268.

Reylandent in their midst as the Queen of Love amony the loves, she held in her lotus hand the fair wresth of victory, on riched as it were with the spoils of world-wide triumph. With modest air, but rapture in her sool, her interior devotion was withdrawn from sight. As she draw near and beheld Rimm's beauty, she stood motionlers like a figure on the wall, till a watchful attendant roused word when raised the wreath with both her hands, but was too much overcome by emotion to drop it; till as the lotus, flower and stalk, shrinks at the moonlight, so her hand and arm drooped in the glory of his moon-like face. At the sight of his beauty, her handsmids break into soog, while Situ let fall the wreath upon his breast.

Soratha 27.

When the gods saw the wreath resting on his breast they showered down flowers; and the kings all shrunk into nothing, like blies at the rising of the sun.

Chaupái 269.

Both in the city and in beaven there were sounds of most of the had were suddened, and the good were glud. Gods, kinnars, men, serpents and saints attered blessing and shouts of victory. The heavenly nymphs danced and sung, and thowers fell in constant showers. In every place were Brahmans muttering Vedic texts, and rhapeodists

I The chatabl (Queulus melanoleuce) is labled never to drink, except to be such drops of rain as fall in the month of October, when the sun is the same being mind as a dreitum (Sodri), a time of the year when a shoret is a very rare occurrence. The same preconsulty at (they fall into the sre, are transmeted into pearls a belief to which a driston is made in pace 11.

reciting lays of praise. Earth, bell and heaven were perruded with the glad ows,—"Kinn has breken the bow and will red Sits." The men and women of the city light votire torche and, regardless of their substance, scattering gits in protunion. Sits by Rimm's site was as respleadent as if Benarty and Love had met together. Her companions whipper,—"Embrace your lord's feet;" but in excess of tear the dares not knock them.

Dohá 273.

She touches them not with her hands, remembering the fate of Gantama's wife; and Ráma smiled inwardly at this proof of her supernatural devotion.

Chaupai 270.

Then, as they looked on Sita, the kings were inflamed with detire, and waved worth of soul-frantin degenerate fools—and appearing to the said began a general chorus of abusa,—"Come now, let us carry off Sita and overthrow and bind fast three two princes; though he has broken the bow, he has not yet gasined his oral for who shall marry Sita while me still live? If the king gire them say sesistance, we will rout him in battle as well as the two brothers." When the good kings heard these words they answered and put the whole assembly to shame,—"The figory of your might and greatness of your strength were disgreed for ever at the breaking of the bow, let that the might of which you now boat, or have ye since supplied something new? Was it not thus that ye reckened after, when God so blackened your faces?

Dohd 274

Cease from envy and arrogance and folly; feast your eyes upon Rimm; and be not like a moth in the fierce frame of Lakshman's wrath.

Chaupái 271.

Like a crow who would rob the king of the birds of an offering; or a rat who would spell a loo; as a man who is passionate without cause and yet wisher for peace of mind; as a reviler of Sira who wishes for beptieses and prosperity; as a greetly and coretoos and who wishes for lair fame, and as a gallant who would have no exadal; as an enemy

I The king of the birds-Garur-is here called I stanteya, that is to my, the am of Vinata of Gol who wishes to be saved; such is your desire, O ye kings." When Sita heard the tumult, she was afraid, and with her companions went away to the queen, while Rama comporedly joined the guru, talking to himself of Sita's affection. Sita and the queen were much distrest, saying "What is it God would have now?" And at the set of the voices of the kings they looked helplestly up a down. For fear of Rama Lakhman could not speak.

Dold 275.

With fiery eyes and knitted brows he cast a furious lo at the kings, like a lion's whelp watching to spring on a he of wild elephants.

Chaupdi 272.

Seeing the tumult, the people were all distrest at joined in reproaching the kings. Then it was that the so of the lotus race of Bhrigu (Parasurám) arrived, for he ha heard of the breaking of the bow. At the sight of him th kings all cowered down, as a partridge shrinking beneath th swoop of a hawk. Of pallid hue and well bestreaked with ashes; with the three horizontal lines sacred to Siva con spicuous on his broad forehead; with the hair on his heat bound in a knot; and his moon-like face flushed with the furnace fire of smouldering wrath ; with frowning brows and eyes inflamed with passion; he casts a quick and furious glance around. With bull-like shoulders and mighty chest and arms ; with fair sacrificial cord and string of beads and deerskin with an anchorite's dress about his loins and two quivers slung by his side; with bow and arrows in hand, and his sharp axe upon his shoulder.

Dohá 276.

In his saintly attire and savage mien a figure beyond description, as though the Heroic had taken the form of a hermit; so he drew near to the kings.

Chaupái 273.

When they beheld his ghastly attire, they all rose in consternation, each mentioning his own and his father's name, and fell prostrate on the ground before him; and even those on whom he east a kindly glance thought heir had come to an end. Then came Janak and howed his head and called for Sita also to pay him howage. Us bestowed upon her his blessing, and her glad companions escorted her back to her own apartments. Next came Vivámitra to salata him, and placed the two boys at his feet, saying a "There are Riemand Lakahman, Dassrath's sons." He salata him, and the salata him, and the salata sons. "He see yes long hard before the salata him and the salata him, with the system of the salata him and the salata him and the salata him and the system of the salata him and the salata him and the salata him and the system of the salata him and the salata him and the salata him and the system of the salata him and the salata him and the salata him and the system of the salata him and the salata him and the salata him and the system of the salata him and the salat

Dol:4 271.

Then be turned and said to Videha, -" Why all this crowd?" Asking as though he did not know, while his whole body was bursting with passion.

Chaupdi 274.

Janak told him the whole buttory and the reason why the kinga assembled. After hearing his reply he again looked away and spied the fragments of the low lying on the ground. In a mightly passion he orned in fariout tones,—"Fell me now, Janak, you food who has broken the bow? Show hits to me at once, or this very day I will overthrew the whole of your dominion." In his secars of fear the hing could give no answer: the wicked saitors were glad of beart; gods, saints, serpents and all the people of the city were foll of suriety and profound shrm: Nite's mother was lamenting,—"God has now undone all that had just been done so well;" and Sita when she heard of Bhrigupatti character felt half a minute pass like an age.

Dohá 278.

Seeing the people's consternation and Janaki's anxiety, the imperturbable Haghubir thus spoke and said,—

Chaupái 275.

"My Lord, the bow has probably got broken by some one of your servants. What are your orders? Why not tell me?" At this the furious saint was yet more inconsed and cried,—"A servant is one who does service, but he who does the deeds of an enemy must be lought. Hearken, Ilkima, whoever it was who broke Sira's how is as much my enemy as was Shatarabhia. Separate him from among the assembly, or else every one of these kings shall be killed." When Lakshmas heard the saint's words, he smiled and said to him in a tone of contempt.—"O zir, I have broken many a how as a child, and you were never before these supry: why were you so fond of this bow in particular?" Parastracture typical in a forty. Parastracture typical in a forty. Parastracture typical in a forty. Parastracture typical in a forty.

Daha 279.

"Ah! death-doomed prince, is there no stopping your tongue? Would you compare to a common how the great bow of Siva, that is famous throughout the world?"

Chaupai 276.

Said Lakehman with a smile,—" I thought, holy sir, that all bows alike. What gain or what loss can there be in the breaking of a worn-out bow? I flam by mistake took it for a new one, and directly he touched it, it snapped in two: but it was no fault of his: why then, reverend sir, be so angry for no cause?" He answered, with a glance at his axe,—" Fool, have you never heard of my temper? I do not slay you because, as I say, you are but a child. You in your folly take me for a mere recluse: and from my childhood an ascetio I am, but a fiery one and the terror of the whole Khattiya race, as is known throughout the world. By the might of my arm I have made earth kingless, and time after cime have bestowed her upon the Brahamas. See here, you king's son, the axe with which I lopped of Sahasraháhn's thousand arms.

Dold 280.

Do not bring distress upon your father and mother: my cruel axe has ripped up even unborn infants in the womb."

Chaupái 277.

Lakshman replied with a quiet smile,—"All holy sir, you think yourself a great warrior indeed, and keep brandishing your axe before me, as if with a more parf of breath you could blow sway a mountain. But I am not a kunshing the same and the same alignment; and therefore I must throw myself at your feet, even though you at the same and bow and arrows an unnecessary.

Dold 281.

Pardon me, great and reverend sage, for anything improper that I said when I first saw you." The glory of Bhrigu's race cried fariously in his deep toned voice,-

Chaupai 278.

"Hearken, son of Kusika'; this child is demosted : a perverse and death doomed destroyer of his own house; at dark spot on the mon-like brightness of the Solar race; nitterly upgovernable, senseless and reckless. Another monment and he shall be a monthful in the jaws of death, and I loadily protest it is so fault of mine. Take him away, it you would save him, and teach him my glory and night and the forecness of my temper." Said Lakshman,—"So long as you live, father, who else can tell your farms so well? With your own mouth you have many times and in many ways declared your own diongs. If you are not yet satisfied, tell them over again, and do not distress yourself beyond, endurance by putting any restraint upon your passion. But if you are really a resolute and durntless warrior, there is no honour to be get thy shose.

Dobá 282.

Heroes perform valiant deeds in fight, but do not themselves publish them: cowards finding a fee before them in the battle talk very large, as you.

Chaurdi 279.

Now would terrify me with your repeated cries of Beath." On hearing Lathama's rade speech he closed his hand upon his terrible axe,—"After this let no man blane me; this sharp-tongoed boy deserves his death. Livar spared him long on account of his being a child, but now of a truth he is as good as dead." Said Vivennitra,—"Pardon his offence; the wise regard not the faults or merits of children." "I have axe his hand and my pittlers in my wrath; he is the regard to the faults or merits of children." "I have axe his hand and my pittlers in my wrath; he is the regard to the faults or merits of children." "I have axe his hand and my pittlers in my wrath; he is the regard to the faults or merits of children." "I have a very though this han, guilty a and has injured my gare. Yet though this hand for you, "I wrathinte. But for you I had could bim in picces with my terrible axe, and thur easily have paid my yours his death."

³ The son, or rather grandson, of Kunka is Vieramitra,

Dobd 283.

Said the son of Gadhi, smiling to himself, —"Everything looks green to the saint's epect; though Rama has to-day broken the how as though it were a stick of sugarcane, still he has not the sense to understand."

Chaurdi 280.

Said Lakshman, -" Is there any one, Futher, Ignorant of your honour? it is notorious throughout the world. You have well paid the debt you owed to your father a mothers; but it was a great distress to you to be still debt to your guru. You have now transferred the account to me, but the interest by lapse of time has become ver heavy. So you must bring forward the original credito. and then, sir, I will at once open my purse." When h beard these bitter words he grasped his axe, and all th prople oried - Alack, alack! "O Bhrigu-bar, you still keep showing me your axe, but, regicide as you are, I only space you on account of your being a Brahman. You have never yet me a real stronch fighting man, and, most reverend sir, you are a great man only in your own house." They all caled out,- How very wrong ; and Rama gave Lakshman a sign to be quiet.

Dohd 284.

Lakshman's words were like oil on the fire of Bhrigopati's wrath; till, seeing the flame increase, Rama quenched it with the flood of admonition,—

Chaupdi 281.

"My lord, have compassion on a child, and wreak not your wrath on such an unweated infant: if he had any idea of your glorious power, how could he be so foolish as

I The allusion is to a popular applic. A man who have he ryceids month of exame month of the same property of the property of the property of the whole the property of the which it would be the bright of long for Farmann to receive by Whine a light since Same was blanct for incurration of Whine, as also was branches. The should interpretation was probably intended by the pref.

^{2.} Every Hinds is said to be in debt by mainer to these persons, r., the father, his mother and his year. The two first debts he mother and his year. The two first debts he mother Renals to life again after he had first can be found to be define to the father had been failed by debts to life again after he had first can be father had been failed by debts. A standard of the father had been failed by debts. The most remained for him to restrict his father had been failed by debts. In one remained for him to ratify his gaves, Mahddens, for the natures had done him to breaking his bown.

to pat binnelf on an equality with you? When a child committe any maughtiness, its gurs and father and mother are in reptiers at it. Have pity then on the boy, who is really one of your clients; for thus it becometh a saint, so patient and wise as you are. On hearing Haun's words he cooled down a little but again Lakiman said something with a smile, and revelug him malle he flushed all over with rage,—"Hama, your brother is too wicked; though fair in outward hop, he is black at theart, and it is not rother's milk but poison that his lips have sucked. Perverse by nature, he meither takes after you now regards me."

Dold 285

Said Lakshman with a smile, -- "Hearken, U saint, passion is the root of sin; those who are under its influence do unseemly things and set themselves against every one.

Chaupdi 282.

I am one of your fullowers, restrend sir; put away your wrath and show mercy upon me Anger will not ment the broken bow; pray sit down, you must be tired of standing. If you were so very fend of it, devise a plan for getting it mended and call in some skiftle) worknam. Jank was frightened at Lakehman's words,—'He quiet; such frowardness is not right.' The clittens all shook and trembled to thick so small a boy could be so naughty. As Bhrigapati beard his fearless words his whole body was on fire with rage, and be became quite helpless, and in a tone of entreaty cried to Hanx,—"Sees if you can manage this little brother of yours; so fair without and foul within; he resembles a golden; jar feld of poisson."

Dold 286.

At this Jokehman smiled, but Itama gave him a look of reproof and submissively approached the guru, putting away all petulance of speech.

Chauf di 283.

Clarying his two hands together and speaking in most modest, gentle and placid tones, he said,—"Hersken, wo lord, you were born a wage; pay no heed then to the words of a child. Boys are like gnats: no wise man will ever froulde bimself about them. Nor is it he who has done the mischief; 1, my lord, am the offender. Be pleased, your reverence, to vivit everything on me, your servant, whether it he favour or anger, or death or bonds. Tell me quickly the means, O king of saints, by which your passion may be assuaged." Said the saint, "O Rams, how can my passion be awaged? Your brother has boday est me a nought, and yet I have not strock off his head with my asse what then have I does in anner?

Doha 287.

When they heard of the fierce doings of my axe, the proudest queens were seized with untimely pains of labour; my axe is still here, and yet I see this princeling, my enemy, slive.

Chaupdi 284.

My hand mores not, though passion consumes my breat my reglicide axe has become blunded. Fate is against me; my nature is changed; for when was I ever pittle before? To-day by heaven's will I have suffered intolerable pain. To hearing this, the son of Samitra smiled and bowed his head,—" Even your pity is like a blast of wind and the words you speak would strip a tree of its blosoms It's saints loady is thus parched even by pity, God help him when he is angry." "See now. Janak, keep this child away; he is bent in his folly on visiting the realms of death. Why do you not at once take him out of my sight, this little prince; so small to look at and yet so wicked?" Lakshman laughed and said to the saint,—' Shut your eyes and you will see nothing.'

Dohd 288.

Then said Purasurám in tones of fury to Rámiz,— "Wretch, after breaking Siva's bow do you now teach me?

Chaupái 285.

It is at your suggestion your brother utters there successes, and your humility and folded hands are a mockery Give me my attifaction in combat, or forswear your name of Rúms. You enemy of Sira, here done with and your brother too." Flushed with passion he raised his are on high, but Rúms only smiled and bowed,—"Though the fault is Lakshman's your wrath is gained it is sometimes a great mistake to be good and upright; for every one is afraid of the crooked, in the same way as Rúbu does not attack the creecent moon. Coar, O great saint, from your wrath." Said Rama, - "Your axe is in your hand and my head is in front of you; do anything, air, that will tend to pacify you, for I am your servant.

Daha 289.

And how can a servant fight his master? O holy Brahman, restrain your wrath; whatever the boy may have safi, after looking at your dress, he meant no harm by it,

Chaurdi 286.

For seeing you equipt with axe and how and arrows, the child took you for a knight and challenged you for though he knew your name, he did not recognize your person, and answered you according to your linese. If you had come as a Religious, he would have put the dost of your Horises feel upon his head. Forgive the mustake of one who did not know you; a Bribana's heart should be all merry. What quality, my lord, can there be between you and me? We are as far part as head and feet I am called simply Ráma. You have the long name of 'Ráma of the nare' I have only one string to my bow, while you have all the holy nics.' In every way I am your inferior; as a Brâhman, pardon nor offence.'

Doká 290.

Again and again did Rawa intreat his namesake, addressing him by his titles of 'Saint' and 'Holy Brahman,' till Bhrigapati exclaimed in his rage:—You are as perverse as your brother.

Chaupái 287.

You persist in taking me for a Brishman; I will tell you now what kind of a Brishman; I sm. My bow is my sandricial halls, my acrow the oblation, and my wrath the blaring fire; stratifies fully equipt with horses and charints and elephants and footmen are the foel, and mighty kings are elephants and footmen are the foel, and mighty kings are elephants are; thus lawe I collected countless scribes of war in a serious of the victims for oblation whem I have cat in piccos with this are returned to the property of the property of the victims of Gan, which is the name for a bowstring, means also rirrar; and the cardinal virtues are said to be nion in number, though the list is a rariable one.

arrogance as universal conqueror," Said Ráma: -- "O saint, think before you speak; your anger is excessive; my fault is a trifling one. The old bow broke at a touch. What reason have I to be proud?

Dohá 291.

Hear the truth, O Bhrigmath; you say I set you at nought when I treat you with the respect due to a Brahman; but is there any warrier to whom I would bow my head in fear?

Chaupái 288.

Any god, demon, king or warrior, whether my equal in strength or my superior, who will challenge me to combat, him would I gladly meet, or even Death himself. For one who is born of warrior caste and yet shirks the battle is diagrace to his lineage and a contemptible wretch. I state what is only a characteristic of my race and make no idle boast; there is not a descendant of Haghu who would fear to meet in battle even Death himself; but so great is the power of Bråhmanical descent that he fears you, who fears nought else. "On hearing this calm and profound speech of Riámas, the eyes of the soul of the axe-bearer were opened:—"O Ráma, take and draw this bow of Vishnu's and let my doubts be ended." As he gave it, the bow strung itself of its own accord; then was Parasurám amazed at heart.

Dohá 292.

He acknowledged the power of Ráma; his whole frame quivered with excitement; and his heart bursting with love, he thus spake with clasped bands:—

Chaupái 289.

"Glory to the Sun of the lotus race of Raghu, to the friend of gods, Bráhmas and kine; glory to the friend of gods, Bráhmas and kine; glory to the deleast gods, Bráhmas and kine; glory to the mysession; glory to him whose piety, amiability, and compassion are fathomiess as ocean; glory to him who murivalled in the art of speech, the rewarder of service, the all-beautiful of form, more gracius of person thas a survied Loves. How can I with our tongue deslare his prise, who is as it were the divine swan in the hyperborei lake of Mishdawa's soul? I my ignorance I have asid much that was unseemly; but pardon me, yet twin bruthers, mercy's shrine." Still repeating as he went:— Glory, glory, glory, to the mighty Râma, Bhrigapati withdraw to the forest to practise penance. The wickel kings was self-dimmyed and trembled, and fled—the cowards—in all direction, without a word.

Dold 293.

The gods sounded their kettledrums and rained down flowers on the Lord; and all the people of the city rejoiced, now that the thorn of fear and error had been extracted from their heart.

Chaupdi 290.

There was a tamultuous clash of instruments of music and dislips of all things plasman and suspicious. Tropps of fair faced, bright-yeld midien pioned in song with voices of exquisite molols, Janak dedigth was beyond description, as that of a born beggar who has found a treasure; and Sita relivend of her frare, was as gial as a young putrified at the rising of the moon. The king made obeisance before Vistamitra, spring; 1:--11 is by my lords favore that Riam has broken the bow. These two brothers have gained me my propose; tell me now, reveread in; what is becomes me to do. Said the axint:--"Hearken, wise king; the marriage was dependent on the bow, and took effect directly the bow broke; this is well known to every one, whether god, man or Náza.

Doha 294.

Still, go and perform according to family usage whatever practices are prescribed in the Veda, after cansultation with the Bráhmans and elders and your own guru:

Chaupdi 291.

And despatch a herald to Avadh to invite king Dasarath." The princes responded gladly .-- "Tis well, gracions sir," and sent a messenger to Avadh that very moment. Then he summond all the burghers, who came serger one of them, and hambly howing before him received the order:-- "Decorate all the markets and streets and temples and kindes in all four quarters of the city." They resturned in joy, each to his own house. Then he called up his own servants and instructed them:-- "Have all kinds of pavilions made and exceed." They obeyed in all gladors and cont word to the different artificers who were skilled in the construction of encopies and triumphal arches; and they, after invoking Brahmá, set to work and made pillars of gold in the shape of plantain trees.

Dold 195.

With leaves and fruit of emeral-is and ruby flowers; suc a gorgeous show that the Creator was quite disconcerted a the eight.

Changdi 202.

The role all encruted with emerald, and so like in form and colour!, that no one could tell them from real, will betel leaves fashioned in gold so bright and glisten ing that no one could look at them. Then they worked up the leaves into wreaths, with strings of beautiful pearls inserted here and there, and after much cutting and graining and in laying made lotnes of measie with rolling and with the same and birds of varied plumage, which bazzed and whitted in the rottling breeze; and on the pillars they sculptured figures of the gods all standing erect with things of good omen in their hands. Squares were drawn on the ground and filled in with diverse devices made of elephant pearls? of exquisite beauty.

Dold 296.

There were also made most lovely mango-boughs of graven supphires with blossoms of gold, while clusters of emerald fruit glistened on silken cords.

Chaupát 293.

Next they made charming featoons as it were Love's own nooses and many golden vases with silken flags and hanners and waving eleurit and elegant lamps all studded with gems. It is impossible to describe the various parilions and in particular the one intended for the royal bride; what poet would have the hardhood to attempt its description? while the canopy for Ráma, the bridegroom, the centre of all beauty and perfection, fished its radianos through all three worlds. In every house throughout the cily there was the same splendour as in Janak's pales; any one who then new Tirthat there was nothing in the fortiere spheres! to compare with it, and the prosperous appearance of the very meanest house was enough to facilizate even the him of lawyen.

[[] Another reading, instead of sa-ras, sabaras, is saral sa-parps, 'sitalght and knotted'

[?] For staddar, 'an elephant,' another reading is stader, 'rermilion,' but this connet be correct, since the chanks or squares, to which reference is bere made, are always marked out with sumb whate material, ordunally floor, though in a king's palace strongs of pearls might be substituted.

Dold 297.

For the magnificance of the city wherein dwelt the goddens Lakshmi, in disguise as a woman, was more than even Sáradá or Seshnág could tell they rejoiced to see the hearty of the city. At the royal gate they sent in word, and King Dasarath at once runmoned them to his presence. With a profound substation they delivered the letter, and the king in his joy cose to receive it. As he read it his eyes filled with tears, his body quivered all over, and his heart seemed bursting. With Riams and Lakthman in his soul and third dear letter in his band, he could not otter a word either good or bad. At last, taking courage, he read the letter, and all the court rejoiced to hear the certain news. Now Bharat was playing about, and on hearing the tidings he, nay, the two brothers, came and with the numer modesty and affection asked.—"Father, where has the letter come from.

Chaupeli 294 When the heralds arrived at Rama's sacred birthplace.

Dahd 298.

Is all well with my two dear brothers? Tell me what country they are in. On hearing these loving words the king again read the letter.

Chaupdi 295.

On hearing it the two brothers trembled all over with irrepressible joy, and the whole court was charmed to see Bharat's holy devotion. Then the king scated the messengers close by him and said in awest and winning tones:—"Tell me, friend are the two boys well? Have you really seen them with your own yes?" "One is dark, the other fair; that are equipt with how and gairer,

I The fourteen aphetes are as followe, utr, first seven abure the earth—Bhor-lok, Bhurar-lok, Swar-lok, Mahar-lok, Jan lok Tap-lok, and Satra-lok : and seven beneath the tanth—Atal, Butal, Butal, itasáral, Mahátal, Taiátal, and Pátal and are of tender age, and with them is Saint Visramitra." Said the king again and again in his overpowering love:—

You know them, it is clear; tell me now of their state; for from the day that saint took them away till now I have had no definite news of them. Tell me how Janak knew them." At these fond words the messengers smiled:—

Dohá 299.

"Hearken, O jewel and crown of kings; there is no man so blest as you, who have for sons Rama and Lakshman, who are the glory of the whole world.

Chaupái 296.

There is no need to ask your sons who they are; lion-hearted heroes who irradiate the three spheres. Before their glory and renown the moon is dim and the san is cold. Why say, my lord, how they were recognized? Does one take a lamp in his land in order to see the san? The countless kings at Sita's marriage, great warriors as they wore, all shrunk away one after the other; ton one of them could stir Sambhu's how, but all failed, those mighty princes. The power of the haughtiest champlons in the three worlds was crushed by it. Though Baisars could uproot Mount Morn, even be confessed himself beaten, and retired after pacing around it; and he who in sport uplifted Kailás (i. c., Rāvan) was worsted in this assembly.

Dold 300.

Then Itama, the jewel of Itagha's line (bearken, O sovereign lord) snapped the bow with as little effort as an elephant would put forth in breaking the stalk of a lotus.

Chaupdi 291.

At these tidings Parasuram came in a fary, and after much brow-beating gave Itims in sown bow to test his strength, then supplicably withdrew to the woods. Nor Is Itims more conspiccous in his unequalled might than it he all-glorious Luk-husan, at sight of whom the kings tremble, as an elephant before a young lion. No one who sees your two sont, air, can regard anything also on earth." At this eloquent and affectionate speech of the heralds, so loving, grand and heroic, the king and his court were much mored, and began to offer them lavish gifts; but they closed thair ears, crying, -" Not so, not so; " and all were charmed to see their integrity.

Dohá 301.

Then the king rose and went and gave the letter to Varishta, and after relating all the circumstances to the gurn sent courteously for the envoys.

Chaupdi 298.

After hearing them the saint was highly pleased and said :-" To a good man the world is full of happiness. As rivers run into the sea, though it has no greed for them, so ley and prosperity come unasked and of their own accord to a virtuous sond. Street in the performance of your duties to your gurus and to Bráhmans and kine and gods, and your queen Kaussijk an less devout than yourself; you have no squals for pinty in the whole world, either now or in the past, nor herefeter shall have. Who O king, can be more blest than you, who have a son like Rams; nay, four beroid soos, all equally obedient, religious and smidel. Bispy, indeed, are you for all time. Prepare the marriage procession to sound of music.

Dold 302

Go quickly." On hearing the saint's commands the king bowed in assent, and hastened to the palace, after assigning quarters to the heralds.

Chaupdi 299.

Then he called all the ladies of the seraglio and read about to them Janak's letter—all rejoiced greatly at the news. He then told them all the verbal message and both himself and the openess were as energitured with delightas as perceek at the sound of approaching rain. The great's wires in their joy invoked the theirages of heaven, and the queen-mather was completely overwhelmed with centary. They take the dear letter from one another, and press it to their boson to cool as it were their torning heart. Again and stain ere he terned to the door, the king reported the glory and the exploits both of Ráms and Lakshman, adding.— "In it all by the saint's good tavour." Then the takes well for the Brishman and joyfully made them offerings, for which the holy men returned their blessigs of which the holy men returned their blessigs.

Sorathd 28.

Next they called together the beggars and lavished every kind of gift upon them:—" May the four sons of the Emperor Dasarath live for ever:"

Choupdi 300.

Thus they shouted as they left, attired in raiment of many colours. There was a jobilant clamour of music and in every house, as the nows spread among the people, there were joyons congratulations. The fourteen sphere were fulfilled with delight at the marriage of Raghubi with the daughter of Janak. Whon they heard the glad tidings, the citizens were enraptated and heara decorating the roads and houses and streets; for although Aradh in tiself was a charming place, and clean and pure as being Ráma's home, yet as the natural outcome of its love it garnished and adorned itself still more with fests decorations. Silken flags and banners and graceful chauri-created the gay bana: and at every turn were golden jurand festoons of netted pearls and heaps of turmeric, dib grass, order, tice, and gealands of flowers.

Dold 303.

Every one decorated his house; the streets were duly watered, and every square was filled in with some tasteful design.

Chaupdi 301.

Troops of girls assembled at different places, who had period all the sixteen kinds of female adornment' brilliant as the lightning, with moon like face and fawa-like eyes, and beauty enough to rob even Love of his pride; singles anspicious strains with voice so medolious that the cutow was put to shame on hearing the aweet sound. How is the king's palace to be described? The pavilion they set up would dazzle the word. Everything beautiful and of fair

I The sixteen granger, or modes of female ad rement, are specified in the following rhymes:-

Prathuma ang-ambil ek tolin. Majam datira kabbah, amal koma pabinar titiga - Taka tehri sajani, Panchama kecamatariya - duantahin mangsini dar. Bhachama kecamatariya - duantahin mangsini dar. Bhal-hahari sastama shahata - sahama chibbat di pur Mebali kar pad racham mara - Dasma angsi ang. Ojarab bahaham may jatira Bakan pumph persamg Unaria, muhb banham may jatira Bakan pumph persamg Unaria, muhb serobi - Chandahamajiya dant.
A baratag punj panchama - Kajali mendababatat.

сигриоор 161

omen was displayed, and every kind of music was heard. Here were theptedist chanting songs of praise; here were Brikmans muttering Yedic spellt; while lovely women carolled jopous songs, every dreeling on the names of Rama and Sita. The joy was no great that the palace was too musil tor it, and it overshowed on all four sides.

Dold 304.

What poet can describe in full the magnificence of the palace of Davarath, in which Rama, the glory of highest herren, had taken birth?

Chaupdi 302.

The king next called Bharat:—"Go and prepare borees and dephants and chariots and start at once for Reghabir; marriage procession." When they heard this order, both brothers were full of exclinence. Bharat sent for all the chief officers and issued his commands, and they rose in joy and hast to perform them. First they made gorgeous trappings for the horses. Of different colours were the Rallant steed, but all well-proportioned and mettleome, touching the ground with their feet as lightly as though it were red-hot iron. I cannot tell all the ravinous breeds; they would race the wind and outstrip it. The princes who mounted them were all like Bharat, graceful, and gorgeously attired, with bow and arrows in hand and well-filled quirer at their side.

Dold 305.

Slim, elegant and lithesome youths, Lut expert warriors all; and with each knight were two footmen well skilled in sword-play.

Chaupái 303.

Full of high resolve, the warriors staunch in fight satlial forth and halred outside the city, putting their welltrained steeds through all their paces and rejoicing in the clash of tabor and dram. The charioters had made their cars equally grogeous with flags and banners and jewelled storaments, with elegant clausir and tickling bells, so as to outdo in splendour the chariot of the Snn. Innumersle were the black-cared horars!, which the grooms yelded to these chariots, and all were so beautiful and richly caparisoned that even a saint would be enraptored at the sight; skimming the surface of the water like dry land nor, sinking even hoof-deep, so marvellous their speed. After completing their equipment of armour and weapons, the charioteers gave word to their masters.

Dold 206.

Who all mounted in turn, and the procession began to form outside the city; all, whatever the object on which they were bent, were met by auspicious omens.

Chaupdi 304.

On the magnificent elaphonts were splendid complies wrought in a manner beyond all description. As the mightly elaphants moved, the bells changed like the thunder from the clouds in the grateful month of Sawan. And other whicles were there of many kinds; elegant pa'its and sedans and couches, wherein were sested comparies of mobile Brichmans, incarnations as it were of all the hymns of the Veda. The genealogists and bards and minatrels and chapsodists were mounted on other cars according to their rank; while mules and camels and oxen of every breed were laden with all sorts of bagging; there were also millions of porters with burdens along across their shoulders; but who could enumerate such an endless list of things and the crowd of servants, each with his own, set of appliances?

Dohá 307.

All were glad and fearless of heart, and were quivering with excitement in every limb, saying :—" When shall we feast our eyes with the sight of the two heroes, Ráma and Lakshman?"

Chaupdi 305.

The elephants' bells clanged with a fearful dim; on all sides there was a creaking of wheels and a neighing of horses; the drams would drawn a tempest, roor, and no one could hear himself speak or any one class. At king's gate was such an enormous crowd that the store pavement was all trodden into dast. Women mounted on him and the speak was the sight, with festal torches and salvers in their hands, and carolled meledious songs in a centary of joy beyond description. Then Sumanta made ready two chariots and yoked them with steeds that would outron the horses of the San, and brought them in all their beauty before the king-not Sáradi herself could do them justice—the one was for the royal retinue, but the other was still more splendid.

Doha 308.

This the king first caused Vasishta to mount, and then himself accended, with his thoughts fixed upon Hars, his guru, Gauri, and Ganes.

* Chauj di 306.

By Vasishta's side the king abone forth as Paranders beside Vishapati. After performing every exemony prescribed either by Ismily surge or the Veda, and impecting whatever had been done, he sallied forth to the blast of the conch shell, after obtaining the permission of his new, and with his thoughts fixed on Rúma. The beneficent god rejoiced to see the procession and rained down flowers. There was a confused uproar, horses neighing, elephants tempeting, and drams beating, both in the sky and on the line of march. Women and goddesses alike broke out in congo of joy, white tuneful claims played in sweet second

There was an indescribable clamour of bells, both great and small. The foot soldiers lesped and danced as if challenging stack; the jesters practised all kinds of buffoonery, provoking laughter with facetions songs.

Doha 309.

Gallant youths make their steeds curvet to the measured best of tabors and kettledrums; accomplished dancers note with surprise that they never make a step out of time.

Chaupái 307.

But it is useless attempting to describe the procession. Devry omen that concrete was fair and sampious. On the last side a blow-necked jay was picking up food as if to amonomo the very highest good fortunes on a fair field on the right were a row and amagus in the sight of all; a grateful breeze breathed soft and cool and fregrant; a woman was seen with a pitcher and child; a for showed binned! winding about; and in front a cow was sucking fit call; a beard of deer came out on the right, an indication of everything good; a Brahumani-kite promised all success; also a sydme bind perched on a free to the left; a man was met bearing curds and fish; and two learned Brahmens with books in their hands.

Dohd 310.

Every good and auspicious omen, and every bestower of desired reward, seemed all to have met at once as if to verithemselves.

Chaupái 308.

Every good and auspicious oness was ready at land fe-him whose glorious son was the incarnate God, a brill groom like listins, matched with such a brild as Sita, as with the plous Dastrath and Janak for the two parents. When they heard of the marriage, all the good omes began to dance and any:—"Now at last the Creator harelly made us to be what our name denotes." In this manner the procession set forth, with noise of horses and clephants and beat of droms. When Janak, the glory of the Solar race, heard of its approach, he had all the rivers bridged, and at different stages had convenient exet-houses erected, which vied in spleadour with the could desire—beds, food and linen. Ever discovering some new drawm all the travellers forget their own home.

Dotd 311.

When it was known that the procession was close at hand, and the heating of the drums was heard, a deputation went out to meet it, with elephants and chariots and foot and horse.

Chaup4i 309.

Beautiful golden vases and trays and salvers and easily dishest of every kind, then with other as a sweet as nectar and of indescribable variety, with much levelous fruit and, in whort, averything of the best, did the king in his gledness and as an offering. Ornaments, wearing appared, jewels of all kinds, birds, deer, horses, elephants, carriages of every description, well-omnously since, delicion performer, these, too, did the king soul, and therefore the state of the control of and their body quivered with excitement; while the guests were no less charmed by the preparations made for their reception and beat their drums.

If w blayen "distres" pome crypter real theyen "fout," but incorrectly, as the referst phone.

Doha 312.

For a little they joined their ranks and murched in their joy as one body for the sake of company; like oceans of bliss that had burst their bounds and come together.

Chaupái 310.

The nymphs of heaven rained down flowers and sang the glad gold hear their drums. The offerings were all set out before the king, with a humble and affectionate states to the before the king, with a humble and affectionate address. The king gradiously accepted them he had been address the king gradiously accepted them to the guest-chambers. The cloths spread as carpets for King Dasreth to tread upon were so gorgeous that the gold westlen assing them could boast no longer. The gold rained down flowers and shouted Victory, Victory. The apartments saigned were most beautiful and sappled with every kind of comfort. When Sits knew that the pre-cession had arrived in the city, she manifested her greatness to a slight extent, and with thoughtful heart called up the eight Siddis, or wonder-working spirits, and sent them to strange for the king's receiving spirits, and sent them to

Dohd 313.

Obedient to her command, they repaired to the receptionball, taking with them every kind of luxury and comfort and the joys and delights of heaven.

Chaupái 311.

Each goest on going to see his apartment found its resitable paradies in one, however, had an inking of the mysterious power that had been exerted, but took it all as Janak's doing, from alone recognized the influence of Sits and rejoiced at this proof of her love. When the two brothers hards of heir father's arrival they could not contain themselves for joy, but were too modest to speak to their gare, though they longed greatly to see their size again. When the summaries and took the two brothers to his soal with contentment, and took the two brothers to his bosom with quivering body and eyes bedweed with tears. They went then to Dasarath's mansion, like thirst-ing travellers who have spied a pool.

Dohd 314.

When the king saw the saint coming with the two boys, he rose in joy and advanced to meet them, like one who feels his footing in a deep flood of bliss.

Chaurdi 312.

He prostrated himself before the saint, again and again sprinkling on his head the dast of his feet. Visyamitra took him to his bosom and blessed him and enquired after his welfare. Then the two brothers prostrated themselves. The king on seeing them could not contain bimself for joy, but took his boys to his heart, and forgetting the intolerable pain of the past seemed like a dead man restored to life. Then they bowed their head at Vasitha's feet, who also embraced them most affectionately; and in turn they saited all the Brahmana and received their welcome blessings. They greeted Bharat too and his younger brother Satrophan, who at once raised up Râma and embraced him, and no less rejoiced to see Lakshman aguin. Thus they all met together with a display of the tumost affection.

Dol.á 315.

The all merciful and gracious lord had an appropriate greeting for all, whether citizens, or attendants, or kinsmen, beggars, or ministers, or friends.

Chaupái 313.

At the sight of Ráma the wedding guests were repaid wheir tolisome piorney, and their demonstrations of love were beyond all telling. Beside their royal father the four boys seemed as incarnations of the four great end of life. All the people of the city were delighted beyond measure at the sight of Dasarath and his sons; the gods rained down at the sight of Dasarath and his sons; the gods rained down and sang. Satánand with the Bráhmans and ministers of sato and the happositist and birds and players and ministers of the satisfaction of the

Dohd 316.

"Rama and Sita are the perfection of beauty, and the two kings the perfection of virtue;" thus would say all the people of the city whenever they happened to meet:—

Chaupdi 314.

Sits the incarnation of Janak's merit and Rám of Danath's no one has equalled them in devotion to Sita, nor has any one obtained such a reward as they have. And all we must be overything that is good, seeing that we have been born into the world as Janak's citizens and have bleald the beauty of Janak's and Ráms; who is so seperhitively blest as we are? and we have yet to see Ráms's wedding, of all sights the best worth seeing." So, too, week-voiced maidens whippered to one another :—"This marriage, my dear, will be a great treat. God has brought about an event of signal felicity in logging those two brothers in the guest-chambers of our eyes.

Dold 317.

Many and many a time will Janak lovingly send for Sita, and the two brothers, beautiful as a myriad Loves, will come to fetch her.

Chaupái 315.

There will be all kinds of hospitable cotertainments; who, dear girl, would not rejoice in such a father-cival-w? Every one in the place will be delighted at the sight of Ráms und Lakshman and now two other lads, my friends, have come with the king, who are a match even for them; one other, the other fair, but beautiful in every limb, so says every one but has seen them. "Said one in reply: "I awe when to do has seen them." Said one in reply: "I awe when to do has seen them." Said one in reply: "I awe when to do her, who has gain Lakshman and Satraghan as also one in appearance, perfectly beautiful in every finds from the other; while again Lakshman and Satraghan as also one in appearance, perfectly beautiful in every finds from the other to fit; the soul would fain express its require, but language fails it, for there is nothing comparable to them in all the three spheres of creation."

Chhand 34.

No poet, however ingenious, says Tulsi Das, could find aught comparable to them; for so unbounded is their strength, their courtesy, their knowledge, their amistillity and their beauty, that they have no peers but themselvest. All the women in the city, speculing out their granest, made prayer to Brahmá,—" May all four brothers be married here, and may we sing their welding some."

Soratld 29.

Said the dameds to one another with streaming eyes and quirering body:—' Friends, the two kings are of such boundless roligious merit that for their sake Mahádera will bring it all about."

Chaupdi 316.

In like minner they all expressed their desire, while their full heart overflowed with raptures. When the kings, who had come as Sita's suitors, as we the brothers, they all rejoiced and returned to their own homes, extelling Riamis high and spotlers time. In this fashion several days were spont, to the joy alike of citizens and guests. At length to aupticious day arrived, in the cold season, in the pleasant mouth of Aghan. The Creator hinself had carge of the moon, the conjunction of the stars and the day of the week were one and all propisions. Of this he sent word through Narad, and it was the very same that Jank's whise men had calculated. All the people on hearing this fact declared their astrologies to be very gods.

Dohd 318.

It was towards sunset¹, the clearest and most delightful hour of the day, that the Brahmans apprized Videba's king that the applications time had arrived.

I The world discondavia stands for the more common specials—left grand discover are deducted in meaning—and denotes the unfortunately profession of the day during which the Indian climate is thereighty that period of the day during which the Indian climate is thereighty with the control of the day to the cases when the sum is half ream; in the cold and deep seasan when the sam is half ream; in the cold and deep seasan when the sam is half ream; in the cold and deep seasan when the sam is half ream; in the cold and deep seasan when the same in the same is a same in the same in the same is a same in the same of a now, and that good-lad would be identify rendered dust of one of the same in the sa

Chaupdi 317.

The monarch cried to the family priest:-" What is now the cause of delay? At once Satanand summoned the ministers, who all came bearing festal vases : conches, drums, and tabors sounded; all decked their wases in auspicions wise: graceful damsels sang songs, and holy Brahmans murmured Vedic texts. In this manner they went with all ceremony to the visitors' camp, and on beholding the king of Kosala's retinue it seemed to them that Indra was of much less glory. " The hour has come, be pleased to start." At this the drums gave a thundering beat. After consulting his guru and performing the family rites, the king and the saint sallied forth with all their host.

Dohá 319.

Brahmá and all the other gods, on beholding the pomp and magnificence of Avadh's king, began to extel him with a thousand tongues and declare their own life to have been wasted.

Chauf di 318.

Seeing the auspiciousness of the time, the deities rained down flowers and beat their drums. Siva and Brahma and all the host of heaven mounted their chariots and came in crowds to see Rama's wedding, their heart and every limb throbbing and quivering with excess of love. They were so charmed with Janak's capital that their own realms seemed to them as nothing worth. They gaze with astonishment at the pavilions and all the marvellous decorations; at the men and women so beautiful and well-formed, so good and amiable and intelligent, before whom all the gods and goddesses seemed like the stars at the rising of the full moon. Above all was Brahma astounded at finding his own handiwork nowhere.

Dold 320.

But Siva admonished them all :- " Do not give way to such surprise; recover yourselves and reflect that this is the marriage of Sita and Raghubir.

Choupdi 319.

The mere mention of whose name destroys all that is evil in the world ; in whose hand are the four great ends of human life; such are Sita and Rams, says Love's destroyer." When Sambhu had thus admonished the gods, he R-25 again urged on his noble bull. Beholding Dasarsh murch forth, their soul was full of joy and their limbs trembled. The crowd of saints and Hafhamans who accompanied but seemed like incaraste gods ministering to him. In the midst shone forth the beautiful hoys as it were foal Beatinde manifested in its four phases. As they gued on the pair, of golden and supplies hue, the gods were moved with vulent love, and especially were they delighted the sight of Ráma, and glorified the king and rained down thoses.

Dohd 321.

Again and again as Umaand Mahadeva fixed their gaze upon Rama, all-perfect in beauty from head to foot, their body trembled and their eyes filled with tears.

Chaupdi 320.

On his body, dark as a prescock's glateoing neek his right raiment outshone the lightning; his wedding admented of every kind were most exquisitely fashioned; his face more lastroov than a cloudless autumn moon; his eyes more brilliant than the lotus; his beauty, in short, so matrellous that no words can describe how it moved he soul. By his side shone forth his charming brother, maloud his little side short so the standard his method has been also did all the attendant princes; while the family birds recited the glories of their line. As the king of the birds noted the section of the horse that Rams bestrode, he birdshed for shame; for its beauty was beyond all telling, as it might be Kamsdeva himself in equine disguise.

Chhand 35.

As though Kámadeva himselt in his love for Hims had so uned an equion disgusse, of such respleadent beauty as to charm all creation with his youth and vigour and form and points and paces. A saddle flashed its spleadoure on his back, thick set with pearls and rubies; bridle too and hand gleamed bright with jewels that dazzled the gaze of men, saints and gods.

I The four grades or phases of spacarga, i.e., final heatitude, are unlatata, resultance in the same heaven as god; sarsyata being in the same form as god; sarsyata being in actual contact with god; and saysyata, being in actual contact with god; and saysyata, being in actual contact with god; and saysyata,

Doha 322.

Obedient in every movement to the will of its lord, the gallant steed was as beautiful as a peacock, that dances in response to a thunder-cloud, whose dark mass is irradiated by the stars of heaven and the fifth lightning.

Chaupái 321.

But not Sáradá hetself could do justice to the noise steed on which Ráma rode. Sankara was enchanted with his beasty, and congratulated himself on having fifteen yets. When Hari Micetionately graced on Ráma he and Lakkhnii were both equally charmed; while Brahma rejoit-both of the beath of the steed of the beath of

Chhand 36.

There was exceeding joy in both royal courts; the welkin resounded with multindinous kettledrams; the god raised down flowers and shouted in their joy.—Glory, selery, floyr to Raghu's solable soon." In this sounce when they learnt that the procession was approaching all sorts of music began to play, and the queen gave orders to her handmalds to prepare the anyticious materials for the learts! rite.

Doha 323.

With many lights and torches and festal preparations of every kind, a bery of graceful dames proceeded joyously to celebrate the lustral rite.

Chaupdi 322.

With fawn-like eyes and face of moon-like brightness, each one was besuiful enough to rob Hati all self-conceit. Attired in co-tily gaments of different colours, correct all over with ornaments and rendered beautiful in every limb, they sang more melodiously than the kell to the muit of the bells on their wrists and waist and feet,

I The reason being that fo fra has a thousand eves as they mared, with all the anclasting grace of a wild dephant. All kinds of mosts played, and there were rejudings both in heaven and in the city. Indrain, Edurás, Lakchmi and Bhavain the wirests of all the queens of heaven, assumed the dispute of woman's form and fisched to the king's escapio, singing delightfully with divice ratics; and for juy there was no new hor recognized them.

Chhard 37.

In their extacts joy as they went to resiste the bridggroom with moleloots rong and sweet mode, who could tell who was who? The gots showered down flowers and exceptibing was delightful. As they gused upon the bridgroom, the source of biss, they were all gist of heart, their lotts syes overflowed with tears and their every limb solvered with readure.

Dold 324.

The joy of Sita's mother on the Lebolding Ráma's gallant appearance was more than a thousand Sáradás and Seshnage could tell in a hundred ages.

Chaupdi 323.

Restraining her teers out of regard for the surptionares of the event, the queen with glidness of heart performed the lastral rite, and deligently completed the estire cremony in accordance with Vedic prescription and family surge. The five kinds of muici were accompasied by festel classifing, and rich curpets of different sorts were spread upon the ground. After the lastral rite and the oblation Riams proceeded to the pavilion. So great was the eplendour and magnificance of Daszath and his relinate that Indra was put to shame by it. From time to time the gods rained down flowers, while the Bridman repeated the appropriate proprisialory tests. There was much juli-lation on the earth and in heaven that no one could her himself speak, much less any one else. In this manner

I The five kinds of music are as follows; the tanfra or stars; the tall; the tall; the flavyla, or cymbals; the sanking, or kettledrum; and fifthly, the true pet file or other wind instruments.

³ The prayer, or proclinary text, ordinarily known by the name of state, for a follows: One. Great Merch as me Ferrads saws before some states of states expenses are supported to the state of the states of the Rama entered the payilion, where the libation was offered and he was conducted to his throne.

Chhand 38.

When the bridgeroom was seated on the throne and the lastral like was performed, all rejoiced at the sight, scattering around him jewels and raiment and ortaments in profation, while women sang festis longs. Brahma and all the other gods disguised as noble Brahmans witnessed the spectale, and as they gased on the glorious sun of the lotts race of Raghu, reckoned it the happites moment of their like.

Dohd 325.

The barber and torch maker and singers and dancers, who gathered up the offerings that had been scattered about Rama,! bowed their head and invoked blessings upon him from a heart that was bursting with joy.

Chaupái 324.

Janak and Daarsth joined most affectiontely in the observance of every custom, whether religious or secular; and the toyal pair were so glorious a sight that the post-searching wherety to liken them and finding nothing, most acknowled himself defeated and sdmit that they were standard to the standard of the standard with delight the two tathers and raised down flowers and sang their praises:—'Since Brahmā first created the world, we have seen and heard of many marriages, but never till this day have we seen a match so perfect in all respects, and two sech well-matched fathers.' At the sound of this voice from

^{1.} The certain of distributing pieces of more among the circuit is still sign by the Muhammadas families at welling destroys, and special size for the purpose were street by Jahangir and others of the Delhi Emiss.

These are called made, while the word used by Tail in Batters and Carlotte and the Carlotte and Carl heaven on gracings and yet on true, there was no both eilers marre logs access of love. Janek led the way with due honours to the pavilion, offering libetions and unrolling a carpet as he went.

CHant 32.

Helindring the besity of the minifold decorations of the parillion, even the exints were actonibed; but the wis Jank with his own bands conducted them all to their sette. Paying the same bonour and respect to Vaciditie as to his own patton distuity, he secrited his Letening; but the supreme devotion with which he greated Viernmitte was of a kind that carpasses description.

Pold 326.

With great joy the king did hounge to Vampleys too and the other seints, and gave them all exalted thrones and received their blessing.

Chaupai 325.

Again he did homage to the lord of Kocals, taking him to be the peer of Mahideav, we, none other; with clarged hands in hemble phrase extolling him and entaging on his own marvellous good fortune. Then to all the wedding ones he pend of the men homage in serve respect as to the bridegroom's father, and assigned them all appropriate seats. How can I with my one tongoe describe all the pagent. With gifts and compliments and profess apploajest Januk did the honours to all his goests Brahmi, Yishon, Mahideava, the eight guardians of the world' and the good of day, who know Raghubir's glovy, disgained themselves is searned Brahmans and were delighted spectators of the festivities, Januk, though he recognized them not, said them homage as goods and led them to extited assis.

Chhand 40.

Who could tell who was who, when there was no one who could answer even for himself. As they gazed on the bridgroom, the root of joy, jr, was diffused on all sides. When he saw the gods, the all-wise Hama assigned them what

I The goardians of the eight quarters of the world are holes, of the east, of the southeast; Yams, of its distance in the southeast; Yams, of the southeast; Nirth, of the southeast the holes, of the northeast the part of the northeast the southeast of the northeast of the southeast of the northeast of the north seats they fanoied; and the heavenly powers were delighted to behold the gracious manner of their lord.

Dold 327.

As the partridge drinks in the light of the moon, so their eyes reverently drank in the beauty of Ráma's face with the atmost rapture.

Chaupái 326.

Perceiving that the time had arrived, Vasishty called, and Stafanal came with ready obedience. "Go now and a Stafanal came with ready obedience. "Go now and quickly bring the bride." On receiving this order the saint went glody, and on hearing bits message the gene with all ber attendants was delighted, and sent for the Brahman ladies and the siders of the tribe, and with songs of joy performed all the family rites. The goldenees, who were diagnised as somen, were all as a mitable and lovely, in the first bloom of their youth,' that the ladies were charmed to see them, and, though not recognizing them, held them more dear than life. Again and again the queen did them bonor accounting there equals of Um'a, Rham and Sáradá. After dressing Sita and forming in procession they joyously conducted her to the parillios.

Chland 41

live-resulty and with auspicious pour her attendant belies conducted Sita, each of them of towyl form and superly adorend, moving with the voluptious green of a young selphant. At this sound of their melolicous strain the sinks forgot their meditations, the god of love and the follower stable with the follower stables with the belies on their additional gleaning girdles rang out with the cymbals and a delight-ful accomposition at a beyond the ported.

Dobá 328.

Among her maidens bits shines forth in native loveliness, like Bliss personified among the Graces.

I Himdes of the older time he is perfect manus for class tipe and define and have interned dictions and sub-thistons of every conversable even of objects, with a definite technical same for each sarely. These which is restrictly defined as a woman from eight is active years of age, reasoning in complete the blowns of Fiftança and I its absolute tipe in the contract years of age, the middle of the contract years of age, the middle of the contract years of age, the middle of the contract years of age, the manuscript of the contract years of age, the manuscript of the contract years of age, the property of the contract years of the c

Chaupái 327.

Her beauty is indescribable, so great is it and so little my wit. When the wedding guests saw her approach, a saquisitely charming and every way divine, they all dibomage to her from their inmost soul. At the sight of her Riam was filled with love, and Dasarath and his sons wen glad of heart beyond all telling. The good side homage and rained down flowers; the saints gave their blessings in auspiclous wire; there was a confused noise of singing and playing and general rejoicing throughout the city. In this manner Sita arrived at the pavilion, while the great saint joyously recited the set forms of prayer and the two family groups performed all the due rites and ceremonies.

Chhand 42-43.

After the ceremonies the gurus directed the glad Brâtmanes to worship Gauri and Ganes: the gods in wishle form accepted the homage atd gave their blessing, which they received with joy. Whatever dainty dish or condimentary holy man fancied at any time wast once supplied him by the table attendents in plates and bowls of gold. Having reverently and duffielly performed all family rites in accordance with the Sun-god's prescription, and offered homage to the gods, they conducted Sits to her glories throne. The mutual love with which Sits and Ramar regarded each other was too much to look uppor; it exceeds all sense, or intelligence, or speech, or perception; how then can the nort express its.

Dohá 329.

At the time of the burnt sacrifice, the Fire-god in person most graciously accepted the oblation, and all the Vedas in the guise of Brahmans uttered the marriage formularies.

Chaupái 328.

What words can describe Jank's illustrious queenconsort. Sita's mother, in whose composition the Grator had combined the perfection of glory, piety, happiness and beauty? At the due time the saints called her, and she came responsive to the sammons with her attendant midens. Then shone forth Sunayana at Jank's left band, as Maina betide Himilaya. With their own hadthe glad king and queen take and place before Hams go'den vases and costly jewelled trays full of holy water and delicious performes. The saints with ampicious were recta the Vela, and at the proper time the heaven rains flowers, while the father and mother of the bride look on in replace and begin to wash the holy feet.

Chland 44-47.

Their whole frame quivering with excess of love, they began to lave the lotus feet; while both in heaven and in the city there were singing and music and shouts of victory barsting forth and overflowing in all directions The lotus feet that ever gleam in the lake of Siva's bosom; by meditating upon which for a single moment every impurity of the soul and defilement of this wicked world is removed; by whese touch the sage's guilty wife attained salvation; whose honeyed fragrance, as the gods declare, is ever present on Sambhu's head; on which the bee-like soul of saints and ascetics ever dwells are they reach the heaven of their desire; these holy feet are bathed by Janak, 'midst the glad acclaim of all. The two family priests join the hands of the bride and bridegroom and recite their descent. The mystic union is completed, and at the sight Brahma and all gods and men and saints were full of joy. As the bride's parents gazed on the gracious bridegroom, both their soul and body were raptured with delight; and having completed every family and scriptural observance, the glorious monarch gave his daughter to her lord. As Ilimalaya gave Girija to Mahadeva, and as Ocean gave Lakshmi to Vishnu, in like manner did Janak bestow Bita on Rams, and creation was glorified anew. After stationing the happy pair on one spot (the bride so fair of hue, the groom so dark) and performing the sacrifice with all due rite, and tying the knot, the circumsmbulation commenced,

Dold 330.

At the sound of the hazzas and ministrelsy and the recilation of the Veda and the applicions chanting and the mutic, the all-wise gods were delighted and rained down flowers from the tree of paradise.

Chaupdi 229.

The bride and bridegroom with measured paces performed the circumambulation, while all present feasted their adoring gaze on the spectacle. The beauty of the happy pair is not to be described; whatever comparison might be suggested would fall short of the reality. The lovely images of Rams and Sits were reflected in the jewelled pillace, and sparkled like incarnations of Kamaders and Rati, who had come to witness Rama's glorious wedding and, from mingled curiosity and bashfulness, at one moment showed themselves openly and at another retired out of sight All the spectators were enraptured and like Janak forgots about themselves. Joyonely the saints bade them pace th circle round; the rite was accomplished and the marriag offerings made. Itams applied the vermilion to Sita's fore head, brilliant beyond all description; and his arm seeme like a serpent thirsting for ambrosis, as it decorated be moonlike face with the red powder that filled his lotu hand. Then by Vasishta's direction the bride and bridegroom took their seat together.

Chhand 48-51.

When Rams and Janaki took their seat, Dasarath's soul was rejoiced and his frame quivered with emotion, as again and again he fixed his gaze upon them and saw as it were his own virtue like the tree of paradise blossoming snew. There was rejoicing all over the world at the news of Rama's wedding, how can it be described? I have but one tongue in my head, while the joy had no bounds. Then Janak, having received Vasishta's order, provided all things necessary for the marriage ceremonial, and summoned the three maidens, Mandavi, Srutikirti, and Urmila. After affectionately performing every rite, the king gave first to Bharat in marriage the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Kusaketu. Then pext with all honour Janak bestowed upon Lakshman Janaki's lovely younger sister; and finally gave away to Ripu-sudan the bright-eved and charming Srutikirti, no less amiable than beautiful. As bride and bridegroom modestly gazed on each other and noticed the contrast, they were glad of heart; while every one delightedly applauded the beauty of the scene, and the gods rained down flowers. All equally beautiful, though diverse in bue, they shone resplendent in the pavilion, as though the 'four states of life with their several lords had met in one living soul.

I Rama and Bharat being dark were married to Janaki and Mandari who were fair; while the fair bridegrooms, Lakehman and Satrughna were wedded to the dark brides, Urmilia and Sruti-kirti,

Doha 331.

The king of Avadb gazed with delight on his four sons and their brides; as though that jowel of monarchs had in them realized the four methods of religion and the four cognate ends of life.

Chaurdi 330.

All the princes were married with the same riles as I have described for Ráma. The enormous dowry was beyond description; the whole pavilion was fell of gold and jewels Shawks, robes and silks of kinds in the greatest profusion and of immense value; elephanis, charicals, horses, measuremants, and cows with gilded horns and hoofs, as beautiful as the cow of plently; things so many that no one could count them, nor credit their number if he had not seen them. At the sight the gravitians of the world broke out into praises of the dowry, and Avahl's king received it all most graciously. To every one who saked was given whatever he desired, and what remained over was taken to the greatif quarters. Then with folded hands and hated breath Janak countecously entreated all the bridegroom's party.

Chhand 52-55.

After continuity, solvesting all the matrings quests with high ceremony, gifts, spologies and compliments he joylally proceeded with much devotion to do bit humble homes to the sainty throng. With bowed head be propitited the goal, and thus, with bands clasped to prays, addressed them all, "Gods and saints desire only a good will; can Ocean's wants be satisfied by a little too of a few drops ?" Again what he had been all the saint which had been allowed to be the king of Kowla, with winning word fail of love and smishibity; —"O king, I am greatly concluded by your alliance; know that my realm and all that I have infersly your to command. Take thee glits ay your band-mailers and gractorily protect them, and pardon me my six and presumption in inviting

I The skip shal, Le, the foot fruits or each of Me, are, as has been before explained, Merea, Artis, Kima, and Mais, which are been combered to Damarsti's foot some. The first brites are likered to the skide strange of the method of the strange of the strange of the method of the strange of you." The glory of the Solar race in turn addressed his royal consin in terms of highest honour; their contrasy was past all telling, and the love that overflowed their hearts. The deities rained down flowers as the monarch proceeded to the guest-chamber, midst the crash of kertifedrums, the muttered recitation of the Veda, and glad rejoicings both earth and in heaven. Then by the saint's command as singing auspicious strains as they went, the fair ladies of it court conducted to the marriage pavilion the bridgegoon and their bridge.

¹ Yet though it derives no beneft from each a weatty offering, it both demands and accepts it.

Dold 332.

Again and again did Sita gaze upon Ráma with model mien, but full of confidence at heart; and her eyes athirs with love outshone the fish in Kámadeya's blazon.

Chaupdi 331.

Dark in hue and full of untaught grace, his beauty put shame a myrind Loves; his lac-stained feet gleamed his some lotus, the haunt of bee-like saintly souls; his pare and lastrous yellow robe outshous the rising sun or lightning fash; and the little bells on his waistbelt made delicion tinkling; long were his arms and clasped with glittering bangles his yellow jance set him off to perfecting signet ring would ravish all hearts; lustrous were all his many wedding adornments and the stars and collars on his broad breast; across his shoulders a yellow scarf with frings of geam and pearls; with lotus eyes and bright pendauts from his ears and a face the very store-house of beauty; lovely brows and charming nose and on his forehead amout bewritching spot, while on his head the asspicious marriage-crown shone glorious with knotted pearls and geams.

Chhand 56-59.

The knotted genn and the crown and his comely person ravished all hearts; and not a woman or goddest in hearts or earth who did not break a blade of grass at the night of his beauty. After scattering round about him jewels and raiment and adornments they perform the lunter life, singing ampicious songs, while the gods rain down finers, and bards, minstrels and thapacolits declars his glory.

I lither involuntarily from agitation and bashfulness, or as a charm to arest the evil eye, or to show how little they valued anything in the with in comparison with his beauty.

When the bride and bridegroom entered the marriage pavilion, great was the joy of the attendants, who with festive songs and in most lovingwise began to perform the accustomed observances. Ganri herself taught Rama, and Sarada told Sita how to manage the mess of rice-milk : and all the ladies of the seraglio were so taken with the merry sport that they reckoned it the happiest moment of their lives When Janaki saw in the gems on her figgers the reflection of the all-beautiful, she dured not move her eyes or lithesome arm for fear of losing his presence. The rapture of delight, the ecstasy of love surpassed all telling ; only those happy dames could comprehend it who escorted the bride and bridegroom to the guest-bouse. Then might be heard on all sides blessings and great explication in herven and on earth and a naiversal shout of joy :- 'Long life to the four happy couples.'

Doha 333.

Hermits, saints and arges, the gods too on beholding their lord, sounded their kettledrums and returned in gladness, each to his own realm, raining down flowers and crying 'Victory'. Then the four princes with their brides approached their father, and such was the glory, the Ielicity and the rapture that it seemed to overflow the court like a torrest.

Chaupdi 332.

Again there was a magnificious banquet, to which Janak sent and invited all the visitors. Carpets of richest staff were spread as the king sallied forth with his son. After reverently washing his goests' feet, he seated them all according to their rank. First Janak bathed the feet of Avadil's lord with a loving devotion part all itelling; then be bathed Rāma's lotus feet, feet ever embrined in Mahadeva's heart; and, also with his own hand, takind the feet of the three brothers, regarding them as Rāma's peers, To all the king sasigned appropriate seats, and hen gave out the disher, made all of jewels instead of leaves, and stitched with policy his part of the contract of the con

Dold 334.

The quick and oberquious waiting-men passed round, and in a moment every guest was supplied with rice and condiments and fragrant butter, and everything luscious and savoury and nive.

Chrerdi 333.

After making the fire obtained, they began to real litering with delight the while to allowine songs. There were confections of many kinds ewester than acter or than words can tell, which the will-trained writers handed tound, and such as infaille wariety of succe that no con could remember all their names, with food of the four kinds mentioned in the sacret books and an indevcibable variety of each kind, and seasoning of the six flavours, and each fireour exhibited in a countless number of dishes. As the banquet proceeded, jests were bandied about in pleasant wire, and not a man or women but beard his name brought in. Louder and broader grew the railley were moved to laughter as they listened. In this manner they all feathed, then procellinously riseed on the mouth:

Doha 335.

And Jenak in due form presented Dasarath and all his guests with jun, and the glorious king then retired to his own apartment.

Chaupdi 334.

There was ever some new rejoicing in the city, and the whole day and night seemed gone like a minute. At any dawn the best of monrchs woke, and mendicants began to chant his praises. As he gazed opon the gallant princer and their brides, the rapture of his soul was beyond all tellings. After performing his morning devotions he went to his gura, with his heart full of love and evolution and clasping his hands in prayer bowed before him and said with a voice melliflacous sweetness:—"Hearkoe, king of saints; it is by your favour that to-day my toils have been rewarded. Now holy father, nummon the Brähmans and present them all with cows with costly adornments." On hearing these words the guru much applanded the king, and sent to summon the whole saintly throng.

I The five vital sits to which oblations are made are prize, update, and no, wydra and uddna.

Doha 336.

Then came Vámadeva and Nárad and Válmíki and Jábali and Visvamitra and all the other great saints and ascetics.

Chaupdi 335.

The king threw himself upon the ground before them all and worshipped them, and then conducted them to seats of honour. Next to seat for 4,00.000 owns, all as gentle and beautiful as the cow of paradies, and after decorating them in every possible way bestowed them with great you pon the saints, with many a phrase of stodied hamility declaring it to be the happiest day of his whole life. On receiving their blessing the king, the pride of the solar race, rejolect, and next sent for all the begging fratenity and gave them, according as such desired, gold, or apparel, or jewels, or horses, or elephants, or chariots. They all left loudly telling and singing his praises:—"glory, glory, glory to the lord of the San-gold's race. Such were the rejoicings at Ráma's beyond all that could be told even had Is thousand tongues.

Doha 337.

Again and again the lord bowed his head at Visyamitra's 'feet :---' All this happiness, O king of saints, is the result of your heniquant regard."

Chaupdi 336.

King Desarsh spent the whole night extelling Janak's affection! and mainfilling and magnificence; every day on rining he asked permission to return home, but Janak would lovingly detain him. There was constantly some new Rick in his honoper, and every day a thousand different kinds of centertainment. The rejoicings in the city never fingged, and no one liked to think of Desarsh's departure. In this manner many days were spent, and the guests were fast bound by the cords of love, till Virumiters and Sationad went and the state of the cords of love, till Virumiters and Sationad went and the state of the cords of love, till Virumiters and Sationad went and the state of the st

I The line, which I translate, stands thus: arip and rais northal but Another reading is aren and bleads partial highligh.

Dold 338.

" Make it known in the palace that Avadh's lord wishes to depart." At these words the ministers, Brahmans, counsellers and princes were greatly moved.

Chaurdi 337. When it was noised in the city that the guests were leaving, every one anxiously asked his neighbour if it were a fact. When they heard they were actually going all were as unhappy as a lotus that fades in the evening. Every place where the visitors had put up on their arrival was crowded with parting presents, fruits and confections of every kind, and dishes too various for description. A multitude of porters laden with wearing apparel? and cooks beyond number were sent by Janak with 1,00,000 horses and 25,000 chariots all exquisitely finished throughout. with 10,000 powerful elephants duly caparisoned, at sight of which earth's guardian elephants would feel asbamed of themselves, besides wagons full of gold and raiment and jewels; buffaloes also and cows, and things of all kinds. Doha 339.

The dowry moreover, given by Videha's king was immeasurable and beyond all telling; and Indra, had be seen it, would have thought the riches of the universe as nothing in comparison. Chaupdi 338.

When the whole equipage had been thus arranged Jansk despatched it to Avadh. On hearing that the gues were about to start, all the queens were as unhappy fish when water falls. Again and again they clasped Bi to their bosom and blessed and exhorted her, saying "May you ever be beloved by your busband, and with hi live a long and happy life; this is my blessing, obedient to your new father and mother and guru, a regarding your lord's distleasure do as he bids." I sweet-voiced companions, too, in their overpowering affi tion reminded her of woman's crowning duty. Again a The word said probably stands for schaye 'anapteious,' though

² For diers 'meaning appared,' some coffes real diesh, 'osse,' In this line reld may be the Persian word meaning . I see ; but again after thus duly admonishing them the queens clasped the four brides to their bosom, and time after time, in the midst of their maternal embraces, exclaimed:—'Why has God made women?'

Dohd 340.

Then came the joyous Ráms, the glory of the Solar race, with his brothers, to Janak's palace to take leave.

Chaupái 339.

All the people of the city, whether one or women, ran to see the loop brothers so lordy and so unaffected. Said one:— To-day they have made up their mind to go, and Janak has completed all the preparations for their departure; so feast your eyes on their beauty for the last time. All of the complete all the preparations for their departure; who can any; friend, what we have done to deserve that god should bring our eyes such guests. Like a man at the joint of death who is given ambrovia; or as one who has been hongry all his life and discovers the tree of paradis; or as one of the damaed in hell who approaches thris leet, so an I after seeing them. Gaze epon likins's beauty and treasure this imagein upour heart, as it were the jewed in a serpent's bood." In this manner the princes glaldened the eyes of all as they proceeded to the place.

Dold 341.

The ladies all rose in their joy as they beheld their exquisite beauty; and the mothers of the brides, in token of their delight, pass the lustral lamp around their heads and scatter rifts.

Chaupet 340.

Fell of love at the vinen of Rama's beauty, the affectionately fall a this fest again and again, not are concious of shame, so rapt is their rout in devotion and an involuntary attachment lepon all description. After bating him and his brothers and rubbing his body with countries, they loringly rutterian him at a languel of the six flavors. Then resign that the time had come, Rima said to them in the most ambite, loving and modest tone: "The large is described by the formal properties of string for Arall and has sent as to take leave of you. O mother, be pleased to give my our commands and wave regard me with affection as your commands and wave regard me with affection as your commands.

by love to speak a word, but classed their daughters to their bosom and then markly gave them to their lords.

Chhand 60.

Merkly her mother surrendered Sita to Hāma, crying sgain and sgain with hands clayed in prayer:—"Ah, my son, you, I ween, are all-wire, and to you are apparent the thought of all men. Know well that Sita is dear as life to the king and myself, may, to all her kinsfolk and all the people of the city: consider her smisbility and her affection and accept her as your own servant.

Sorothd 30.

You are the fullness of desire, the crown of wisdom, the beloved of the universe, quick to recognize merit in you votaries, destroyer of evil. Rama the all merciful."

Chaurdi 341.

So raying, the queens still clung to his feet and their voice seemed lost as it were in the quickstands of lore. On hearing their most affectionate address, Riams abowed them the highest honour, and with clasped hands begged his conge again and again making them obesiance. When he had received their blessing, he lowed once more and then with his brothers took his leave. Treasuring up his sweet and gracious image in their heart, the queens at first seemed paralyzed by excess of love: but summoning up courage they called their daughters and again gare seemed paralyzed by excess of love: but summoning up courage they called their daughters and again and again gave much an excess them a matternal embrace: then leading them a few steps would take them to their arms yet again with ever-growing mutual love. Time after time they left their attendant for yet one more last embrace, as a heifer not yet weared from the conv.

Dohá 342.

Every one in the palace, attendant and all, were so everpowered by emotion that it seemed as though they had made the city of Videha the very home of piteousness and lovers' partings.

Chaupái 342.

The pet parrots and mainds, that Jánaki had kept in golden cages and taught to speak, cry in their agitation: " Where is the princes?' and, on hearing, which of them was not robbed of all peace of mind? When birds and beasts were thus distrest, how can the feelings of the people be told? Then came Janak with his brother (Kusa-dhusje) overflowing with love and his eyes fall of tenes. As he gazed upon Sits, all his courage deserted him and his eminent asceticiem lasted but in name. As he clasped Jánaki to his bosom the stronghold of his stera philosophy was broken down. All his wise consellors admonished him and his him; and seeing the unfitness of the time he recovered himself, self, and again and again taking his doughter to his heart he ordered a gorgeour palki to be got ready.

Dold 343.

The whole court was overpowered with emotion, when the king, perceiving that the suspiceous moment had errived, exated the bride in the pálki, with his thoughts intent upon Ganes, the author of success.

Chaupel 343.

The monarch gave his daughter much advice and instructed her in the whole duty of women and in family customs. He bestowed upon her many men-serrants and mid-servants and all her own favourit attendants. As abe went on her way the citizens were in distress, but all good signs and ampleious omens were forthcoming. Drahman's and ministers with all their retines pioned company to secont the Réja. The weddings goests made resuly their chariots and elephants and hoves, and there was a tomolicous noise of music. Then Dasarsath called up all the Dráhmans and gratified them with gilts and compliment; and patting the dust of their totus feet upon his head rejoiced—great king as he was—to obisina their Lenico. As he set forthon his way with his thoughts on Gane,

1) sh4 344.

The gods rained down flowers, the beavenly nymphs sang for joy, as the king of Avaib set forth for his capital 'midst the clash of jubilant music.

Chrupát 311.

Courtoosly the king dismised the turphers and reversuly hade all the mendicants approach and testowed appears them consuments and clothes and horses and electhants, and affectionately oberighing them made them stand up before him. After again and again recting his prairse they torand home with lisms in their heart. Thou, spoke time after time, Janak in his exceed not turn back. Once more said the king in gi 'I beg you to turn back, size you had distance. At leat he dismounted and ren his eyes overflowing with love's torrent. The lord with folded bands and in a voice I ambroain of affection:—"How can I fit unworthings, on whom my lord has confet honour?"

Doha 345.

Komla's king in return showed the profeto the father of the bride and his retinue embraced with mutual courtesy their heart cothe love they felt.

Chaupdi 345.

Janak howed his head to the throng of iceived a blessing from all. Next he reverent sont-in-law, the four brothers, each a treasu anishility and accomplishments; and clasping touts hands he cried in access begotten of fore how can I tell thy praise; swan of the Mánas anists and Mahdeav's sonts; for whose sake tise their ascetteium; devoid of angar, infate ness and pride it the althpervaling Brahm, the immortal, the supreme spirit, at once the sum of all qualities; whom neither words nor facey whom all philosophy Isils to expound it whose i divine oracles declare unutterable, and who te selfame in all time, past, preceed, or future?

Dohá 346.

Source of every joy, thou hast revealed the material vision; for nothing in the world is reach of him to whom God is propitious.

Chaupdi 346.

Thou hast magnified me in every way, and me as one of thy servants hast made me thy very tenthou-and Saradas and Seshadas, though it their count for a myriad ages, could tell all my i than art easily approach by the slightest evidence of affection—and therefore time after time I implore with obspect lands that never may my soul be deladed into deserting thy feet." On hearing these excellent sentiments, the true bitth of devotion, even telans, in whom all pleasure ever dwells, was pleased and with much courtevy saluted his father-in-law, holding him egyal to his own sire. O vivarmitra, or variable New the bowed himself before Dharat and affectionally embraced him and gave him his Messing

Dold 347.

Then the king embraced and blessed both Lakshman and Satrughna, and all again and again bowed the head, being overnowered with mutual love.

Chaupdi 347.

At last, after many courtesies and flattering speeches, Idma and his brothers proceeded on their way. Then went Janak and clasped Visramitrs by the feet and upt the dust of his feet on his head and cyes:—"Hearken, O greatest of saints; now that I have seen you, I am persuaded that nothing is beyond my attainment. Such biles and glory see the sovereigns of the universe might desire, though they would be athamed to express their longing, has all, my lord, been brought within my reach, for all prosperity follows upon seeing you." After again and again humbly bowing the band, the king received his blersing and took leave. The marriage procession set forth to the sound of music, and the whole populace, great and small, were all earaptared and, as they gazed upon Rdma and feasted their eyes upon him, were happy for life.

Dohá 348.

Halting at convenient stages on the road, to the great delight of the people, the procession, on an auspicious day drew near to Avadh.

Chaupdi 348.

Midst the beat of kettlederams and noise of many labors and sakshats and conches, and a lin of horses and elephants, and clash of cymbals and drams and sweet-tuned clarions, and clash of cymbals and drams and sweet-tuned clarions, and the citizens heard the procession coming, they were all in a tremor of delight, and werey one began to decorate his own house and the mirkets and ettects and squares and gates of the city. The whole roadway was watered with perfumes on every side were festal squares fil elegant devices; the show in the băzăr was chiling, with wreaths and fligs and banners as Trees of the area-not and the plustsin and the midser, the Ladamb and the camdia, were transladen with fruit, and grew into fine trees as so touched the soil, being set in jeweiled screens; workmanhigh.

Dold 349.

In house after home festal vases of every ranged in order, and firahma and all the gods wer as they gazed upon the city of Hama.

Changeli 349.

At that time the king's palace, was no resplet the god of love was distracted by the sight of at ficence. It was as though everything ampicion good omen and all lenaity, all plentourners and and joy and felicity and glainess had come in hot to visit King Dasarath. There was a universal ket as gift of 1 kimas and Janaki. Trops of fawere crowding together, each exceeding in love Lovegod's queen, all with festal offerings and tor singing, as it were so many Sarsavatis. The rejo the palace at that glad time are beyond all de Ham's mother Kausslyk and the other queens greenome with love to this known the most result of the palace at the glad time are beyond all de Ham's mother Kausslyk and the other queens

Dohá 350.

They bestowed large gitts upon the Brahman worshipping Ganes and Mahadera, and were as reju Poverty would be on finding the four great prizes of

Chaupái 350.

Each royal mother was no overcome with love light that her feet refused to walk and the whole be paralyzed Greatly longing for a sight of Ráma, ibegan preparing the lastral lamps. Instruments of were played in various modes, as the glad Sumitria as her asspicions offering of termeric, dud grass, carde, and flowers, pan, betelout and well-favoured roots blades of wheat, yellow pigment, parched grain, and it of the graceful trait in embessed golden vesses, so exqu birdlings. The auspicious offerings and the performes were beyond all telling; there was nothing of good once which each one of the queens had not prepared. With lostral lights arranged in various devices they sing for joy melodious festal strains.

Doka 351.

With golden salvers in their lotus hands, laden with their offerings, and their body quivering with smotlen, the queens go forth with joy to perform the lustration.

Chaupái 351

The heaven was darkened with the fames of incease, as though overhang with Saran's densest tunderscloud: the gots raised down garlands of flowers from the tree of paralise which seemed to the beholders as cranes in graceful flight; the bustons jewelled festons resembled the raisbow; the maidens on the house-tops, now in slight and now not of slight, were like the lift! flashes of lighting; the best of the drams was as the creath of thunder; the beggers as chamorous, as the cuckons and the frogs and peacocks; the sweet perfames were as copious showers of rais, and all the people of the city like the freshood pastures. Seeing that the time had arrived, the guru gave the word, and the glory of Raghu's line made his estry into the city, mindful at heart of Saubha and Girjá and Gane, and exciting greatly, he and all his rettime

Dobá 352

Every omen was auspicious; the gods beat their drums and rained down flowers, while the heavenly nymphs danced for joy and sang jubilant songs of triumph

Chaupái 352.

Bard, minsteds, rhapsodists, mimes and players chanted his given that irredistes the three spheres In all ten regions of the heaven might be beard loud shouts of the Vota. All kinds of mais played, and gods in heaven and men on earth were alike enraptared The magnificance of the procession was past all telling, and the joy was more than heart could contain. The citizens made a profound obeisance to the king, and then were gladdened by a sight of Ikima. They scatter around him jewels and vestments, with their eyes full of tears and their body all tremnlous with excitement. Their wives more over his bead the lutival lights and rejoice greatly to behold the four noble princes; but when they lifted the curtain of the well-appointed palki and saw the brides, they were still more clad.

Dohá 353.

In this manner, to the delight of all, they arrived at the gate of the palace, where the glad queens waved the lustral lights over the princes and their brides.

Chaupdi 353.

Time after time they perform the ceremony in a rapture of love that is beyond all words. They scatter around in boundless profusion gold and silver orannents and gems and silks of every kind, and as they gaze on their four sons and their brides, are overwhelmed with the blist of heaven. Again and again as they regard the beauty of Rama and Sita, they think with joy that this is the happiest moment of their life. As her companions look again and again into Sita's face they sing and cault over their good fortune. Every moment the gods rain down flowers, midst dancing and singing and obsequious homige. Seeing four such charming couples, Sáradá looked up all her similes, but not now would do, all seemed unwerthy, and she could only stand at gaze enchanted with their loveliness.

1) sh4 354.

After performing all the rites prescribed by the Veda or family usage, they conduct their sons and their brides to the palace; sprinkling lustral water, spreading carpets in the way, and waying torches.

Chaujdi 351.

After scating the brides and their grooms on four times so magnificent that they seemed as if mule by Love's own bands, they proceeded resecretly to live their screet feet and to do them bomage—all holy salvey were with increase and lights and oblations in accordance with Vedic ritual. Time after time they pass the torch around and wave over their head gorgeous fains and clavinis and exacting the salvey of the salvey o beggar who has found the philosopher's stone; or a blind man restored to sight; or a dumb man endued with sloquence; or a warrior who has triumphed in battle.

Daha 335--56

Greater by a hundred million times than their for was the rapture of the queens, when Rams and his brothers returned home married. As the royal matrons performed the accustomed ceremonies, the brides and their grooms were much confused, but Ram's smiled to himself on beholding their joy and delight.

Chaupdi 355.

In due fashion they did homige to the gods and the spirits of their ancestors, and every imagination of the heart was satisfied. Humbly they begged of all the highest boon, namely, the prosperity of Rams and his brothers, and the gods unseen conferred their blessing. The matrons in their joy took them to their bosom, while the king sent for all who had joined in the procession and gave them carriages and raiment and jewels and ornaments. Then, on receiving permission, and still cherishing the image of Rams in their heart, they returned in joy each to his own abode. All the people of the city, both men and women, were clad in festal attire, and in every home was a noise of jubilant music. Anything that a beggar begged was at once bestowed upon him by the gladking, and every attendant and every minstrel band was overwhelmed with gifts and compliments.

Daha 357.

All protoundly bowing invoke blessing upon him and sing his praises, as the king with his guru and the Brahmans proceeded to the palace. Under Vasishta's directions be reverently performed every ceremony prescribed either by usage or the Veda. The queens, on seeing the throng of Brabmans, thought themselves most highly favoured and rose to greet them. After bathing their feet and doing them all due homage, the king fessted them at a banquet and loaded them with affectionate civilities and gifts. Greatful at heart, they blessed him at parting. To the son of Gadhi he paid special bomage, easing: - My lord, there is no man in the world R-28 so blest as I am ;' and with many other flattering speeches both he and his queens took of the dust of his feet. Next he assigned him a splendid apartment within the palace; the king and his royal consorts alike watching his every wish. Again he adored his lotus feet with the greatest humility and devotion.

Chaupat 356

Dold 358.

The princes and their brides, the king and his royal consorts, again and again did reverence to the guru's feet and received the holy man's blessing.

Chaupat 357. With humility of heart and deep devotion he placed before him his sons and everything that he possessed. But the great saint asked only for the accustomed offering, and invoking upon him every blessing set out with joy on hi homeward way, with the image of Rama and Sits impresses upon his heart. Then were summoned the Brahman dame and the elders of the tribe and invested with fair robes an ornaments; and next the younger ladies of the housel, who too were presented with dresses such as each most fancied Every person with any claim to be remembered receive from the jewel of kings suitable remembrance according t his taste, while more dear and honoured friends were over whelmed with courtesies The gods, who witnessel Highs bir's marriage, rained down flowers as they applieded th spectacle. Dold 359.

And with beat of drum returned each to his own realm ; # highly delighted and talking to one another of Rama glory with irrepressible rapture.

Chaufdi 358.

The king showed every one all possible honour, ar with a heart full to overflowing of gladness proceeded the Irivate apartments, and then gasing upon the prim. and their brides took them to his bosom in a repturo embrace and with a joy beyond all telling. Feating h little daughters in his lap in a most affectionals manner, again and again caressel them with gla iness of heart.

The masses in a ft at a marrage take much the same place in belowers in the west, and the wirk month be so translets, went movements as the Charmers, and a the mora at the mart and an an analysis between the part and the second of the se the Islain of the larcem were charmed at the sight, and their soul was Islied with bappiners and estatation, while they listened with delight to the king's account of the marriage and his praises of King Janak's virtue and aminability, and the kindness of his reception and his generous magnifecence. The hing told it will like a hired encomisat, and the queens were enraptured when they heard of slit that had been done.

Doha 350.

After bathing with his sons the king summoned his guru's kinsmen and entertained them at a sumptnous banquet till five hours of the night were spent.

Chaupdi 359.

Lovely women sang joyous songs, and the night was one of exquisite happiness. As they rose from their sests, all were presented with pds and decorated with beautiful and sweet-scented gurlands; then after one more look at Ráms and howing the head they received the royal permission to ratire each to his own abode. The display of love and repturous delight and the beauty of the coort at that time was more than could be told by a hundred Sáradás or Seshnigs or by the Veds. or Brahmá, or Mahádewa, or Guess how then can I till it, any more than as the contrast of the contrast the same of the contrast of

Dohd 361.

Go and put them to bed, for they are tired and sleepy."

And so saying he retired to his own couch with his thoughts intent or Rama's feet.

Chaupdi 360.

On bearing the king's kind words, they made ready the bed, which was of gold and set with genue, with various rich coverings as soft and white as the froth of milk, and pillows finer than words on tall. In the jewelled clamber were sweet-scorted garlands, and a beautiful canopy flashing with lastrous genus which defed description; no one who had not seen it could imagine it. When they had prepared this exquisite couch, they took up Ráma and lovingly laid him down upon it, who again and again had to tell his brothers to leave him before they too retired to rest. On seeing his dark little body, as soft and delicate, the fend mothers aried:—"O my son, how could you kill on the way the terrible monter Taraká?

Hold 362.

How were you shie to slay those savage demons, those ferocious warriors, who in battle held no man of any account, the vile Maricha and Subábu and all their host?

Chaup d: 361.

It was by the saint's favour, It vow, my son, that God averted from you countless calamities, while you and you brother guarded the sacrifice; and by your guar's blessing you acquired all knowledge. At the touch of the dost of your feet the hermit's wife attained to salvation; the whole world it filled with your glory; in the assembly of prices you broke Sive's bow, though lord as tortoice-shell or a thunderholt; you have won universal glory and renown and Jánaki for your bride, and have now with your brothers returned home married. All your actions are more than human; it is only by Viswanitra's good favour that you have prospered. To-day my birth into the world has borney that the your monthle face, my son. The days that were spent without seeing you, God ought not to take into account at all."

Dalá 363

Rama in most modest phrase reassured the royal dames, and meditating on the feet of Sambhu and his guru and all Brahmans, he closed his eyes in sleep.

Chaupái 362.

As he slept, his pretty and piquant little month gleamed like a red tone, half closed at eventible. In every house women kept vigil and jested with one another in suspicious wise. The city was so brilliant, only so brilliant the little litt saluted the Brahmans, the gods, their guru, and their father and mother, and gladly received their blessing and while the queens reverentially gazed upon their face advanced with the king to the door.

Dohá 364.

Pure though they were in themselves, they performed all the customary ablations and bathed in the boly river and completed their morning devotions ere they returned to their interpretations.

Chaupdi 363.

The king on seeing them took them to his bosom. Then at his command they girdly seated themselves. The whole court was rejoiced at the sight of liams, and accounted their eyes approach? blest. Then came saint Varishty and Vatermitra and were conducted to exalted thrones. Father and sons rewerently adored their feet, and both the holy men rejoiced as they gazed on Ráma. Vasishty recited served legends, while the monarch and his queen listened. He told with joy in diffuse strain of all the doings of Gabhir's son which surpass even the imnignation of the saints. Cried Vámders:—"The tale is trace; its fame has become renowned through the three worlds." All who heard were giad, but in Ráma and Lakthmao's heart there was exceeding joy.

Doha 365.

Thus passed the days in perpetual delight, happiness and feetivity; and the whole of Avadh was full to overflowing with bless that was ever on the increase.

Chaupdi 364.

After calculating an anyticious day, they looscand the string on the wrist with no little selementy and rejoicing. The gods, beholding the constant succession of delight, were in raptures and begged of Brahmá that they might be born at Aradb. Visumitra was always withing to take leave, but was permuded by Himán's affectional centratics to stay on. Day after day, seeing the king's devotion and the excellence of the nature, the great scale in was load in his praises. When he asked patmission to go, the king was greatly moved and with his sons atood before him in the way, syning: --- bly lord, all that I have is yours, and I, my sons, and my wires are your sersants; he erer gracious to these hops and allow me to see you. So exping the king with his sons and his queens fell at his feet, and speech falled his tongue. The Brahman invoked upon him every kind of blorsing and set forth ambits a display of affectic that is past all telling, Itâma and his brothers lovingle executing him till they received orders to reform.

I A few days before marriage the wind in bound mund with a piece of clish montaining particles of different things that are an ecosed in prames a boilies sirgue; and this is not taken off again 101 after the marriage is completed.

Daha 366.

The moon of Gadhi's race went on his way rejoicin; and praising to himself the beauty of Rama, the piety of the king and the magnificence of the marriage festivities.

Chaupdi 365.

The Vámadera, the learned year of the boase of Haghn, again told the story of Gádhi's son. As he listened to the saint's bigh lame, the king thought to himself how effications his own good deed had been. At his command the crowd dispersed, while the king and his sons entered the palace. Everywhere the glory of Itama's wedding was anne, and his holy fame was diffused through the three worlds. From the day that Itama brought his wife home, all delight made its home at Avadh. The rejectings attendant on the lord's marriage were more than the tongue of the serpent king could tell, but knowing the praises of Itama and Sita to be a mine of anypiciousness and the very life and salvation of the race of poets. I too have tried to sing them, in the hope of thus sanctifying my song.

Chhand 61-62.

For the purpose of sanctifying his song has Talis told of the flam's glory; but the acts of Raginair are a boundless ocean that no post can traverse. All pious soils, that devoutly hear or recite the anspicious festificities that accompanied Ram's investiture with the sacred thread and his marriage, shall by his and Vaidehi's favour attain to everlasting felicity. Blessing on the lord of Himshigh daughter, team whom have learnt my song tall who bearked to Ilari's deeds acquire a constant access of devotion after the results of the state of the s flood, extinguishes at once the fire of covetousness; and in this assurance Tulsi Das devotes his every thought and word and act to Harr's praise.

Doha 367.

The times are evil; the body is stained with filth; there is but one remedy; he only is wise who so thinketh and in faith meditates upon Hari.

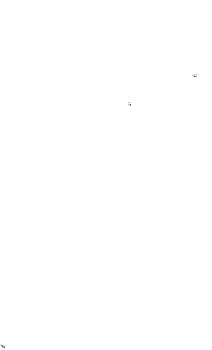

Mave a hearty love for Harr sfeet, discarding all vanities, much time has been spent in sleep; awake from the darkness of delosion. Whoever with love and reverence listens to the tale of Itäma and Sitts marriage shall be happy for ever, for Hainsis prates are an unfailing the happy for ever, for Hainsis prates are an unfailing the state of t

[Thus endeth the book entitled constitution, composed by This Part the levelowed of guere excident, continence and contentiolisms, being the first descent into the holy lake of Edun's cheeks, this cleanses from every defilement of the world?

14

BOOK II.

AYODHYA.

Santheit Invacation.

May he on whose left side shines resplendent the daughter of the mountain-king; on whose head in the river of the gods; on whose brow the crescent moon; on whose throat the poison-stain; on whose breast a huge snake; whose adornments are streaks of ashes; the chief of divinities; the eternal lord of all ; the complete, the omnipresent, the moon-like Sive, the holy Sankara ; may he protect me.

May be who neither rejoiced when anointed king, nor was saddened by painful exile in the woods; the holy son of Raghu of the lotus face ; may be ever vouchaste to me success and prosperity. Him I adore, with his body dark and soft as the lotus, with Sits enthroned on his left side. with praceful bow and arrows in hand, even Rama the lord of the race of Ragbu.

Daha 1.

Cleansing the mirror of my soul with the sand from the lotus feet of the holy guru, I sing Rama's spotless fame, the giver of all good things.

Chaupai.

From the time that Rama returned home with his bride there was a constant succession of joys and delights. The fourteen spheres were like the great mountains, where clouds of virtue fall in showers of happiness; wealth, affluence and prosperity were bounteous rivers, which overflowed into Avail as into the ocean ; while the noble citizens, men and women alike, were its brilliant pearls, all precious and of perfect beauty. The magnificence of the capital was beyond description. It seemed the chief darurre of the Creator, Que zing on Ramchandra's moon-like face, the people were perfectly happy; the queens and all their attendants were enraptured to see their beart's desire bear fruit : and still more enraptured was the king, as he heard tell and saw for himself Hama's beauty and accomplishments and amiability.

Dald 9.

In every heart was one desire, which they expressed in their prayers to Mahaders : "O that the king in his own lifetime would entrust Rams with the regency."

Chaursti.

One day the monarch sat enthroused in court with all his nobles. Illimed the locuration of every virios, he was delighted beyond measure to hear of Richm's renown. All kings were solicitude for his patronage, and the very god activate his tistendahlp. No man so blest as Dararch in the three spheres of the universe, or in all time—past, present or to come. Words fail to describe his blessedors, who had for his son Riams, the source of every blies. The king happened to take a mirror in his had, and looking at his face in it set his crown straight. Close to his ear was a white hair like old age whispering: "O king, make Riams regent, and thus accomplishment the purpose of vour life."

Dold 3.

Having thus considered and settled it in his mind, the king on an auspicious day and at a fitting time, his body quirsering with emotion and his soul full of joy, went and declared his purpose to his guru.

Chaupdi.

Said the king: Hearken, great saint; Ráma is now perfect in every accomplishment. Servants, ministers, the whole body of citizron, whether my cennies or friends or indifferent to me, all hold Ráma as dear as even I do, and regard him as a glorious incarnation of my lord's blessing. The Bráhmans and their families, reverend sir, have the same love for him as you have. They, who put on their bead the dust from the feet of their spiritual father, obtain as it were the mastery over all dominion. There is no my equal; but all that I have now a desire at heart; it can only be accomplished, my lord, by your good favour. The saint was pleased to witcess his sincere devotion and said: "O king give me your commands.

Dohd 4.

Your name and glory, sire, provide for every wish; on every desire of your soul, O jawel of kings, success follows naturally."

Chaupdi.

When he saw the gutu so amiably disposed, the king replied smilingly in gentle tones: "My lord, invest Rams with regal powers; he pleased to direct the necessar arrangements to be made. Let this happy event take plac in my lifetime, that the eyes of all people may be gladdene by the sight. By my lord's blessing Siva has brough everything lappily to pass, but I have still this one desir at heart. It will then be a matter of no concern whethe I remain in the body or depart shoon, it I have nothing or this score whereof, to repeat." When the saint hear Dasarable noble words, he experienced the greatest delight: "Hear kee, O king; the ford whose averted face all cree trees lament, and to whose now must pay for removal of a distress, has been born your son even the boly and compassionate Riam

æ

AYODHYA 20

Dold 5.

Quick, O king, let there be no delay, but at once mak all the preparations: happy and auspicious indeed the da when Rama is proclaimed regent."

Chaupái.

The glud king proceeded to the place and summone bits servant, the minister Someta. He bowed the heac crying 'All heil,' and the king then declared to him the glad news: "Today to my great joy the gure has charge me to install Rimm as heir to the throne. If the propose seems good to the conneil, prepare with glidness to impreshe royal mark on Rama's brow." The minister was rejoiced to hear these gracious words, which fell like shower of rain on the young plant of hi-desire. Wit clasped hands he made his petition: "O lord of the work live for ever; the deed you propose is good and beneficial hasto, my lord, let us have no delay." The king was de lighted by his minister's assent, like a creeper that spread space when it has once clasped a strong bought.

Doha 6.

Said the king: "Whatever orders the saint may giv with regard to Rams's coronation, see that you perform with all speed."

Chaupdi.

In geatle accents the glad saint spoke and said: "Brin water from all holy places, and all kinds of berbs, root fruits and flowers (enumerating by name every auspicion variety) with chauries of different sizes apparel of all sorts. both of worl and silk and every other material, with jowels and all the applicable things that there are in the world, that are if for a king's installation." Then after repeating all the forms prescribed in the Yeds, he said: "Erect in the city a number of prelime, and plant the streets in every quarter with fruit beying! magoes and trees of betel-and and plantains, and fashion bright and beautiful jewelled quarter, and have all the battirs speedily decounted, and do reverence to Ganes and your gars and your family god, and dilignostly serve the Brishman.

Dold T.

Make ready flags and banners and wreaths and vases, horses too, and chariots and elephants." All were obedient, to the holy sage's words and busied themselves each in his own special work.

Chaurdi.

Whatever the order that any one bad been given by the sint, that he regarded as the very first thing to be done. The king worships Bráhman, saints and gods, and does everything to promote Iláma's prosperity. On hearing the glad news Iláma's institution, all Avadh resounded with songs of jubilee. Good omens declared themselves in the body, both of Rains and Sita by a sudden quiver of the lucky side, shd they said affectionately to one another: "This betoken, Ilbarats' return. We have greatly missed him for many a long day. This good sign assures us of a friend's approach, and in the whole world there is no friend so dear to us as Bharat; this good omen can have but one meaning." Every day Risma is as levingly anxious about his brother as a turtle for its eggs in the sand far away.

Doh 8.

At that time the ladies of the court were as delighted to hear these most glad tidings as the waves of ocean swell with joy on beholding the moon in its glory.

Chaupai.

First they took care that those who brought the news were richly guerdoned with jewels and robes; then with a body all quivering with emotion and soul full of love, they proceeded to make all festal preparations. Sanitra Bilds in a lovely square with exquisite gens of every tind. Rama's mother, downed in joy, sent for a crowd of Brahams and loaded them with gifts then worthipped the local divinity and the good and the expents, and rowed them fature sacrifices, praying; "In your mercy grant me this boon, that Rama proveper." Apprictuous station are chanted by moonfaced, fawneyed damsels, with voice weeks a bit of the kell.

I For an phal, 'fruit-bearing,' some MSS, read panas, 'the jack-fruit or Attocarpus integrifolis.'

Dold 3.

On hearing of Rama's installation, all good women were glad of heart and began diligently to make festal preparations, thinking God to be gracious to them.

Chaufdi.

Then the monarch 'sommoned Variethe and each him to kláma's againments to inform him of the coming creat. When Itaghanath heard of the ours' approach, he came to the door and bowed his head at his feet, and after correctly sprinking lastral water, conducted him in end paid him honour in the articeed prescribed modes. Then after again with Site claying his feet, it am thes spoke his lotter hands folded in prayer. For a lord to visit his servant's house it a source of great joy, a care for all distress; yet is lad here more fitting, ser, and more in accordance with custom, but you knowly set to say you wanted me Sites my ford has graciously waired his perogutive, my house hast-od-up broams highly lette Lett me know, bufy faither, what are your orders; it is for a servant to do his matter service.

Dold 10.

On bearing these affectionate words the saint estelled lingbuble: " O liams, glory of the solar race, it is like you to speak thus."

I has 18 motive of advancy between the filters (filters, a was Elephysh, both) state. (2) perfect, scatter for the left (filters a fast) (2) perfect, scatter for the left (filters a fast) (3) obtains, state for inverted to most is, (2) perfectable performed (3) days (most constitution) and the left (3) perfect (3) pe

Chaupdi.

After eulogizing Rama's high qualifications and amiable character, the great saint with much emotion explained : " The king has prepared for a royal installation, and wishes to confer upon you the dignity of regent. To-day, Rama, you should devote yourself to practices of devotion, that God may bring the matter to a happy issue." Having thus admonished him, the guru returned to the king ; while Rama's heart was all amazement: "My brothers and I were all born together, and together have we ate and slept and played in childhood; the piercing of our ears, the investiture with the sacred thread, our marriage, in short all our rejoicings have taken place together. This is the one flaw in a spotless line that the eldest only should be enthroned without his younger brothers." These gracious regrets on the part of the lord remove all unworthy suspicion from the mind of his votaries.1

Dold 11.

Then came Lakshman, full of love and joy, and was welcomed with words of affection by the moon of the hilylike Solar race.

Chaupan

If there was noise of mosic of every kind, and the delight of the city was beyond description. All prayed for Bharat's return, that he might come quickly and like them enjoy the spectacle. In every street and lane and house and market and place of resort, men and women were exping to one another: "When will to-morrow come and the anspicious moment in which God will accomplish our desire; when, with Sits by his side, Itams will take his eat on the golden throne and all our wises be gratified." They were all saying: "Who will to-morrow come?" But the envirous gods prayed that difficulties might arise; the rejoicings at Arada pleased them as little as a monlight night pleases a thief. So they hombly called in Xiradi and again and again threw themselves at her feet:

Dokd 12.

"O mother, regard our great distress and make hasts to relieve it. If Rama refuses the throne and retires into the forest, all will be well with us."

I If Elima had at once and gradly accepted the proff-red dignity, it might have been arged by objective that he had taken an entire advantage of his boother Staral's absence

Chaupai.

On bearing this prayer of the gods, she stood still thinking sadly : " I am like a winter's night to a bed of lotuses." The gods seeing her hesitate cried yet once more : "O mother, not the least blame will attach to you; for Raghu-rao-you know his nature well -is exempt from sorrow as from joy ; and (as for his people) they, like all other creatures, have their share in pain or pleasure, under the law of necessity : go therefore to Avadh and befriend up gods." Time after time they clasped her feet, till she yielded and went, though still thinking to herself : " the gods are meanspirited crew; though they dwell on high their acts are low; and they cannot endure to see another's prosperity." Again reflecting on the future, that the ables poets would do her will, she became cheerful of heart and flow to the city of Dasarath, as it were some intolerably inauspicious aspect of the planets.

Doká 13.

Now Keikeyi had a wicked handmaid, by name Man thurá. Her ideas Sáradá first distorted and made her very storehouse of meanness and then went her way.

Chaupai.

When Manthark saw the preparations in the city, this you of selvitive, the most on and the singing, the asked the prople : "What mean these rejoicings?" When also issued thank is magnetism, the soul was faire and also plotted thank is negarism, the soul was faire and also plotted which a wreich that she was, how that very night to defer it; like a craftly following, who has spice a honeycom bunging from a tree and sobemes how to get hold of it. S she west crying to Dibarat's mother. "What is wron now?" the queen smiled and said. She gave no answe but drew a deep sight and, the a woman, begre a shedding flood of tears. Said the queen laughing: "You were alway an impudent girl, and Cask-shama, I suspect, has been girlin you a lesson." Still the wicked handmaid said not a worb to be treathed hard like some recommon serpent.

Dold 14.

Said the queen with a nervous smile: "Is Rama n

1 If Rama post late ends, his adventures will firm an local ansithis the for the posts of all time, who will therefore be always tovoking my aid a proportioning my good will.

well, or the king, or Bharat, or Lakshman, or Satrughna?"
These words tortured the heart of the hump-backed girl.

Chaupdi.

"Why, O lady, should any one give me a lesson, and who is there to encourage me in any impudence? With whom again is it well to-day if not with likims, whom the king is now associating with himself on the throne? God has been very gracious to knassjá; and after seeing her, who else can have any pride left? Why not go and see all the magnificence, the sight of which has so agitated me? Your son is away and you take no heed, making sure of your influence with the king, and not observing his treachery and williness so droway are you and so anxious for your bed and pillow." On hearing this affectionate address, the queen—who know well her forward mind—crief "Peace, have done. If you speak to me again to this way, you mischiel-tanker, I will have your tongue palled out.

Dohd 15.

But remembering that the one-eyed, the lame and the hump-backed are ever vicious and vile, more especially if they be women to boot, and slaves, Bharat's mother smiled and added:

Chaupdi.

"I have only given you kind advice and am not the least bit angry. If what you say is true, it is the best and happlest of days. It has ever been the, custom in the Solar race that the eldest-born should be the lord, and the young terrothers his servants. If Riam is really to be crowned to-morrow, ask of me, girl, what you will and I will gire it. you. There is no difference between Kausslya and the other royal mothers. Riam is equally fond of all: in fact he has a special affection for me, as I have often tested. If I am born again, God in his goodness grant that Riams and still be said in your office of the servent of the serv

Doha 16.

I adjure you in Bharat's name, tell me the truth without

I Be-ause the fact that the queen asked first of all about Rama's welfare showed her intense love for him.

ATODRITA 211

any fraud or concealment; declare to me the reason why you are in distress at such a time of gladness."

Chaupái.

"I have been satisfied once already; have I a second tongue that I should speak again? I deserve to have my head broken on the funeral pile, wetch that I am, since I pile you by my well-meant words. Those who make the Inlea spear tree are the people who please you, my lady; while I offend you. Reneators it to sell speak only as my mittent please. I fended that the sell-meant of the sell-

Daha 17.

On hearing these affectionate words, so deep and crafty, the queen, being only a weak-minded woman and under the influence of a divine delusion, really believed her enemy to be a friend.

Chaurds.

Again and again the kindly terms abe questioned her, like a fram benithed by the acong of a hunteren. Her reason veered as fate would have it so; and the slavegir rejoined at the success of her acheme: "You ask, but I am afraid to reply, now that you have given me the name of mitchic-maker;" thus poke the multigeant stat: of Aradh, trimming and fashloning her speech in every way to win condiscon: "You spoke, O queen, of Site and Risma as your friends; and true enough Hann did love you once, but you free and true enough Hann did love you once, but now the says are past, in time friends become fore. The san lovigorate the lotte, but burns it to ables if it have no water the tival queen would tear you up by the root; take care of your garden and hedge it about.

Dold 18.

Thinking yourself the king's farcatite and that he is quite in your power, you notice nothing; but however fair his words, his heart is black; but you are so good-outered.

I derindry literally 'II,' he a pame for the malignant star Sature one of whose expectation excupies a period of II years

Chaupdi.

Râma's mother, on the contrary, is deep and crafty; and having found the means has played her own game. The king has sent away Bharat to his grandmother's by her suggestion, and because he is your son; for she said all the other queens are well disposed to me, but Bharat's mother presumes on her influence with her lord. You, hady, are the thorn in Kausaly'a's side; a he is too deep and crafty for yo to fathom; the king has greater love for you than for an one else, and like a rival she cannot bear to see it. For he own ends she has worked upon the king and got him to fit a day for Râma's inauguration. Now Râma's promotion is a good thing for the family: all are pleased at it, and I to like it well. But I am alarmed when I consider the consequences; bearen make them recoil on her own head!"

Dohá 19.

With innumerable crafty devices she planned her conning tale, telling story after story of jealous wives, whereby to increase her resentment.

Chaupdi.

Overmastered by Inte, the queen was personded at heart, and signed her by the love she bore her to speak out. "What is it you would sak? still do you not understand; even the brate beasts know what is good or bad for them. For the lest fortnight the preparations have been going on, and it is only to-day that you learn the news from me. I am clothed and Ied in your service, and I must therefore speak the truth at any cost. If I invent a word of falsehood, may God repay me for it! Should Riams be crowned to mertow, God will bave sown you a crop of misfortance. I draw this line on the ground, O lady, and declare most emphatically that you will be like a fly in a milkbow! If you and your son will rulumit to be srevants, you will be able to stay; but one of the productions.

Hold 20.

As Kadru tormented Bioata I so will Kausalya trest you

I Kafra and Email, were the two wires of the patients Karara, the former being the mother of the serpest rave and the stretch believes the believes the believes the believes the believes the believes the stretch believes of the service of the ser

Bharat will be a slave in bonds, under Rama and Lakshman."

When she heard these ontting words, — Kokaya's daughter could say nobing; she was all in a feer for lear her limb, were bathed with prespiration; and she trembled hike a phanian stake. Then Itumphack bit her tongged and with innumerable crafty speeches kept conceiling the queen saying 'courage,' courage,' lill with her lill-teaching che warped her like a seasoned plank, which there is no hending straight sagin. By a tern of fate the vile became a favouriet, as though a heautiful flaringe should flatter an yelly crane. "Hersken, Mandari, your words are true; my right up is always throbbing and every hight I have seem Ill dearn; but in my folly I did not tell you. What can I do, friend? I am such an innocent that I cannot myself tell right from left.

Dohá 21

. Up to this day I have never of my own accord done an unkindness to any one : for what offence has beeven all at once put me to such intolerable distress?

Chaupái.

Rather would I go and spend all my days in my father's house than live a servant of a rivel wife Whomever God creates the dependent of so enemy, it is good for him to die rather than live." Many such lamentable speeches did the queen otter, and Humpheck, on hearing them, formed a thorough woman's device: "Why speak thue, as though patient of disgress? Your honour and wedded joy shall yet increase delity, and may he who has plotted you this misfortane in the end respthe fruit of it himself? Since your servant, my ledy, first heard the bad news, I could neither eat by day or sleep at night. I conculted the actrologies and they declared positively: "Bhacet shall be king, this much is certain." If, mudam, you will only be king, this much is certain."

I The name of Kaiseyls (sister was Avra quit, but is increase eather Kaivar from the contrip over which he raide approach to be pair of the Buspin. The Brahmand of the white Yelper Yella mentoons Assay and, king of Kelaya, as nearly contemporary with State father, Janak as interesting act noted by Phd. Montr Williams.

2 Maning 17thably to remound kernell that she must be earled to what she said.

A This coupled appears to be an interpolation, as it is said not to be in the Baspor MS.

act upon it, I can tell you a way : for the king is under an obligation to you."

Dohá 22.

"I would throw myself down a well if you told me to do so, or even abandon my husband and son. Speak, then: you see how great is my distress: why should I not do what will be for my good?"

Chaupái.

Taking Kaikeyi as a victim for the slaughter, the Hump-back whetted the knile of treachery on her heart of stone; and the queen, like a sacrificial beast that abibbes the green sward, saw not the approaching danger. Plessant to brar, but disastrons in their results, her words were like honey mingled with deadly poison. Says the handmaid: "Do you or do you not, my lady, remember the story you cot lot the wood to be supposed to the store of the two boons promised you by the king?" Ark for them now and relieve your soil; the kingdom for your rout, banishment to the woods for Raims; thus shall you triumply over all your rivals. But ask not till the king has worn by Haima, so that he may not go back from his word. If you let this night pass it will be too late; give heed to my words with all your heart."

Doh4 23.

Said the wretch, having fully contrived her abominable design: "Go to the sulking-room; make all your arrangements circumspectly, and do not yield too readily."

Chaupdi.

The queen thought Humpback her best friend, and again attolled her clereness, saying: 'I have so such friend as you in the whole world: I had been swept away by the flood but for your support. To-morrow if God will foldil my desire I will cherish you, my dear, as the apple of mine eye.' Thus lavishing every term of endearment on her

A foretime Danastik had marched fato the scath for Vijayanta, selly in the Danastik forest, to wave managatian its ling rinind-suns), or demander, who had reculted agricust fasher. The battle lastest till algebra and Danastik wounded and second-or, would have been led for deed on the field, in the Caulter's laster him on plato her charles, incorrecting her some proceedings of the bedre an adverse, and specific records to life by the self-of-the second of the bedre an adverse, and specific restored to life by the self-of-densities of the bedre and the self-of-the second of the self-of-the self-of-the bandmaid, Kaikeyi went to the dark room; her evil lemper busing the soil in which the servant-pirl, like the raise, had now a the seed of calamity, which, watered by treachery, took roots and pronoted with the two booss as its feares, and in the end rain for its frait. Gathering about her every token of rescentment, the acid her reign by her evil connect. But meanwhile palace and city were given over to residetine, for no one knew of these whiched practices.

Dold 24

All the citizens in their delight were busied with festive preparations, and the royal hall of andience was crowded with a continuous stream of people passing in and out.

Chaupái.

Delighted at the news, not a few of limm's boyish friends went to congratulate him, and the Lord, sensitive of their affection, received them graciously and politely asked of their wifers. At his permission, they come through the paleos discussing his praises: "Is there anyone in the whole world so kind and amisble as Higsplubir? What-were future births fats has in store for us, God only grant us this, that we may always be the servants of Sita's lordly spouse: we ask for nothing more." Thir was the desire of verty one in the city tonly Knikey's best was in a flame; for who is not spoiled by will communications? There is no profit in taking connect with the ville.

Doh4 25.

At eventide the happy king repaired to Kaikeyi's apartments, as it were Love incarnate visiting Obduracy.

Chaurdi.

He was dimayed when he heard of the chamber of warth and could exercely put his feet to the ground for fear. It, noder whose mighty arm the Lord of beaven dwells secure, and topo whose favor all monarchis wait, was in a ferre at bearing of an angry women; see how great is the power of love. The bearers of trident, thunderbolt, and wand are slain by the flowery shofts of Rati's sponse. Anniously the king approached his beloved and was tertile. It was not to be the standard of the contract o

The king drew near and asked in gentle tanes : " Why are you angry, my beart's delight?

Chhand 1.

Why so angry, my queen?" and touched her with his hands. She put away her lord and flushed upon his furious glance like an entangul ergent, with her two with for its double tongue, and the house for langs, spring a a valuerable point. Under the influence of fate, as Tolsi, the king took it all as one of lore's devices.

Soruthd 1.

Again and again the king crief: "Tell me the cause: your anger, O besutiful, bright-eyed dame, with roles: melodious as the koil, and gait as valuptions as it elephant.

Chaufdi.

Who is it, my dear, who has resed you? Who is it with a head to pure and so enamoured of death? Tell me who begger I should make a king, or what king I should banist from his realm. I could slay even an immortal, were his your enemy; of what account then are any poor worms of men and women? O my love, you know my sentiments and how my eyes ever turn to your face as the partridge to the moon. O my beloved my life, my sun, and everything that I own, my palace, my subjects are all at your disparation. Could I tell you a word of untruth, lady, at least an eath by Râma must be binding. Ask with a smile whisterer you destre ; adonn your lovely person with jewels; consider within yourself what an hour of torture this is for me, and at once, my darling, put away this unseemly attire."

Dohd 26.

On hearing this and considering the greatness of the oath, the wicked queen arose with a smile and resumed her royal attire, like a huntress who sets the suare on marking the chase.

Chhand.

Thinking her reconciled, the king spoke again in soft and winning accents, his whole body quivering with hors; "Your heart's desire, lady, has come to pass; there is jey and gladness in every house in the city; to emorrow Rama the rank of Hegent; so, my lore, make ready for the featival." At the cound of these untoward words she sprang up with a boand, like an over-ripe good that bursts at a touch; with a scale and the state of the touch; with a scale on the flip, but with such secret pain at beart as thick's wife who dare not toy openly. The king could not practitus her craftly echames, for she had been tatored in every villion; by a master; and skilled as he was in statesmonthip, the abyse of weman's ways was more than he could fathor. Again abscride with a further show of hypocritical affection and a forced smile in her eyes and on her flips:—

Dohá 27.

"Ask, ask, indeed; but tell me, sir, when has it come to giving and taking? you once promised me two booms, and yet I doubt my getting them."

Chaup4i

The king replied with a smile: "I see what you mean, you are very fond of a little guarrel. You kept my promise in reserve and asked for nothing, and as my way is, I forgot all about it. Do not true with the guilt of a lie, but for two requests make four and you shall have them. It is an immemorial rule in the Risghu Ismily to lose life rather this break a promise. No number of sin is squal to a lie; in the same way as myriads of ghancils seeds will not make a monatian. Truth is the foundation of all merit and virtue, as the Vedas and Toriques declare and as Manu? has expounded. Moreover I have sworm by Rifam, the chief of our hours, the perfection of all that is good and amiable." When she had thus bound him to his word, the wicked queen smiled and cried-loosing as it were the bandage from the eyes of her hawk-like plot.

I On seeing her husband unifor pupishment, lest she too abould be unaleto suffer with him. Such at least seems to me the most obvious meaning of the comparison, though some of the flinds comprehators explain it differently.

² from measuring ton Mans and West, "the mosts"; but the forter may well stands, as the great languare on many passages of the Gold Insistence or surrough on the most to fresh. Thus in VIII, 81-35.— A misson, who aster the treit in enfektor, obtain a shiph phere in hereon and the great set reputation on earth a such a statement in held in restrator even by financial most in the figure of the standard of the first man whence is purified from my injurital pair every cause. It have often thought of the standard or originated in bold characters in the Sanktit original and set up in our court of justed they might have a wholesame effect.

Daha 28.

The King's device being as a pleasant forest, and the general happiness as a flock of hirds, at which as a huntress she sent forth the cruel falcon of her speech:

Chaupdi.

" Hear, my beloved, what is the desire of my heart. Grant me for one boon Bharat's installation ; and for the second (I beg with clasped hands, O my lord, accomplish my desire) may Rama be banished to the woods for 14 years there to dwell in the penitential garb of a hermit." At these words of the queen the king's heart grew faint, as the chaktra is troubled by the rays of the moon : he trembled all over, nor could be utter a sound, like a partridge in the wood at the swoop of a falcon ; the mighty monarch was as crestfallen as a palm-tree struck by lightning; with his bands to his forehead and closing both his eyes, as it were Grief personified, he began his moan : " My desire, that had blossomed like the tree of paradise, has been stricken and uprooted as it were by an elephant at the time of bearing. Kaikeyi has desolated Avadh and laid the foundation of everlasting calamity.

Dohd 29.

What a thing to happen at such a time? I am undone by putting trust in a woman; as at the time of heavenly reward for penance an ascetic is destroyed by ingnorance."

Chaupdi.

In this manner the king burned within himself, and the kinded woman, seeing his evil plight, thus began: "What, then, is Bharat not your son too, but a slave as I am, bought for a price? If my words, thus like arrows, pierce you to the heart, why did you not think before you apke? Answer now, say either yes or no, most truthful lord of Raphu's truthful line. Reise me the boon you promised, break your word and be publicly disgraced. When yes eagaged to grant the boon, you were load in your prises of truth, imagining, no doubt, that I should sak for a haadful of parched grain. When Sivil, Dadhichi2 and Bali3, made a promise; they gave life and wealth to keep their word."

383

Kaikeyi's speech was as stinging as salt applied to a burn.

Dold 30.

The righteous king took courage and opened his eyes, and beating his head gasped out: "She has pierced me in the most vital cart."

Chaupdi.

He saw her standing before him borning with passion, as it were Fary's own aword drawn from the sheath, with ill-conneal for its hill and cruelty for its sharp edge whetted on the Humphock grindstone. The monarch saw her stern and terrible: "She will rob use either of life or honour"; but stilling his heart he cried in suppliant tones which she regarded not: "Bharat and Kham are as my two eyes. I tell you truly and call Sira as my witness. O my beloved, what it this ill word that you have uttered, destructive of

I King Swiger Saryan, the son of Unanan, had strondy offered 32 grant sarrifaces, and was hoping to complete the full sommer or a hondred, pregrate sarrifaces, and was hoping to complete the full sommer or a hondred, when forths, judices of his own supremary, distributed to percent bun. Hisward savening the facts of a heave and changes days, the ego of Ger, such took beliefer in Sart's hones, also therepas promised that he would protect took beliefer in Sart's hones, also therepas promised that he would protect took holder in the same passed of the function for his other and he had been such took holder to be the same of the function of his own such lawly good, and that it was major of the function for him of Tare hing offered his manything else what he held to same, but the had would be satisfied with sochhong but an equal weight of the king's som mourch begin to hak had she by greened his norm hold and case in the other; but till the done weighed hearier. At last, when all had been care and strateful his hill find he had for the some first function, I have done care and of the colors his not if it is tragent.

2. When Indra and the other gods were hard present by the demon fritrs, Vishnes told them that there was a great saint named Dashboll practions prenance in the Namumba torest, and that if I be world be the naw his boose first could be made into weapons, before which to creamy that the contract of the country of the contract of the contract decoded hisself to death, and out of the borne the gods made thomselved in with which they wou as a case, rectory.

3 King Bali, the son of Vincohana, had no extended, the empire that, in had acquire, dominical over three worlds. Lorder, to rich basself of a diagreem a treat, applied to Vinheir who assuming the form of a dwarf, as the case of European, separate before that set begred as about. The large state of the control of the all order, confidence and affection? I will not fail to deepatch a messenger at dysbreek and as room as they hear the news both brothers will come. Then after fairs as aspicious day and making all due preparation. I will solemnity confer the kingdown on Birrat.

220

Dold 31.

Rama has no greed of empire and is devotedly attached to Bharat: I made my plane according to royal usage, thinking only of their respective ages.

Chaupdi.

I swear by Râma that Leil you true of his mother, that she never said a word to me. I arranged it all without sking you, and this is how my scheme has failed. Pat away your displeasure, assume a festal garb; yet a few days and Bharat shell be Regent. There was only one thing that pained me, your second prittion, really an unreasonable request. To day your bosom burns with unwonted fire; it is anger, or do you jest, or is it all really tree? Tell me calmly Râma's offence. Every one says that he is ambifuly itself. Even you used to praise and caress him, and I am guite perplexed at what I now hear. His pleasant wars would charm even an enemy; how then can be have vexed his own mether?

Dold 32.

Have done, my beloved, with this, be it raillery or displeasure; make a just and reasonable request, that I may rejoice in the sight of Bharat's installation.

Chaurai.

Rather might a fi-h live out of the water, or a wretched separe live without its head-jewel—I tall you my true cases without any deception—but there is no life for me without Rama. Coastider well, my dear, my prodent wife, my rety existence depends upon my seeing Risma. On hearing this soft sperch the wicked woman blazed up like the which has falled an oblation of phi: "You may devise and curry out any number of plans, but your subtergiall not avail with me. Either grant my request, or refuse me and be disgraced; I do not want any long discussion. Bama it good, you too are good and wise, and Rama's mother, as you have discovered, is also good. The benefit that Kacasly's devised for me is the only freit that I ow to turn give her.

*YOURY!

Dold 33.

At daybreak, if Ráma does not assume the hermit's dress and go out into the woods, my death will ensue, O king, and your disgrace; be well assured of this."

Chaupái.

So saving, the wretch rose and stood erect, as it were a swollen flood of wrath that had risen in the mountains of sin, turgid with streams of passion, terrible to behold, with the two boons for its binks, her stern obdurscy for its current, and her voluble speech for its eddies, overthrowing the king like some tree torn up by the roots, as it rushed on to the ocean of calamity. The king perceived that it was all true, and that death, in fashion as a woman, was dancing in triumph on his head. Humbly he clasped her by the feet and begged her to be seated, crying : " Be not an axe at the root of the Solar race. Demand of me my head and I will give it at once, but do not kill me by the loss of Rams, be it in any way you will, or your heart will be ill at ease all your life long.

Dohá 34.

Seeing that his disease was incurable, the king fell upon the ground and best his head, subbing out in most tomentuble tones, "Ráma, Ráma."

Chaurdi.

The king's whole body was so broken down by distress that he seemed like the tree of paradise that some elephant had uprooted. His throat was dry, speech failed his lips like some poor fish deprived of water. Again Kaikevi plied him with biting taunts, infusing as it were poison into his wounds: " If you meant to act thus in the end, what com pullion was there to say, ask, ask? Is it possible, sire, to he two things at once? To laugh and jest and at the sam time mourn; to be called the munificent, and yet be miserly to live without soxiety, and yet be a king? Either breat your world or show more fortitude, do not, like a woman appeal to compassion. It is said that life, wife, sons, home wealth, pay the whole world, all are but as a straw compared to the ocean of truth."

Doha 35

On hearing these fatal words the king exclaimed: "I is no fault of yours; my evil destiny, like some demoniacy delusion, has possessed you and bids you speak.

Chaufái.

Bherat has never desimed of desiring the royal digiboth by the decree of Iste evil consel has locked in y breast. All this is the result of my size I can do nothin God is against me. Herestler beautiful Aradh shall flom again under the sway of the all-perfect Hama; all his breen shall do him service and his glory shall spread throat the three spheres of creation; your dispace also and a removes, though we die, shall never be effaced or forgott Now do whatever seemeth you good; only stay out of a sight and let your face be veiled; with classed hands I a but this, speak not to me sgain so long as I live. You will repent at the last, O miserable woman, who siming attitiger have thos shot dead the cow."

Dold 36.

The king fell to the ground crying again and again "Why have you wrought this ruin?" But the perfidion queen spoke not a word, like a funeral pile that is eve burning.

Chauz di.

The king in his distress sobbing out "Rams, Rams," was like some lockless bird clipped of its wings. In his heart he was praying: "May the day neere break nor any one go and tell Rams. Rise not great patriarch of the Solar race, for at the sight of Avably your breast will be consumed with anguish." The king's affection and Kaikeri's creality were both the most extreme that God could make. While the monarch was yet lamenting, day broke and the music created his titles, minstrels sung his parise; but like arrows they wounded the king, as he heard them. All tokens of the projecting pleased him as little as the adornment of a widow who ascends the funeral pile. That night no one had slept, from the joyons anticipation of beholding Rams.

Doh4 37.

At the gate was a crowd of servants and ministers, who exclaimed as they beheld the risen sun: "What can be the reason why to-day of all days our lord awaketh not?

Chaupsi.

He was always wont to wake at the last watch; to day it strikes us as very strange. Go Sumanta, and rouse him and obtain the royal order to commence the work." Sunsanta entered the pulsoe, but as he passed on was struck with wave and dismay at its paperance, as though some terrible monster were about to spring upon him and devour him; it seemed the very home of calamity and distress Asking, but with no one to answer him, he came to the spartment where were the king and Knikey; with the saloution "Live for ever" he howed the head and sat down. On beholding the king's condition he was much distressed, for he was fallen on the ground crashed and colourless, like a lotus becken off from its root. The terrified minister could ask no question; but she, tull of evil and void of all good, answeret and said:

Doha 38.

"The king has not slept all night: God knows why. He has done nothing but mutter "Râma, Râma," even till day break; but he has not told me the reason.

Chaupái.

Go at once and send Ráma here, and when you come back you can ask what the matter is. Pacroving it to be the king's wish, Sumanta went; but he saw that the goeen had formed once will design So anxious was he that his lest asrockly touched the ground as he woodered to himself; "What will the king have to any to Ráma ?" Composing himself as he reached the gate, when all observed his andness and asked the cause, he reastered them and proceeded to the prince's abode. When Ráma saw Sumanta coming, he received him with the same honour that he would have shown to his own father. Looking him in the face, he declared the king's commands and returned with him. Remarking the state of disorder in which Ráma accompanied the mointeirs, the people began to be a little anxious.

Dohe 39.

When the jewel of Raphu's race had come and bebeld the king's misrable condition, like some aged and painstricken elephant in the power of a tigrest, his lips became purched and his body all dame, like a poor snake that has been robbed of the jewel in its bead. Seeing the farious Kaikeri near, like death consting the minutes, the pitful and amiable Raphunāh, though he now for the first time saw sorrow, and had near before heard its name even, composed himself as the occasion required and in pleasunt tones. aske this mather. "Tell me mather, the cause of my father's distance, that I may and earner to pai an end to fit." "Listen, Hime a the solic cause is this; the king severy fund of your he has premised to great me two requests, and I have saked for what I washed; but he is disturbed on hearing them and count of washed a seruple on your second.

Inta 40.

On the one side is his lave for his son; in the other his promise, he is thus in a strait. If it lies in your power be needed to his commands and so terminate his misery."

Changel.

She est and sprike stinging words so composelly the Cruelty Itself was disturbed to here her. From the low of her tongue the shot forth the arrows of her speech against the king as it were some yielding target; as though Obderacy had taken form and become a bild and practised archer. Sitting like the very incurration of heartlessness, abe arrounded to Highspust the whole history. Riam, the was of the Nolar rare, the founts in of every joy, milled inwardly and replied in guilferlet term, so not it and gracious that we seemed the very jewels of the golders of speech: "Hereken mother; blesseld is the sow hos obeys his parent's commands; a son who cherishes his father and mother is not often found in the world

Dold 41.

I have a particular wish to join the hermits in the woods and now there is also my father's order and your approval, mother.

Chaupdi.

Bharat, moreover, whom I love as myself, will obtain the kingdom; in every way God favours me to-day. If I go not to the woods under these circumstances, then reckon me first in any assembly of fools. They who desert here of paradise to tend a castor-oil plant, or refuse and brosis to ask for poison, having once lost their choose, will never get it gagin; see, mother, and ponder this in your heart. One special anxiety still remains, when I see the king so exceedingly disturbed. I cannot understand, mother, how my father can be so much pained by such a striffing matter. He is stout-hearted and a fathomless ocean of piety; there must have been some great offence on my part, that he will not say a word to me: I adjure you to tell me the truth."

Dahá 42.

Though Haghnbar's words were as attaightforward as possible, the wicked queen gave them a perverse twist 2; like a leedt, which must always move crookedly, however smooth the states be

Chaundi.

Seeing Iliama's readiness, the queen smiled and said with meants how of fabes affection: "I swear by yourself and Bharat, there is no other cause that I know of. There is no other cause that I know of. There is no come for fault is nor, my son, who confect such lappiness both on your parents and your brother. All that you say, Ikima, it rue iyoo are devoted to the wishes of your fathers and mother. Remonstrate, then, solemnly with your size, that he incorr not sin and disgrace in his old age. Having been bleat with a son like you, he cannot properly disregard your advise." These fair words in her false mouth were like Gays and the other holy places that are in Magadha: but Rimas took his mother's speech in good part, like the Ganges, which in its course receives and hallows any stream.

Dold 43.

At the remembrance of Rama, the king's swoon left him and he turned on his side. Taking advantage of the opportunity, the minister humbly informed him of Rama's arrival.

Chaupdì,

When the king heard that Râms had come, be summoned nounces and opened his eyes. The minister supported his sovereiga to a seat, where the king saw Râma falling at his feet. In an agony of affection, be clasped him to his bosom, like some scake that has recovered the jewel it had lost. As the monarch continued gazing upon Râma, a food

I Being so atout of heart, why should be be thus dismayed at the mere thought of Joring me I. And being so poors, bow is it possible that he can hearists for a moment should keeping his word! There must be something else in the background. I fear I have done wrong and displeased bin.

² The queen thought to herself. By his praises of a hermit's life be hopes I may be persuaded to send Bharat to the woods tusteed of himself or by his ready compliance, he hopes to wheedle me out of my resolve.

of tears came into his eyes, nor in his sore distress cume into his eyes, nor in his sore distress c better a word, but again and again he pressed him heart. Inwardly he was praying God that Rag might not be banished to the woods; and remen Mahádeva humbly begged: "Immortal Siva, he petition: thou art easily satisfied, compassionat generous; recognise then in me a poor sampliant a move my distress."

Dolid 54.

As thou directest the hearts of all, give Rama the to disregard my words and stay at home, forgetful fo of his filial affection.

Chaupti.

Welcome disgrace and perish my good ame; sink into Hell crither than mount to Heaven; he it mi support the mo-t intolerable pain rather than have, taken from my sight." Thinking thus to himself, the spoke not a word, while his sool quivered likes pipel Perceiving his father to be thus overpowered with Raghupati spoke again with a view to his mother modest and thoughtful phrase, as the place, the time the circumstances demanded: "Father, if I speak a wilfully, forgive the offence by reason of my childish y You are troubled about a very little matter; why did not speak and let me know of this at the first? I seeing you, sire, I questioned my mother, and on her her explanation my fear subsided.

Dold 45.

Put away, father, the anxiety which at this time rejoicing your affection has caused you, and give me j commands:" so spoke the Lord with heartfelt joy and body quivering with emotion.

Chaurdi.

"Blessed is his birth into the world whose fathe rejoiced to hear of his doings. He has in his fand all four rewards of life, who holds his parents dear as his of life. By obeying your orders, I attain the end of existence. If then it be your command, I can soon exchanged after taking leave of my mother, I will throw n back, and after taking leave of my mother, I will throw n self once more at your feet and then start for the wood llasing thus ropken, Ikima departed, while the king is!

anguish asswered not a word. The bitter news sprrad through the city, like the sting of a scorpion that at once affects the whole body. Every man or woman that beard it was as distrest as the oreepers and bushes when a forest is on fire. Wherever it was told, every one beat his bead, and the crief was too great to be endered.

Dald 46

Their lips were perched, their eyes streamed, their heart could not contain their sorrow: it seemed as though the Pathetio, in battle array and with beat of drum, had marched into Awadh and taken up quarters there.

Chaupdi.
"It was a well-contrived plan, but God has spoilt it."

"It was a well-construct plan, but God has apoint to the state of the

Doha 47.

What is there that fire will not burn; what is there that ocean cannot contain; what cannot a woman do in her strength; or what is there in the world that death does not decour?

Chanpai.

God first ordained one thing, but now ordains something quite, different, and what he would show us now in the very reverse of what he showed us then." Said one: "The king has not done well, and without consideration has granted the wicked woman her respects. He has wilfully brought all this minery upon himself, and in yielding to a woman has lost all good sense and discretion." Another wisely recognized the king's supreme virtue and would not blame him, as they repeated to one another tie. 229 legen is of Rivi, Dathichi, and Harischin isa. One angg of Brast's connistance, another was distressed at the m time death a thing; while a third shopping his ever w his hands and liting his longue acclaimed; "Such wa are laive; you darm yourself by asying such things. But it Rains's deatest friend.

Dott 15.

Somer shall the moon rain sparks of fire, or ambrolians the same effect as possen, than Bharat ever dream doing anything to injure Hima."

One represelved the Creator, who had promised ambris but given poison. The whole city was agitated a servey one as sed that the intolerable pain in their has affectly effect all the previous represent. The reneralis and highborn likehman mattern, who were Knikeyis on highborn likehman mattern, who were Knikeyis of literals, began to give her advice and praise her good disposition; but their words pieces her like arrows; to have always said, as every one knows, that Bharat wa not so dear to you as Hám: show him, then, your wonder affection; for what offence do you now braich him to the woods? You have never shown any jealoncy of the rival queens; your loves and confidence in them were known throughout the land. What has Kausalya done wrong now that you should launch this thanderbolt against the city?

Dold 49.

What I will Sita desert her spouse, or Lakshman remain her at home? Will Bharat eajoy the dominion of the state, or the king survive without Rams.

Chaupái.

Reflect upon this and expel passion from your breast, nor make yourself a stronghold of remorse and disgrace.

I For the lexicules of Sira and Dantituti see noise to past 19.

HarricularDuka, the non of Triestals, was king of Ayukhya and the twenty-eight in descent from likshaku, the founder of the shart dynawy, in order to satisfy the claims of Vissanility who sated to make trial of his fatigatity, he sold his kingdom and all that he had, towether mind with Satyawati and his only son, and the sold, towether mind to start the sate of the sate

АУОРНУА 229

By all means make Bharat the king's coadjutor: but what need is there for Riama to be bossibled to the woods? Riama is not greedy of royal power; be is righteous and averest to seasonal pleasures. Lethim leave the palace and go and live within graru; ask this of the king as your eccond pelition. A son like Riama does not deserve banishment; what will people say to you when they bear of it? If you do not agree to what I tell you, nothing will prosper in your hands. If this is only some jest of yours, speak out clearly and let me know. Up quickly and devise a plan to avert future remore and disprase.

Chhand 2

Device a plan to avert remores and disgrace and size pour family. Benestant in diverting Risma from going to the woods, and laboar for nothing eler. As the day without the sun, as the body without life, as the night without the moon, so (*9x Tulis Dis) is Avadh without its lord; I bey you, lady, to consider this."

Sorath4 2

Pleasant to hear and beneficial in result was the advice her friends gave; but she paid no heed to it, having been tutored in villainy by Humpback.

Chaupái.

She answered not a word, but rarged with irrepressible fary like a hongry signess that has spied a deer Perceiving her diesaw to be incurable, they left her, saying as they went: "Demented wretch I Nei has destroyed her in her pride; she has acted in such a way as no one has ever acted before." Thos all the men and women of the city were lamenting and heaping countiess above on the wicked queen Bartoning with intolerable fever they sho nut: "What hope of life is there without Ráma?" Agonized by his low, the people were as mierable as creatures of all, whether mus or woman: but the saintly Ráma went to his mother, with joy in his face and fourfold joy in his sool, I caring only that the king might detain his that the king might detain his

Dold 50

The Glory of Raghn's line resembled some young elephant with kingship for its chain: the news of basishment was as its breaking; at which he rejoices exceedingly.

Chaupái.

With folded hands the Crown of Regular line both his head blithely at his mother's feet. She gare him blessing and clasped him to her bosom, and seatte around him gilts of jewels and raiment. Again and ag sick kisser his face, with tears of joy in her eyes and body all quivering with emotion. She seating him her lip, sie pressed him once more to her heart, wh drops of affection trickled from her comely breats. If anyther of love was past all telling, like that of a begg made all at once rich as Kover. Tenderly regarding to lovely features, his mother thus addressed him in sweete tones; "Tell me, my son, I adjure you as your mothe when is the happy moment to be; you are such as exquisity paragon of prety, amability and good fortune, that in yo Arush has respect the full fruition of its existence.

Doha 51.

For whom the people long as anxiously as a pair of thirsting chdtaks, in the season of autumn, for the rainfal of Arcturus.

Chaupdi.

Go at once, my darling, I beg of you, and bathe and take something nice to eat, such as you like, and then, dear boy approach your fathers. I your mother, protest there has been too much delay." On hearing his mother's most tree of affection laden with the fragrance of delight and produced from the stem of prosperity, Riam's beelike soul was not distracted by the sight, but in his righteouners he distinguished the path of virtue, and thus in honeyed tones addressed his mother: "My father has assigned me the woods for my realm, where I shall have much in every way to do. Give me your orders, mother, with a cheetfal heart, that I too may cheeffally and in anyticious wise entout for the forest. Do not in your affection give way to causeless alarm; my happiness, mother, depends on your consent.

Dolld 52.

After staying fourteen years in the woods, in obedience to my sire's commands. I will come back and again behold your feet; make not your mind uneasy."

¹ Or, and thus making good my father's vow.

Chaupái.

Raphbar's sweet and daifful words pierced like arrows through his mether's beart. At the sound of his chilling, speech also withered and drooped like the jourded at a shower; the train. The anguish of her soul was past telling, at when an elephant shrinks at the roar of a telling, at when an elephant shrinks at the roar of a telling. Her per filled with tears and her body trembled all over, like a fish overtaken by the scour of a flooded siver. Samming up courage, the looked ber son in the face and thus spoke, in faltering accounts: "My son, you are your father's darling and it is a constant delight to him to watch your doings. He had fixed an anspecious day for giving you the secure; low hard flores dear he now bushsh you to the woods? Tell me my boy, the upshot of it all; who as the destroying fire of the Sene-gar's line?"

Dobá 53

After a look at liama's face the minister's son explained to her the reason. On hearing his account she was struck damb; words fail to describe her condition.

Chaupái.

She could neither detain him, nor yet say to; either way her heart was dutraspik with creel pain as shough for 'moon' one had written 'cellipse': God's hand is ever against as all. Daty and affection both laid siege to her soul; her dilemma was like that of a make with a musk-rati. "If I keep my soo, it will be a sin; my past virtue will; go for nothing and any friends will abhor me. If I order him into exile, it will be a sad loss." In this distressing strait the queen was are tried. Again reflecting discretly on her wifely duty and remembering that thim and Bharat wave both equally her soox, the queen in the sweetness of her ¹ A popular Hindi couplet says that every creature in the world rejoices at the coming of the rains, except four ri., the examing jumples applied, which flourish only on dry soil, and the saltpeire menufacturer and the carter, who cannot by their trade.

Ak jawasa agara, chauthe gariwan Jyon jyon chamake bijli, tyon tyon taje pran

³ the bine, as I translate it, stude then. May h Manches man Andre type. At 10 the mercure of the word mergy me the lost on queek the top commentation explain it as a sickness that permit the begroning of the time, or, as the scom manch on the water when the rate first break or, as the scom manch on the water when the rate first break or, as the pictor of a plane. Another reading is Manya-As Ada majourn subjet, where may now only be for mail; d'orals."

³ If it swallows the rat, it dies, if it disgorges it, it goes blind; such is the popular belief.

٠.,,,, disposition summoned up courage and, spoke these woeful. words: "May I die, my son, but you have done well; a father's command is the most paramount duty.

Doha 54.

Though he promised you the kingdom; and now banishes you to the woods I am not the least sad or sorry: but, without you, Bharat and the king and the people will all be put to terrible distress.

Chaupai.

Yet, boy, if it is only your father's order, then go not inold your mether still greater. If both father and mother hid you go, the forest will be a hundred times better than Avadh, with its god for your father, its goddess for your mother and birds and deer to wait upon your lotts feet. At the end of life retirement to the woods is the proper thing for a king, but I am troubled at heart when I consider your tender age. How blest the forest and how wretched Avadh, I say 'take me with you,' there may be some heitstinin in your mind; O my son, all hold you most dear, life of our life; if you shands of O my son, all hold you most dear, life of our life; if you say 'mother, I go alone to the woods' on hearing your words I sink down in deepair.

Dold 55.

Being thus minded? I do not press my sait with a show of love beyond what I really feel; agree to your mother's request; or if you go alone, at least I pray you not to forget me.

Chaupdi.

May all the gods and the spirits of your sucestors guard noble boy, as closely as the eyelids guard the eyes. The term of banishment is like the water of a lake in which the fish are friends and relations; you are all-uncrivil and righteous; remember then to make your plans so that you may find them all alive when you come again. We in perce to the woods—ah! wo is the II—leaving your servasts, nor relatives, the whole city in berevrement; to-day the conformation of all their past good deeds has gone, and a wful death confronts them. Thus with many mouraful meanings the cling to his feet, accounting: herself the most hopeless of jent here mel'd the words that I travelate, some copies trad flo women. Crael and intolerable pangs pierced her heart through and through, and the burden of her misery was past all telling. Rama raised his mother and took her to his boson and consoled her with many soothing words.

Doha 56.

At that moment Sitz, who had heard the news, rose in great agitation, and having reverenced her mother's lotus feet, howed her head and sat down.

Chaupai.

In tender accounts her mother gave her blessing, and at the night of her delicute frame was more distressed than ever. With drosping eye Sita, the perfection of hearity, model of wilely devotion, as tand thought: "The lord of my life would go to the woods, how can I merit to accompany him? Whether in the hody or only in the sond, go I must; hat God's deings are inscrutable." With her lowely to-calls she wroke spon the ground, while the music of her anklets, like the post's honeyed song, rang out the passionate prayer: 'Never may we be tent from Sita's feet.' Seeing her let fall a flood of tears from her lovely eyes, Rimá's mother cried: "Hearken, my son; Sita's a very delecate; she's the darling of your father and mother and all your kindre."

Dold 57.

Her own father is Janak, jewel of kings; her father-inlaw is the Phushus of the solar race; her lord, the perfection of besuty and virtue, is as it were the moon of the Rly-like progeny of the sun-god;

Chaupdi.

I again have found in her a dear daughter, amiable, beautiful and accomplished. She is like the apple of my eye and my affection has so grown that it is only in Jánaki that I have my being! I have tended her as carefully as the tree of paradies and watered her growth with streams of affection. When she should have blossomed and horse fault, God has tured against me, and there is no knowing what will be the end. Or ever the left her bed or seat,

I in the original is a play upon words which it is impossible to preserve in a translation; jim print, the ordinary expression for the 'breath of life,' being presented to the eye by the conjunction of prin with the first syllable of Sita's name Janah.

I cradied her in my lep, and never his Site set her foot on the hard ground. I cheritived her as the very source of my life, and never lead her so much averant to trim the wick of a lamp. And this is the Site who would follow you to the woods: what are your orders. O lightmath? Can the partiting, that drinks in with delight the rays of the moon, endure to fix it gave on the orth of the san?

Doba 58.

Elephants, lions, goblins, and many fierce soimals roam the wood: ab, my son, is the charming tree of life fit, to set in such a deally pasture?

Chaupdi.

Gol has oceased for the forcest Kol and Kirát women, who care not for boilty delights. Of nature as hard as the stone innect, the woods are no trial to them. A hermit's wife again is fit for the woods, who for the sake of penance has renounced all pleasures. But how, my non, can Sita live in the woods, who would be frightened by even the pleature of a monkey? Can the eygner that has asported in the lovely lotts-heads of the Ganges find fit abode in a moddy puddle? First ponder this, and then, as you order I will instruct Jánaki. If she remain at home and call need the woods of the complex of the will. Washabir on hearing his mother's speech, which was dreached as it were with the ambroais of groce and affection.

Italia 59.

Replied in tender and discreet terms for his mother's consolation, and began to set clearly before Jánaki all the pleasures and troubles of forest life,

Chaupdi.

Speaking diffidently as in the presence of his mother, considering well within himself the requirements of the time: "Hearken, lady, to my instructions; nor from any different fancies in your mind. If you desire your own good and mine, agree to what I say and remain at home. My order is this: the service of a mother-in-law is in every way, madam, a blessing to a family. There is no ather dety so paramount as reverential submission to a bushand's parents. Whenever my mother recalls me to mind and is distracted by affectionate solicitude, do you, my love, console her with old-world tales and tender speeches.

I speak from my heart and confirm it with a hundred Oaths: it is for my mother's sake, beloved, I leave you here.

Dola 60.

The reward of virtue can be obtained without trouble by abminision to Scripture and one's spiritual director; through their obstinacy Galavai and king Nabusha² were subjected to all sorts of trouble.

Chaupái.

I shall soon told my father's words and come back again; hearken, fair and sensible dame. The days will again; hearken, fair and sensible dame. The days will apply the property of the proper

Dold GI.

The ground will be your couch, the bark of trees your raiment, and your food bulbs, wild fruits and roots; nor,

3. Ye hake good belo, for erre dreds that ye coule not sessin. The thorney mayes, the deep valleys, the show, the free, the rain, I the tall, And is a shore, area of the rain, And is a shore, area ofter roof, erre to be shown or consider the first of the rain of the rai

The Net Invest Ma 3

I Olikes was a popil of Civennium. When he had completed his studies, the stade his tour what for be ought to pur fire second there was no fee. However, he will persected us studie, will ad he Varantura between the complete the studies of the complete the studies of the complete the studies of the complete the studies will be studied by the complete the think that even they will be always forthcoming every day, but only when they are in season.

² For the legent of king Nabosha.

Chaurdi.

There are man-sating demons who assume all sorts of deceptive forms; the rainfall on the hills is excessive, and in short the hardship of the forest are past all eliging. There are terrible responts and force wild birds and agang of goblins that starl both man and woman. The bravest shudders at the thought of the dense forest; while you, my fawn-ryed wife, are timid by nature. Ah I delivation, you are not fit for the woods; people will resile m on bearing of such a thing. Can the swan that has been nutrured in the ambrevial food of the Mans lake exist it the salt see? Can the last, that rows with delight through the luxurinat mango grows, take pleasure in a jungle of Larst, bushes? Ponder this, my fair bride, and stay at home; the hardships of the forest are too great.

Dol.4 62.

Whoever with a view to her own good does not at once accept the advice given by a friend, or a guru, or her bushand shall assuredly have a surfeit of repentance and gain no good."

Chaupdi.

On hearing the tender and winning words of her habband, Sita's lotus eyes filled with tears, and his soothing advice caused her as burning pain as the aniumn moon causes the chalket. In her distress no answer came to her lips: 'So great is his love that he would leave me behind.' Perforce restraining her tears and summing up courage. Earth's daughter embraced her mother's feet, and with folded hands thus spake: 'Pardon me, lady, my great presumption: my dear lord has thought me what is all for, my own good that I look to my feelings, and conclude that no sorrow in the world is so great as separation from one's belared.

Dohd 63.

O my dear lord, most compassionate, beautiful, bounteous and wise, the moon of the lilies of the Ragbu race, heaven without you would be very hell.

Chaupái.

Dear are father and mother, sisters and brothers ; dear are my companions and my many friends; but father-inlaw and mother-in-law, spiritual director, generous associstes, and even sons, however, beautiful, smiable and affectionate, may my lord, all love and every tie of kindred. to a woman without her husband, are a greater distress than the ann's most burning beat. Life, wealth, house, land, city and empire are but accumulated misery to a woman bereft of her lord. Ease is disease, her jewels a burden, and the world like the torments of hell. Without you, O lord of my soul, there is nothing in the whole world that could give me any comfort. As the body without a soul, as a river without water, so, my lord, is a woman without her husband. With you, my lord, are all delights, as long as I can behold your face that vies in brightness with the autumn moon.

Dold 64.

The birds and deer will be my attendants, the forest my city, and strips of bark my glistening robes; with my lord a hut of grass will be as the palace of the gods, and all will be well.

Chaupdi.

The sylvan nymphs and gods will of their grace protect me like my own lovid's parents; my simple liter of greas and twigs will with my ford become a somptones marriage-council; bulks, roots and fruits will form an ambrosial repart, and the mountains resemble the stately halfs of Aradil. Every moment I gaze on my level's lousifest, I shall be as gird as the chalari at the dawn. You have recounted, my lord, the numerous hardships of the forevil it terrors, anneyances and many discomforts; but O fountain of mercy, all these united will not be comparable to the pain of bereavement. Consider this, O jewel of wisdom, and take me with you, alandom me not. Why make long supplication? my lord is full of compassion and knoweth to heart.

Dal. 63.

Do you think, if you keep me at Avadh, that I can survive till the end of your exile? O most beautiful, help of the helpless, fountain of grace and of love.

Chaupdi.

As I go along the road I shall never weary, every moment beholding your lotus feet. In every way I shall minister to my beloved, and relieve him of all the toll of the march. Seated in the shade of some tree. I shall lar your feet and repturously fan you, and gazing on your body stained with sweat and blackened by the sun, what thought, my dearest lord, shall I have for my own hard times? Spreading grass and leaves on the level ground, your slave will all night shampon your feet, and ever gazing on your gracious form, nor heat nor wind will ever eve me. Who will look at me when I am with my lord, except as hare or jackal furtively regards a lioness? Am I to be dainty and delicate, while my lord roams the woods? It penance to be your portion and enjoyment mine?

Doha 66

My heart will burst at the mere sound of so cruel a sentence, and never will my miserable existence survive the auguish and torture of bereavement."

Chaupdi.

So saying, Sita was overwhelmed with distress, not coold endure the word 'separation.' On seeing her condition, Ráma made sure, 'If I finist upon leaving her, I leave her dead.' Then said the compasionate lord of the Solar race: "Have done with lamentation and come with me to the woods. There is no time now for weeping; at occe make your preparations for the journey." Having consoled his beloved with these tender words, he embraced his mother; feet and received her blessing: "Raturn quickly and relieve your subject's distress, nor forget me your hard-hearted mother.' Who knows but God may change my lot, and my eyes may see you both again. Ah I my soo, when will arrive the happy day and moment that I shall live to see your moon-like spec once more?

Dola 67.

When again shall I call you'my child, 'my darling,' noblest and best of Hagha's line,' 'my own son,' and fondly bid you come to my arms that I may gare upon you' features?"

[?] That is to say, I must be har! hearted, for, if nor, I shoul! de at once

Chaurái

Sacing that his mother was so agitated by affection that also could not speak and say alterly overwhelmed with distress. Hinn did everything to console her, and the pathos of this occas was beyond description. Then Joinste embraced her mother's fact; "Haarken, mother, I am of all women most miscrable. At the time when I should have been doing you service, fast has busished me to the woods and has denied me my desire. Case to sorrew, but cross not to tow me; Fate is crosel, I am blumeless." On hearing Site's words the macher was so afflucted that her state was past all telling. Again and agon she took her to her breast sammoning up courage thus blest and admonshed her; "May your prosperity be as enduring as the streams of Gangá and

Daká 68.

When her mother had repeatedly blessed and admonshed Sita, she took her leave, after sgain and again affectionately bowing her head at her lotus feet.

(haupái.

When Lekshman heard the news, he started up in dismay with a delofet face, his body all of a tremble and his eyes fall of tears, and ran and clasped his feet in an agony of affection. He could not speak, but stood and starred aghast, like come poor fish drawn out of the water, thinking within himselt: "Good God, what will happen? All my happiness and past good deeds are gone for ever. What will Raghundith tell met ab of? Will be keep me here, or take use with him?" "When Rima saw his brother with folded hands renouncing life and home and all, he address him thus—the slivinghteun Kiman, fountain of grave, love, and parfect hims: "Brother, do not afflict yourself with love, but reflect that all will be well in the early 110há 69.

They who submit without reserve to the commands of their father and mother, their spiritual director or their lord, or born into the world to some purpose: otherwise their birth is in valu.

Chavs di.

Consider this, brother, and hearken to my advice, wait upon the feet of your father and mother. Neither Bharat is at home, nor Hipu-sidan; the king is old and sorrowin, for me. If I go to the woods and take you with me, Aradi be completely masterless, and an intolerable weight of afficition will fail upon priest and parents, subjects, family and all. Stay then to comfort them; if not, brother, it will be a great sin. The king, whose faithful subjects endure distress, so of a truth a prince of hell. This is sound doctries, brother; ponder it and stay." Lakshman was grieved, brother; ponder it and stay." Lakshman was grieved, distrest on hearing this, and his body become as dead and shrivelled as a lotus that has been touched by the frost.

1)054 70

Overmastered by love, he could not answer, but clus in anguish to his feet: "O my lord, I am your slave as you my master: leave me, then what can I do?

Chaupdi.

Yon have given me, good sir, excellent advice; but i my confusion I find it impracticable. Valiant leaders o men and champions of the faith can master such abstras doctrine, but I am a mere child, nurtured by your affection can a cygaret uplift Mount Mandar or Meru? I know a garu, nor father, nor mother? believe me, my lord, I speak from my hast; all the love in the world, all claims of kin, all affection, sympathy, wisdom and skill are for me centred in you, my lord, the protector of the humble, the reader of the beart. Expound questions of theology to one who sims at fame and glory and high catate; I am in heart, word and deed devoted only to your feet; and am I, gracious lord, to he descarded?

Dohd 71.

The compassionate lord, on hearing the tender and modest words of his good brother, took him to his bosom, and seeing him so affectionately dejected thus consoled him:

Chaupái.

"Go. brother, and take leaved your mother, and the come and set out for the woods." On hearing Rightest thus speak, he was overjoyed; his triumph was great, his sorrow all gone. He approached his mother as glad of heart as a blind man who has recovered this sight, and while he bowed his head at her feet, his heart was away with Raghmandan and Jánaki. Seeing his agistation his mother loquired the cause, and Lakahman told her the whole history. On hearing his cruel apends she trembled like a faun that sees the forcet on fire all around it. Lakahman reflected: "Everything goes wrong to-day a her very lors will work me harm." Timbly and heristingly he acked her permission to go, (hinking "Good Cod, will she let me go or not?"

Doha 72.

After reflecting on the beauty and amiable disposition of Risms and Sits and considering the king's affection, Somitra best ber head and exclaimed: "That wicked woman is at the bottom of this bad business."

Chaupdi.

But perceiving the time to be autoward, she took patiences of in her kindess of heart answered gently: "Your mother, child, is Yaidshi, and Rams w your most loving father; where Rims dwells, there is Avadh; and wherever is the light of the son, there is day. If Riams and Site 30 to the woods, you have no business at Avadh. A your, a father and mother, besthere, the good and our master are all to be tended as our own life; but Riams is desarer than file, is the soul of our sond, and the distinctered Triend of all; our dearest and most homoured friends are to be accounted those of Rims's household. Thinking the 10 yourself; go with them to the woods, and receive my son, the Iruition of your existence.

Dohá 73.

You have become the receptacle of the highest good fortune, and I too—ah, woe is me!—if from an unfeigned heart you have made Ráma's feet your home.

Chaupái.

A mother indeed is also who has a son devoted to Raphabar; if and, it is better to be barren, she bar given birth in vain; a son who is (Kāma's cosmy as a curse. It is your good fortune that Kāma goes to the woods; and other reason is there none; this my son, is the highest reward for all good deed, to have a inonere affection for the feet of Kāma und Sita. Never give way were in thought to last, or passion, or earry, or pride, or delession, bett pate wide all changeableness and serve them in beart, word and deed For you the powers is a place of joy, since Rāma and Sita your Esther and mother, will be there with you. Take heed, my son that Rama be put to no trouble; this is my admonition.

Chhand 3.

This is my admonition, my son; see that Rams and Sit live at case and in the woods forget to remember their father and mother, their friends and relations and all the pleasures of the city." Having given her son such instruction and comman's (say Tulsi) she again invoked upon him her blessing: "May your love for Sits and Ragbabir be constant and unsullied and very reswerd!"

Sorathá 3.

Having bowed his head at his mother's feet, he left i haste with trepidation of heart, as flies a hapless deer the has burst a perilous space.

Chaufái.

He went to Jánaki's lord, and his soul rejoiced to rever his dear society. After reverencing Ráms and Sitá' gracious feel, he proceeded with them to the king's palce. The citizens say to one another: "How goodly a plan Go made and now has marred!" With wasted frame, sat soul and doleful face, they were in as great distress as been robbed of their hone; winging their hands, besting their heads and lameeting, like wretched birds that have been clipt of their wings. There was a great crowd in the royal hall: grief immeasurable, beyond all telling. The minister raised the king and seated him, as Ráms advanced will loving address. When he saw Sita and his two sons, the king's agtitation was profound.

Dohá 74.

Again and again turning his troubled gaze on Sits and his two fair sons, he clasped them to his bosom time after time in an agony of love.

Chaupdi.

In his agitation he could not speak; grief overmatered hand wild anguish of beart. After most affectionately bowing his bead at his feet, Raghunáh arose end begged permission to depart: "Father, give me your blessing and commands; why so dismayed at this time of rejoicing? From excessive attachment, sire, to say beloved object, honour is bott and disgrace incurred." At this the back king arose and taking Raghupati by the arm made him six down: "Hearken, my son; the sages say that Risms is the lord of all creation, animates or insaminates; that God, after weighing good and bad scitons and mentally considering them, apportions their reward, and the doer reases the fruit of his own doings: this is the doctrine of the Scriptures and the worldet of maskind.

Dohe 75.

But for one to sin and another to reap its reward—the ways of God are most mysterious; who is there in the world who can comprehend them?

Chaupdi. The king in his anxiety to detain Rama tried every boest expedient, but when he saw that he was bent on going—righteons, brave and wire as he was -be took and presend Sits to his become and gave her much most affectionate advice, telling her of all the intoterable hardships of the forest, and cansolating her of the happinness she might enjoy with her parents-in-law or at her father's house. But Sita's heart was set on Risam's feet, and entitle house seemed to her attractive nor the words repulsive. Every one else too warned her with stories of all the many miseries of the desert. The minister's wife and the garn's—preduced tenses—affectionately urged her in gentle tones: "He has not sent you into exile. You should do as you are told by vour carents and vour current."

Doha 76.

This advice, friendly and kind and tender and judicious as it was, was not pleasing to Sita to bear; in the same way as the chalmi is distrest by the rays of the autumn moon

Chaupai.

She was, however, too modest to reply; but Kaikayi on hearing them started up in excitement and, bringing a bax of anchorite's dresses and coranments, placed it before her and said in whispered toner: Raghabir, you are descret than his to the king; he cannot rid himself of his too great kindness and love, and will sever tell you to go, though he forfait his victue, his honour and his hope of heaven. Think of this and act as seems to you good." Riams was glad to then this mother's auggestion, but her words pierced the king like across: 'Will my miserable life never leave me? In his distress he fainted outright, and no open I lab is distress he fainted outright, and no open I lab is distress he fainted outright, and no open.

knew what to do. But Rama quickly assumed the herm dress and bowing his head to his father and mother w forth.

Doha 77

Having completed his full equipment for the woods, it lord set forth with his wife and brother, after reverence the feet of the Brahmans and his guru, and leaving the all in bewilderment.

Chaupdi,

He came out and stood at Vasisha's gate; the beholds were consumed as with fire by the anguish of parting. Windly words Raghubir consoled them all and, ammonic the Brahmans begaed his gurst to give them a year's main tenance. Many gifts be bestowed with respectful courter; satisfying the mendicants with largesse and civillies, as his personal friends with demonstrations of affection. Nex he called up his mean-servants and maid-servants and methem over to his gurst, saying with clasped hands: "O sit be to them as their own father and mother, and cherial them all." Again and again did Râms with clasped hand and in gentle tones address each one of them: He is my best friend in whom the king finds confort.

Dold 78.

So not, all thoughtful and considerate citizens, that my mother he not distrest by my absence."

Chaupdi

When Rima had thus extented them all, he cheerfully Ganes, Gauri, and Mahadav, and receiving their blessing, sallied forth. As he went, there was great lamentation and a mountain waiting throughout the city, terrible to law. In Laoka amens of ill, in Avadh exceeding distress: while mingled joy and sorrow poseesed the host of haven. When his swoon had passed, the king awoke and sent for Samesta and thus began: "Rima has gone to the word and yet my life fifts not; what good does it hope to get by still remaining in my body?" What more grieves by still remaining in my body?" What more grieves by still remaining the my body?" What more grieves by still remaining the my body?" What more grieves by tures can there be, to force it from my frame? Again taking patience, he added: "friend, take you the charact and go;

Dohá 79.

The two boys are young and delicate, and Janak's daughter a delicate girl; take them up into the chariot and show them the forest, and come back in a day or two.

Chaupái.

Both brothers are brave, and Reghurái is the very ocean of trath and staunch to his word; if they will not tura, do you with clasped houds houtby softent him: "Send back, my lord, the daughter of Mithila's king." When Sits is alsumed by the sight of the forest, take the epoptronity of telling her my instructions, saying: 'This is the message sent by your father-in-law; and mother-in-law; come back, daughter; there are many perils in the desert. You can stay at your pleasure new with your own father, now with your hoshead's parents.' In this manner try every way you can; if she comes back, it will be the succour of my life; if not, it will end in my death; what can I do? God as against me. 'So saying, the king fainted and lell to the ground, crying; "O that you could bring them back to me, Rama, Lakshwan and Sita!"

Dold 80.

Having received the king's commands, he bowed his head and in haste made ready the chariot, and went to the place outside the city where were Sits and the two brothers.

Chaupái.

There Summits declared to them the king's message and respectfully made Riam ascend the chariot. When Sits and the two brothers had moneted and drove away, they mentally bewed the head to Arabi. As the bereaved city away Riams depart, all the people began confusedly to follow him. The gracious lord said everything to conside them, and they turned home-vards, but again came back overmastered by their affection. Arabi appeared to them as gloony and oppressive as the draw night of death; the citizens looked with it remains a constant of the citizens looked with it remains and the citizens looked with it remains and the constant of the citizens looked with it remains and neighbours as the angels of death. The trees and creepers in the gardens all withered; the streams and poods were fearful to behold.

Dohd 81.

All the horses, elephants and tame dest, the towncattle, the cuckoos and the peacocks, the koils, swans, parrots, mainas, herons, flamingoes and partridges.

Chaurdi.

All stood aghast at Rāma's departure, dumb and motionless as statues. The whole city resembled some dense forest in which the agistated people were as the birds and deer, while Kaikeyi had been fashioned by God as some will woman of the woods who had set all in a ferce blare. Unable to endure the burning pain of Rama's departure, the people all facked after him in their bewilderment, esch one thinking to himedl': "There is no happiness apart from Rāma, Lakshman and Sits. Everything can be his where Rāma is, and Avado without Raghabir is of to account." With this settled ides they hore bird company, abandoning halls of delight that the gods might eavy. For what influence can the pleasures of sense have upon mes who are devoted to Rāma's blust feet?

Dala 82

Young and old, all left their homes and followed him; and on the bank of the Tamasa Rama made his first day's balt.

Chaupdi.

When Raghupati saw his people overpowered with love, his did have twee greately troubled. The meterful lead Raghunath, being quickly touched by the grief of others, spoke to them many words of tenderness and affection and did his best to comfort them, admonishing them much of their religious daty. But in their foodness they could not test themselves away. As there was no means of wrecenting their innate affection, Raghurai was reduced to prefer its. Wors not with grief and toil the people full steep planting. Wors not with grief and toil the people full steep read with education beinging to begulie them—said when two watches of the night wave sport Rians effectionately all fressed his Minister: Father drives the christs one is effice the tracks of the wheels; there is no other way of saiting the touches?

Dol4 23

bowing the head to Sambhu's feet, and the minister drove is speedily hither and thither, confusing the tracks.

Chaupdi.

At day break the people all woke, and there was a great cry, that Ragbuhic had gone. They could no bow distinguish the tracks of the chariot, though they can in all directions, crying Riams, Riams, Rike as when a ship is staking at sea all the merchants are in terror. One aggested to another: Riams left us on seeing our distress. They revile themsalers and cury the fish 'crying: 'A curse on our life away from Raghubir: as god has robbed one of our Belowed, why has he not greated as our prayer to die?' With many such lamentations they returned to Avadh fall of haviness: the angoind of parting was beyond description, and it was only the hope of his return kept them allive.

Doha 84.

Men and women alike began to fast and make yows to secure his return, like the poor chaked and the lotus when bereft of the sun.

Chaupdi.

Sits with the Minister and the two brothers arrived on their way at the city of Sringavers. On behelding the river of the gods, Rúma slighted and with much joy made it his doesincen. The minister, Lakthman and Sits antheit is also, and Rúma was as glad as any of them for the Gangenis the source of all blists and beatingte, the author of all happiness, the destroyer of every mores. Many were the stories and legende that Rimm repeated as the gazed open its flood, instructing the Minister, his youngest brother, and his bride in the majesty and grandeur of the harvenly stream. They bathed and all the futigue of the march was removed; they draw he the high water and their soul was gladdened. It is only in valgar phrase that fatigue is ascribed to him by whose remembrance all the bordens of the world are lightneed.

Dold 85.

Risma, the champion of the Soler race, is the holy Goo

I That die at ouce when withdrawn from their natural element.

of supreme wisdom and bliss, the bridge over the ocean of existence, though he acts like an ordinary man.

Chaupdi

When Guba, the Ninhid, heard the news, he was gisd and called together his friends and relations, and taking a great quantity of fruits and regetables as a present, we at out to meet him with infinite joy of heart. With a produced by the property of the provided him and gazed upon the lord with the utmost devotion. Raghursi with his natural kindilores asked him of his health and seated him by his side. "The sight of your lots feet, sire, is health indeed; I am most highly favoured, as all will admit. My land, my house, my fortune are your, will admit. My land, my house, my fortune are your, my lord; I and mine are your poor varsals. Do me the favour of entering my abode; treat me as one of your secrenates and I shall be the envy of all men." "All that you say, my good friend, is very true; but my father has given me other commands.

Dohá 85.

For fourteen years I must dwell in the woods and adopt the rules, the dress, and the diet of a hermit; to stay in a village is forbidden." On hearing this, Guha was much grieved.

Chaupdi

Seeing Raina, Lukshman and Sita to be so besuiffol, the citizens affectionately protested: "What kind of parents can they be, friend, who have busished such children to the woods?" Said one: "The king has done well to give our eyes such at teat." Then the Night drie on reflection decided upon a besuifful sinapa stree, and took Raghunáth and showed him the place, who declared it to be most excellent. The citizens after paying him

I Superiori present. The transmignations is neverto-through which the woll has no jaw widt been liften, it further corn relative from the control seers, were in not that films has given binneft to be the larker, over the above, it seems there were nearly like. It seems to require the control of the contro their respects went home, and Rama proceeded to the performance of his evening devotions. Gaha made and spread for him a charming bed of grass and soft leaves, and brought him leaf-made bowls filled with all such fruits and vegetables as he knew to be sweet and wholesome and good.

[&]quot;The earthly lood Of death called life, which as from his doth sever " I The manage is either the apple, or the shuban tree.

Dohá 81.

After he had partaken of the fruits and herbs with the Minister and Sita and his brother, the jewel of Raghu's line lay down to sleep, while Lakshman shampooed his feet.

Chaurái.

When he knew his lord to be asleep, he arese and softly hand Scimunst take rest, while he hisraelf fitted an arrow to his how and took up the position of a markyman at a little distance, there to weath. The affectionate Ghas, having summoned trusty sentimels and stationed them recond shoat, west himself and sat down by Lakyhman, with his quiver at his back and an arrow fitted to his bow. When the Nished awa Rúna saleep, his soul was troubled with excess of love, his body thrilled with emotion, his eyes flowed with tears, and he thus it tender accents addressed Lakyhman: "The king's pulses is allogether beautiful, nor can the courts of heaven compared to it; its charming pavilions, inhaid with precious stones, seem to have been adorned by Low's com hands.

Dohá 88.

Rich and luxurious are its beds, sweet with edorous flowers and performes, with jewelled lumps and appliances of every description.

Chaupsii.

With all kinds of coverlets and pillows, and matresses as soft and whits as the frost ho milk, where Stin and Rima reposed at night and put to shame with their beauty both Ilati and Kanador, who now sleep on a pallet, weary and naked, pitful to behold. The Riam whom his father and mother, his own family and all the people of the city, his companions and associates, his mea-serrants and maid-servants, all betricked as tenderly as their own life, is now sleeping on the hare ground. Stin, whose father is Janak of world-wisk family when the therein have in Janak of world-wisk family whose father is Janak of world-wisk family when therein have in Dastrath, the friend of the King of heaven whose spoure is Riamchanders; is now sleeping on the ground, is not

250

162

YAUDHAY

God against us all? Are Sita and Rama fit dwellers of the desert? Well do men say, 'Fate is supreme.'

Dobd 89

The foolish daughter of Kekaya has wrought sad mischief by bringing this trouble on Rama and Janaki on their day of rejoicing.

Chaupdi.

She has become the axe at the root of the tree of the Solar race, and through her wickedness has plunged the whole world in woe. Seeing Rama and Sita seleep upon ground, the Nishad became sad exceedingly; but Lakth addressed him in aweet and gentle tones that were foll the essence of wisdom, sobriety and faith: "No man is cause of another's joy or sorrow; all is the frait of own actions, brother Union and separation, pleasure, g and eril, friendship, comity and neutrality are scarce delasion. Birth, death, all the entanglements of the wo prosperity and adversity, fortone and destiny, earth, how wealth, city and family, heaven, hell and all human affait all that you can see, or hear, or imagine in your mind, all delaying and unreal.

Doha 90.

In a dream a heggar becomes a king, and the lord heaven a punper; but on waking the one is no gainer, at the other a loser; this is the way in which you should regar the world.

Chaupdi.

Reasoning thus, he not ancry with any one, nor rainly attribute binne to any. All are sleepers in a night of decision and see many kinds of decame; in this world darkness they only are awake who detach themselves from the material, and are awake who detach themselves from the material, and are awake who detach themselves from the material and the Supreme; nor can any soul be regarded as around from slumber till it has remonned servy sensual enjoyment Then ensures spiritual enlighteement and swcape from the errors of delusion, and finally derotion to Hims. This friend, is many highest good, to be divested to Risas in thought, word and deed. Risms is first, the stating good, imperiable, intrible, uncreated, incomparable void of all change, indivibile, whom the Veit declarer that it ennote defore.

Dohá 91.

In his mercy he has taken the form of a man and performs human actions, out of the love he bears to his faithful people and to Earth and Bráhmans and cows and gods. On hearing them, the soares of the world broken asunder.

Chaupdi.

Having theaveflected, friend, give no place to deceits, but fix your affections on Sits and Itiam's feet." While he was yet speaking of Itiam's viruse, the day dawned and the joy of the world awoke. After performing every parificatory rite he halted, the all-pare and wise, and called for some milk of the for tree, and bound up the hair of his head into a knot, a did also his brother. On seeing thus, Summut's eyes filled with tears. Sore pained at heart, with doleful face and clasped hands he made this houble spreech: "The king of Kosala, my lord, thus enjoined me: 'Take the chariot and go with Ham; let them see the forcest and lathe in the Ganges, and then speedily bring them home again, but the brothers, fackthanna and Riam and Sita too, bring them book, settling all their doubts and scraples.'

Dobd 92.

Thus spoke the king, sire; but wee is me! I can do only as you tell me." He fell in supplication at his feet weeping helplessly as a child.

Chaupdi.

"Have pity, my son, and so act that Aradh he not left a wislow." Risms raised the Minister and thus exhorted him. "Lather, you know the path of virtue. Sixi, Dashhethi and king Harichandra, for the acke of their religion, endorred commiss sillicitions. Rantiders' and wise king Ball kept their Latth horogen many trails. There is no ritue equal to treth, as the Vedax, Shatrax, and Poránas declare. I have reached this virtue by an easy road: Il I al handon it, my disgrace will be published in earth, heaven and hell and diagrace to a mun of honour tepin as grievous as a multion deaths. But why say all this to you, father? I only incur sin be ranteed you.

I Partition, the smed Kazalitti was alien towned a his great liber at re. He officed is many cattle in earlies that their I half camed a piece, and the the Chambla.

Dold 93.

Fall humbly at my father's feet and with clasped hands beg of him not to distress himself in any way on my account.

Chaupai.

You, again, are equally dear to me as my father, and I implore you, sire, to do everything that will prevent the king from grieving about me." On hearing this conversation between Reghunáth and the Minister, the Nibhád and his people were sud and Lakshman spoke a little agaily. But the lord stopt him, knowing it to be altogether out of place, and nervously adjured Sumants, by the love he bore him, not to repeat his words. Suminda then proceeded with the king's message: Sits is not able to bear the hardships of the desert; you should try and persuade her to retarn to Arad, otherwise I shall have no prop left, and must die as inevitably as a fish out of water.

Dold 94.

She has a happy home both with her own mother and with her husband's parents, and she can live when she pleases at either, till these troubles are overpast.

Chaupdi.

The piteousness of the king's entreaties and the extremess of his affection are more than I can express. On hearing his father's message, the All-merciful tried in every way to persuade Sita: "Only return; and the affiction of your parents, your garu, and all your friends and relations will be at an end." Replied Vaidehi to her husband's words: Herm most dear and loving lord, full of compassion and infinite wisdom; can a shadow exist apart from its substance? Where is the smalight without the sun, or the radiance of the moon when the moon is not?" Having uttered this affectionate prayer to her husband, she turned to the Minister with these winning words: "You are as much my benefactor as my own father or my father-in-law, and if I answer you, it is the height of impropriety.

Dohá 95.

Yet, sire, take it not ill of me if in my grief I withstand you: away from the lotus feet of my lord's son all my kindred are nought.

Chaupdi.

I have seen my father's luxury and magnificance and his out-tool throaged with the jewelled crows of kings, yet angels his palson he such a blistful abode, I have no pleasure ere without my spouse. My Imperial father-in-law, the versign of Kessla, is of such glorious renown throughout as fourteen spheres that the king of heaven would advance a meet him and ceds him half in throne; yet though he be a great and Aradh his home, and though the whole of his amily he dear to me and my mother-in-law as my own other. I could not find pleasure in a single thing for a noment, away from the lotts flowers of Hömris feet. Though he forest road he rough, and the country monatalous, full felephants and tigers, boundless, lakes and atreams, wild take and Kiráta, and beasts, and hirds; all is delightful, if ay dear lord be with me.

Doha 96.

Fall at the feet of my father-in-law and my mother-inaw and tell them humbly from me not to grieve on my occount, for I am perfectly happy in the woods.

Chaupdi.

With the sovereign of my soul and my deer brother, its totsens to disamplicas, bearing bow and quiver, the toitsoms wanderings of the starch will not trouble me at all; be not then the least anxious about me." On leaving Stirs chilling speech, Eamanta became as distressed as a serpent at the loss of its headjewel. With eyes that aw not and ears that heard, not, and unable to utter a word, he was completely confounded. Rims said werything to concele him, but his heart refused to be comforted. Earnestly he begged that he to might accompany him; text Raghenandan returned any propriate answer to all he arged. "Rima's commands cannot be without j'Este is against me, I can do nothing." Bowing his head at the feet of Rima, Lakhuma and Sita, he tarred away like a merchant who has job this like a merchant who has job this like a merchant who has job this who has job this was

Dohá 97.

The very horses of his chariot, as he drove, continued whinaying and looking back upon Rama; and the Niehad at the sight gave way to his grief and best his head and mouned.

Chaurdi.

"When even brute beasts are so distrest at his loss, how can his subjects and his Inther and mother exist without him?" Having thus perforce dismissed Somants, Riam went on his way and came to the bank of the Ganges. When he called for the boat, the ferryman would not bring it sying: "I know your magic power: every one says that the dust of your fouts feet is a charm for making mun. A rock on which it fell became a beautiful woman, and wood is not on hard as stone. Should my boat in like unnear be turned into a saint's wife, the ferry will be closed and the boat fout, which is the support of my whole family. I have no other means of living. If, my lord, you are bent on crowing, you must allow me first to wash your feet.

Chhand 4.

After buthing your lottes feet I will take you on boad but I will not accept any toll. I tell you the treth, O Riams, swearing by yourself and Dawrath—Lakdman may shoot me with his arrows, but I will not take you across, gradient lord, until I have bathed your feet."

Soralld.

On bearing the ferryman's sude but loving speech, the All-merciful emiled! and looked at Jánaki and Jakshman;

Chaupde.

Then gaily cried; "I be anything in everyour best, bring start at once and bathe my feet; time has been lust; the me across." The gracious lord thus under request of a beatman; even he by one thought on whose sames make it trampyrated across the houndless occur of existence, and for whose three strifes the whole neitheren of a sistence, and for whose three strifes the whole neitheren of a sistence, and for whose three strifes the whole neitheren of a sistence, and for whose three strifes on the brings replaced on the bridge has considered the surface of the sistence o

I seems to see an one. We shough your Winhall not a particip of party of grounds as the first profession and the seems of the profession and the seems of the see of deep has a guist made to a prefer figure of a final field of a final field of the filter in the construction for the filter for the filter filter filter filter for the filter filter

I form tours to that marrief to at

Daha 98.

After laving his feet, and drinking of the water, both himself and his family, and thus redeeming the souls of his fathers, he joyfully conveyed his lord across to the other side.

Chaupdi.

They landed and stood on the sands of the Ganges, Sita, Riam Lakshman and Grab. The ferrymen landed too and made his obeissure. The lord was ashamed that he had nothing to give him. Sita knew what was passing in the mind of her beloved and cheerfully drew a jewelled ring from of her finger. Said the All-merciful: "Take your toll." The ferryman in distress clasped his feet: "What have I not already received, my lord? sin, sorrow, poverty and all their attendant tills have been removed I have bloowed for a length of years, but today God has given me my wages in tull. Now, gracious lord, I ask for nothing but your lavour; at the time of your return, whatever you bestow upon me I will thankfully accept."

Doha 33.

Lakehman and the lord both pressed him much, but the ferryman would take nothing; the All-merciful then dismissed him with the gift of unclouded faith, best of all boons.

Chaupái.

Then the lord of Rights' line bathed and bowed hihead in adoration to Mahadors' while Six with clasped hands thus addressed the sacred stream: "O mother, accomplish my desire that I may return in sitery with my hurbard and his brother and again adore you." On hearing Six's humble and affectionter epech, furourable steponse came from the boly flood: "Hearken, Vaidchi best belored of Righthsir; who is there in the world who knows not your glory? they who behold you become as the sovereigns of the spheres, and all the powers of magic merkly do you service. In the petition that you have dejenced to shares to me, you have graciously paid me all too hije han choone; yet, lady, unworthy as I am, I bestow upon you my blessing, is order to prove my utterances tree.

I The word in the test is florath, or in some manuscripts Parthera, a derivative of prids, the earth, messing a king, and here—it would seem descript Manhees.

1)-14 100

You shall return in eafsity to Kossle with your beloved and his brother, your every wish shall be accomplished, and your renown shall be spread throughout the world."

Charte

On herring Gangus gracious speech, Sita was delighted to God it so propitious. Then sull the lord to Gobsen Return home. At this his face green wan and his both home harmal, and with clayed hards and in supplicat tones circle! "Noblect of the sons of Region, hearken to prayer. Let me remain with my lord to show the road of him service for a day or two, and make a shapely of twigg for him in the wood where he goes to stay. Affinal I swear by Haghabir to do as he shall command my Resing his unferjaned affection, he took him with him. Gubas delight, who thereupon called all his kinsmen a dismissed them with kind averances.

Dold 101.

Then directing his intention to Ganes and Siva, at howing his head to the Ganges, the lord with his conpanion and his brother and Sita took his way to the woods.

Chaupdi.

That day he halted under a tree, and Lakshum and his tended at upplied all his necessities. At dawn, havin performed his morning ablottions he proceeded to visit the king of Sanctuaries. A king with Truth for his minister Faith for his cherished consort, the god Madhava' for his fairlend and favourite; his tressury stored with the four great prizes of life, and all holy places for his fair dominion with an impregnable domain and magnificent forts, so strong that no enemy could ever dream of taking them; with an army of shrines of such virtues and power as to rent the whole army of Sin; with the meeting of the rivers for his glorious throne and the Akhaya-bad for his reyal umbrells, deazling even the soul, of a saint; with the waves of the Ganga and Jamuna for his chausies, a vision to disperse all sorrow and distress:

Doha 102.

His attendants pure and holy anchorites, guerdoned

Yenl-Madhava is the name of the god worshipped as the tutefary divinity of the Tribeni, the confinence of the three effeats, at Praying with all they desire: his beralds, the Vedas and Puráns, to declare his immaculate virtue.

ATODRYA 257

Chaurdi.

Who can tall the power of Praying, a lion to destroy the clephantine monster Sin P On beholding the beauty of this king of association, Regulare, the ocean of delight, was delighted, and the state of the state of Dahá 103.

The patriarch gave him his blessing with as much joy of heart as though God had set before him in visible form the reward of his virtue.

Chaupdi

After sequiring of his welfare, he conducted him to a seat and indulated his affection in doing him honore. Then he brought and presented roots, fruits and herbs, all sweet as ambrovia, of which hidnes, with Sits, Lakshiman and their attendant, partook with much plessure and content. Häm was referreded and all his fature forgotten. Then cried Bharadvisi, in complacent tones: "This day my pensesee, my prigiringer, and my night have been rewarded : my prayers my meditations and my detachment from the world have tooday borne frent; yea, all my proop restrictes have to-day. Ridms, been rewarded by the right of you. This and nought ries he had been proposed to the control of th

Doha 104.

Until a man in heart, word and deed, and without reserve, becomes wholly yours be cannot even dream of happiness, despite all that he may do"

Chaupdi.

On hearing the saint's words, Ráma was confused, yet revelled with delight in oc exquisite a display of faith. Then proceeded he to declare unto them all in countless ways the saints illustrious recown: "Great indeed and highly endowed is he, Holy Father, whom you are pleased to honour." Thus they howed to one another, the saint and Raghabir, and were filled as they conversed with indescribable happiness. When the people of Prayag heard the news, all the religious students, assettics, monks, hernits and anchorites flocked to Bharadvája's cell to see the glorious son of Dasarath. All made their obeisance and rejoiced that their eyes had been so highly favoured. They blessed than their eyes had been so highly favoured.

Dohá 105.

Ráma rested for the night. At daybreak he bathed at Prayág, and then, after bowing his head to the saint proceeded joyfully on his way with Sita, Lakshman and his attendant.

Chaupat.

Ráms had affectionately asked the saint: "Fell me, my lord, by what road we shall go." The saint replied with a smile: "All ways are easy to you," but called his disciples to go with him. They came with joy, some fifty in number, all in their boundless love for Ráms declaring that they knew the road. The saint selected four students who in many previous existences had done many good deeds. Then having bowed to the saint and received his permission to depart, Raghariá went forth rejoicing. When they had come out near to the village, the men and women who all flocked to see them found in the sight of their lord the fruition of their life, and sadly turning home, sent their heart after him.

Dohá 106.

Courteously Rama dismissed the disciples, who returned with their heart's desire obtained; then slighted and bathed in the stream of Jamuna, dark as his own body.

Chaupdi.

The dwellers on the bank, when they heard of his arrival, left whatever they were doing and ran to see him. On beholding the beauty of Lakshman, Ráma and Sita, they congratulated themselves on their good fortune, and all with longing beart began difficulty to ask their same and home. The arge sides of the party had wit enough to recognize Rana, and related his whole history, and how he had come into the desert by his father's order. At this, they were all said and complained: "The king and queen have done ill." Men and women alike, on beholding the beauty of Rains, Lukhman and Sita, were agitated with love and pity: "What kind of father and mother must they be, friend, who have sent such children into the wood?"

AYODHYA 259

Dald 107.

Then Raghubir urgently exhorted his guide, who in authmission to his commands took his way home.

Chaupai.

Again with clarged hands Site. Rams and Lakhman made renowed obeismes to the Jamuná, and as they went on their way their talk was all of the daughter of the Son and has glory. Blany teavellers mat them on the way, and exclaimed, site gazing with affection at the two brothers: "You have all the marks of royalty on your person ion seeing them we are troubled at heart, for you go your way on foot, and the astrologers methinks are faire. The road is difficult; the monations and forests are every great; jet you have with you a delicate girl. Elephants and tigees make the woods too terrible to contemplate; with your permission, we will accordingny you, will escort you as far a- you please, and them make our bow and return."

Doha 108

As they proffered this request, their body trembled all over with excess of love, and their eyes filled with tears; but the All-merciful gently and contropply dismissed them.

Chaurdi.

All the towns and villages along the road where the envy of the cities of the Serpents and the Gods: 'At what an ampicious moment and by what a boly man must they have been founded, to be so happy and blessed and altogether highly favoured!' Whetever spot was trodden

I Bere in some copies is found a whole additional stanza, which is said to stain takes in the flipping 156. It may therefore have been written by Takes that is, was probably afferent conceled to time. The three contain nothing of any interest, and there fit in very when all yill with the contain nothing of any interest, and other fit in very when all yill will be contain. I therefore, the most of the native exister, upder to contitute on the contain the contains.

Rámn's feet Paradice was not to be compared to it. The dwellers by the wayside, of high desert, where the praise of the denizens of lieuwen, as they feasted their eyes on Sita and Lakshman and Ráma dark of they as a storm-cloud. Trponds and river in which Ráms bathed were the ency of t lake and river of heaven; the trees under which the Lo sat were magnified by the tree of life; and Earth, touch by the dust of Rámn's lotus feet, thought her good fortus complete.

Doha 109.

The clouds gave him shade, the exultant hests of heave rained down flowers, as Rama proceeded on his way look ing at the rocks and woods and birds and deer.

Chaupái.

Whenever Sita, Lakshman and Raghurái came out nes a village on the way, every one, —young and did; man an woman —came directly they heard the news, forgetting their own private affairs, and as they gazed on their beauty of the chinea the truition of their eyes and were made kappy, for ever. At the sight of the two heroes their eyes filled with tears, their body quivered with emotion, and they became all-enraptured, their state of mind as indestribable as though a beggar had discovered a pile of heavenly jewels. Every one was telling his neighbour: "Novi is the time to prove the value of sight," One in his delight to see Rama would go with him, gazing as he went; another, drawing his beautiful image into his heart by the way of his yes, was utterly overpowered in body, soul and speech.

Doha 110.

One, seeing a fine shady fig-tree, would spread under it soft grass and leaves and cry; "Rest a little after your fatigue, and proceed again either at once or at daybreak,"

Chaupái.

Another brought a jar full of water and tendely benought in 'Drink' my lord." On hearing, their affectionate speech and seeing their great devotion, the compassionate and most amiable Ráma, who moreover perceived that Six was wearied, rested for a while in the shade of the fig-tree. All were enraptured with his beauty—men and women alike—and their soul was enamoured of his incompassionation in the second state of the second six of the secon face, so fixed was their gaze. At the eight of his body, dark in hee as a young candl tree, a myriad Lores were fuscinsted; while Lakshman, all comely from head to foot, charmed the soul with his fair lumbs, bright as the lightning; in his anchorite's dress, with his tightly-fitted quiver and how, and arrows gleaming in his lotes hand.

AYODETA 261

Dalet 111.

With their hair done up in a knot as a crown upon their graceful heads, with broad chest, strong arms, and large deep eyes, with face like the autumnal full moon, glistening with beads of moisture.

Chaupdi.

The loveliness of the two brothers is past all telling; it is boundless, and my wit is scent. With every faculty of mind and soul, they all gaze upon the heasteess troe imm soul woman thirsting and faint with love, like deer dazed by a light. The village women drew near Stat with tender and bashful enquiries, and again embracing her feet, in their simplicity whitepeed the question:—"Noble lady, we have a petition, but, like women, are straid to make it Pardon our presumption, madam and he not offended by our country manners. These two charming young princes, from whom sametald and gold might berrow splendour.

Dold 112.

The one dark, the other fair, but both beautiful and homes of delight, with face like the autumn moon, and eyes like the lotuses of autumn,

Chaupái.

That would put to shame a myriad loves, any, fair haly, bow stand they to you." On bearing their pleasant and loring speech, Sits smiled in modest contusion, and looking first at them and then at the earth was shashed—they prely mail—with a double abahment. But droeping her fawnilke eyes, and with a roine's sweet as the skill's but lovingly replied: "The fair youth, so say and graceful, is by name lakshman, my younger brather-in-day; while he, the dark complexioned, with the large eyes and arms, the all-beautiful with the gentle volos: "here retiling her mono-like face with the border of her robe she looked towards her husband, and her septower with a side-long glance like a pretty khanjan! thus by signs indicated to them her lord. All the village women were as delighted as beggars who have robbed a pile of jewels.

Dohd 113.

Falling at Sitas feet in their great affection, they lave ed upon her every blessing: May your happy wedded lilast as long as Earth rests on the serpent's head.

Chaupdi.

May you be as dear to your lord as Párrati to Sir Yet, lady, caesa not to have some regard for us: again as again with clasped hands we beseech you, if you relarn hithis road, remember us your screams, and allow as to syou." Finding them all so athirst with love, Sits comforte them with many soothing words, as the lify is cheered by the moonlight. Then Laskshman, perceiving Raghabfr's wish, geatly asked the people the way. At his words they became sad, their limbs trambled, their eyes filled with tears, their joy was extinguished, and they were troubled at heart: "God has given as a treasure only to take it away again!" Then reflecting on the ways of Fate and taking courage, they fixed upon the easiest road and explained it to them.

Dobd 114.

Raghunath took his way to the woods, and with him Lakshman and Jánski; and they all returned home, but with many fond speeches, and in heart accompanied them.

Chaupái.

Men and women alike on their way back lamented excalled by and imputed blame to Pate, saying saily to one another: "God's doings are all perverse. He is unterly uncontrollable, ernel and remorseless; who has made the moon sickly and spotted, the tree of paradise a liteles block, and the ocean all salt, and who now has sent these princely boys into the wilderness. If the woods are their proper abode, then for whom has he intended ease and pleasure? If they are to wander on their way bureloated, it is to no purpose that he has invented so many kinds of carriages. If they are to lie on the ground littered only with grass and leaves, for whom has God created comfort-

I The khanjan is a species of wagtail, ble couches? If he makes them live under the trees, why has be taken such pains to erect splendid palaces?

Dohd 115.

If such lovely and delicate children wear the rough dress and matted locks of anchorites, it is to no purpose that the great artificer has made so many kinds of dress and ornament.

Chaupái.

If they are to eat only froits and berbs, all tim debracies of the world see thrown a way." Said one: "They are so beautiful, they must have been spontaneously produced and not made by God at all. In all the works of God of which the Vedas speak, that either the earsoan hear, or the eyes see, or the misd imagine, or the stongue tell—easenth and examine the whole fourteen spheres—where is there such a man, and where such a woman? When he saw them, God was so pleased that he essayed to make their match: but after much habors, nothing came of it, and thus in spitts be has sent and buried them in the wood? "Said another: "I am no great sobolar, but I account myself supremely happy; any, blessed are all, in my opinion, who see him, or have seen bim, or that see him."

Doha 116.

With such effectionate discourse their eyes filled with tears: "How can they, who are so delioste, traverse so difficult a road."

Chaupái

All the women were made as uneary by their love as is the clasic is evening time. As they thought upon their tender lotus few and the hardness of the read, they were distrest at heart and oried is plastice tones; "At the tonds of their selt and roay feel, the very earth shrinks, as shrinks our heart. If the great Ged must send them to the woods, why did he not strew their path with flowers? If there he one boon that we may sak of Heaven and obtain, let it he, friend, that we keep them ever in our eyes." All the people who had not come in time, and thus had missed seried Site and Rima, when they heard of their beauty, taked surriously. How far, bresther, will they have got by this time?' They who were strong ran on and saw them, and returned with joy, having obtained the fruition of their eyes.

Dohá 117.

The women and children and the aged wrong thei hands and lamented. In this manner, wherever Rama went the people were smitten with love.

Chaupái.

In overy village was similar rejoicing at the sight of the moon of the lilylike solar race. Some who had learnt by bear say of what had been going on imputed blame to the king and queen. One said: "It was very good of the king to give our eyes sonh a treat." Said others among themselves in simple and loving phrase: "Happy the father and mother who gave them birth and happy the city from whence they come? Happy the hills, and plains, and woods, and fowas, and every spot which they visit. Even the Creator who made them is pleased—nay, is absolutely in love with them." The delightful history of Ráma, Lakshman sod Sita that spread over every road and forest.

Dohá 118.

In this manner the Sun of the lotus-like Solar race gladdened the people on the road, as with Sita and the son of Sumitra he proceeded on his travels through the woods,

Chaupdi.

Rams walked in front and Latshman behind, conpicuous in the hermit's dress they wore; and between the two Sits shone resplendent as May's who connects the life of God with the life of the world. Or, to describe her beauly by autother fancy, she seemed like Rati between Spring and Love; or, to ransack my mind for yet another simile, like the constellation Rohini between Binds and the Moor.
As she went along the way, Sits carefully planted her freit between the footprints of her lord; while Lakhman, aviding the footprints of them both, set his feet as he went to their right and left. The charming affection of all three was beyond all telling; how can I deelare it? Birds and der were fascinated at the sight of their heauty, and Riam the wayfarer stole their heart.

Doha 119.

All who beheld the dear travellers, Sits and the two brothers, joyously and without fatigue arrived at once at the end of the toilsome journey of life.

t Robini is the minth Junar asteriam personified as the daughter of Dakaba and the favourite wife of the Hoon, Daiha is the planet Hercett.

Chaupai.

And to this day any soul in which the vision of the wayfacets, Rāma, Sita and Lakshman shides, finds the path that leads to Rāma's home, guth that scarce a saint may find. Then Raghubir, knowing that Sita was tired, and observing a fighree close at hand and cool water, there rested and took some costs and fruits to eat, and after bathing at dawn again went on his way. Admiring the heauty of the woods and lakes and rocks, he arrived at Valmiki's hermitage. He found the sant's dwelling a charming spot, a lovely wooded hill with a spring of clear water, lotuses in the pond, the forest trees all in flower, with a delightful hom of bees drunk with sweets, and a joyous clamour of birds and beast feeding bappily and in peace together.

Dohá 120.

The Lotus-eyed was glad as he gazed upon the bright and fair retreat, and the saint on hearing of his arrival came forth to meet him

Chaupai.

Rams prestrated himself before him, as the boly man gave him his blessing. At the sight of Rams' beasty, his eyes were rejoiced and he conducted him with all known to bis cell; there gave him a chone seat as a guest dear to him as his own life, and sent for herbs and sweet froits, of which Sits, Lashman and Rams ate Great was the joy of Valiniti's soul as his eyes beheld the image of bliss. Then folding his lottes hand, Raims thus spoke in words to chasm his ever: "King of sages, all time, past, present and fature, it to your keep and the onlyers it likes kittle and fature, the form of your land." So saying, the lord related to him the whole hittory and how the queen had bandshed him the

Doha 121.

"My father's promise, my mother's cohemes, my hrother liberat's coronation, and my own meeting with you, my lord, are all blessings that only past merit can have won for me.

Chaupdi.

In beholding your feet, boly sir, all my good deeds are rewarded. Now, wherever it may be your order, and no anchorite he troubled - for those monarche burn, even though heart, Raghariya. They who are all men's friends, and are friendly to all; to whom placture and pain, praise and always at all as a who are careful to say, what is both free and kin it who, whether desping or waking, fine themselves maker protection and have no other way of established but you, it their beart, Rims, all is. They who look upon another min's well as their one mother, and another guards wastly as the common of the misotrature; and to whom you, O Rams, are dar as their own jife; be their heart your amprisons about.

11/4 125.

To whom, my son, you are at once master and companion, father, mother and spiritual guide, be their heart your temple, ye heathers twein, wherein with Sits to abide.

Chauf di.

They who pick out all mon's good points and leave their bid; who enlure troubles on behalf of Bráhmans and kine; and who are of note in the world for soundness of doctrine; in their heart be your chosen home. They who understand your righteouses and their own defects and fix all their hopes on you, and have an affection for all your worshippers: in their heart dwell, you and Sits. He who has the all trile, seet, wealth, hereditary religion, worldly advancement, friend, relations, home and all, and given himself wholly to you in his heart take up your abode. Raghurdi. To whom heaven and hell and release from transmigration are all alike, if only they can behold the god with his bow and arrows; and who in heart, word and deed are your faithful slaves; be their heart, likms, your taberoacle.

Doha 126.

They who never ask for anything but simply love you; in their heart abide for ever, for that is your very home."

Chaupái.

Such were the dwelling-places the sage indicated, and his lowing speech pleased Rama's soul. The saint continued: Hearken, lord of the solar race; I will tell you a bermitage suitable for your present wants. Take up your abode on the hill of Chitra-Kuţ¹; there you will have every convenience. It is a beautiful hill finaly wooded, the bannt of elephants, tigers, deer and birds. It have a socred river mentioned in the Paránas, which the wife of Atri brought there by the power of penance. It is easiled the Mandákini, and is exactle to the Ganges, as quick to drown sin as a witch to strangle and infant. Atri and other sages live there, engaged in meditation and prayer and wasting their body with penance. Go and bless their labours, Ráma, and confer dignity on the mountain."

Doha 127.

All the glories of Chitrs-kút did the great saint tell and declare. The two brothers and Sita proceeded to bathe in the sacred stream

Chaupdi.

Said Raghubar, "It is a good place, Lakshman; now make strangaments for our stopping somewhere been." Lakshman then spied out the north bank: "The ravine bends round it like a bow, with the river for its string, seedlelsm and obstity for its arrows, and all the non of this will age for its quarry, while Mount Chitra-kit is the huntaman of meering sim striking at clove quarters." So ous merit that she had thus acquired she created the river Man takini, and if its waters maintained the fertility of the country through a ten year drought.

I The sacred bill of Chitra-kut usone of a small group that forms th last spor of the great Vindbyan range. It is attracted in the modern die trict of Bands, close to the town of Karwa and about 60 miles from Praya (Allababad) A river flows at its base, now called the Palsoni (the Sanske rayoshon; " warm as milk"), which has some fine waterfalls before it join the Jamush The Mandakim, so frequently mentioned, is only a sms tributary stream which enters the Palenti near the village of Suepu where are number of bandsome temples. The hill is about three miles ; circumterence, and a parrow pared pain runs the wante way round. The was constructed about 150 years ago by one of the Rayas of the prighbourg state of l'anna for the convenience of pilgrims performing the ceremony circumambulation. The two principal fire days are the Ram nate (Rama's birthday) in the month of Chait, and the Diwali in Kartik About 20 miles from Chura-kur on the back of the Jamuna is the town of Ray pur, which was lounded by Tules lias, where he lived for several years, as where a manuscript of the Hamsyans in his own handwriting in still to served. He imposed some currous restrictions upon the inhabitants of ti place, which are still to this day religiously obserted. No private house concern wealthy the owner may be, are allowed to be built of any materi but med and wood, stone being reserved exclusively for the temples and thather, porter or dencing girl may live within the limits of the town, who their services are required, they have to be called in from some other villag 2 Austra, the wife of Atri, was one of Daksha's 24 daughters S practised severe penance for ten thousand years, and by virtue of the religi saying, Lakshman showed the spot; when he had seen it, Righippati was pleased. The gods learnt that Rama was well content, and came with Indra at their head. In the garb of Kols and Kirást they came and put up neat hats of boughs and grass, two of them; both prettier than word can tell, the one of larger size, the other a nice little cottage.

Doha 128.

In his rustic cell the Lord, attended by Lakshman and Janaki, shone forth as beautiful as Love in the dress of a hermit between Rati¹ and Spring.

Chaupái.

Then flocked to Chitra-kuit gods, serpents, Kinnars and Digpáis. All the immortals bowed low before Râms and agraed with joy on that most longed-for vision. Showering down flowers and exclaiming "At length, O Lord, we have found our Lord," the heavenly host in piteons wise declared their intolerable distress, and joyfully started for their several homes. As soon as they heard the news of Raghunandan's stay at Chitra-kuit, the saints sallied forth; seeing the boly company draw near, Râms protraited himself before them: but they all took him to their bowom, and invoked upon him blessings, 2 knowing that they would be accomplished. As they beheld the beauty of Râms distand Smitra's son, they accounted all their good deeds to have been well rewarded.

Doha 129.

After all due honours paid, the Lord dismissed the saintly throng to practise contemplation, prayer, sacrifice and nonance at pleasure in their own retreats.

Chaupdi.

When the Kols and Kiráta got the tidings, they were as glad as if the nine treasures? had come to their house.

I Bati ie the Indian Venne

² Their blessing could do Ràma no good, but its fulfilment would redonned to their own credit, as showing them to be true prophets.

³ The min-Radius or hearenly treasures of Kurren, the gail of weight, are this enumerated; the Polician, Mahi pe lans, Sanha, makes, baches, the chains, Makesonia Nila, Sanha, and Karlen; but their nature in an exactly defined, though some of them appear to be precise gream. Assuring Matter 17 January 2018, 1988, 1989,

ATODHYA 271

With leat platters foll of herbs, roots and fruits, they ran like beggers acrambing for gold. Those among them who had already seen the two brothers were questioned about them by the others on the roed. Telling and bearing likins's perfection, all came and saw bim. Laying their offering before this and making observace, their love increased exceedingly as they guest upon their Lord. Motonless as figures in a picture they stood about any how, their body thrilling with mention and their eyes filled with tears Rama, perceiving that they were overwhelmed with effection, spoke to them words of kindness and received them with bonour Again and again bowing low before the Lord, they addressed him in hamble straio with folded hands:

Doles 130.

"Now at length that we have seen our Lord's feet, we have all found a protector: O prince of Kozala, what a blessing for us is your arrival.

Chaupás.

Happy land and forest and road and hill, where thou, my lord, has planted thy foot; happy the birds and deer and beats of the forest, whose life has been crowned by thy sight; happy as and all our kin, who have filled our eyes with thy vision. Thou hast chosen an excellent apot where no to take up they hade; here at all season of the year thou will live at east. We will do thee service in every way, by diving away elephante, lone, such and tigera. The thicket, a writes, mountains, charms and caves have all, my lord, been even the such as th

Dol4 131.

The lord, whom the Vels cannot rather our the saints comprehent, in his infinite comparion listened to the words of the Kiráte, as a father to the vice of a child

Charge

It is only love that Rama loves; understand this, ye who are men of understanding. He charmed all the foresters by his tender losing! speeches. Having taking leave not howed the best, they set forth, and discoursing on the way of Lord's perfections they reached their homes In fashion the was inothers and Bits dwell. In the forest, lighting god; and saints. From the sime that Haghban took his up his abole there, the wood became bound in blessing every kind of tree blassomed and bore fri lorarisin crepres formed pleasant and benedifications as though the tree of paradies in all its native loveliness shandoned the groves of heaven. Strings of hees made grateful luzzing, and a delicious air breathed soft, cook of foregrent.

I Paramete, "atment in with" "frangle wire" in for the benefit parameter.

Dold 132.

Jays, cookoos, parrots, chduals, chakuds, chakors, a birds of every description charmed the ear and ravished t soul with their notes

Chaupar.

Elephants, lions, monkeys, hours and deer forgot the animosity and sported together. Enraptured above all we the herds of deer who beheld the beauty of Risma as he tracked the classe. All the lorests of the gods that ther are in the world were envious at the sight of Risma's forest The Ganges, the Sarasvati, the sunborn Jamund, the Narmads, daughter of blound likela, and the sacred Godsvari every river, stream and torrent discoursed of the Mandakini. The mountains of the rising and the selting sun, Kailias, Mandar, Mera, home of all the gods, the crags of Himilaya, and all the hills there be, sang the glory of Chitra-kit. The delight of the gods was more than their soul could contain, to think it had wen such recown without an effort.

Dold 133.

"Of highest merit and blessed indeed are all the birds, deer, creepers, trees and grasses of Chitra-kut," so day and night cried the gods.

Chaupdi.

All creatures with eyes, who looked on Rims, felt with dight that now they had lived to some parpose. Things without life, touched by the dast of his feet, were gladdened by promotion to the highest sphere. The woods and rocks, all charming in themselves, were so blissful, so entirely the holiest of the holy, that how can I declare their glory, when they became the abode of the infinitely blessed, and when learning the Milky Ocean's and deserting Avadh. Sita, Risan, and Lakhman came there to dwell? The delights of the forest would be past telling even by a bundred thomand Seshings. How then can I describe them, any more than a common hole totaties could uplif illoem Mander? In every thought, word and set Lakhman does bim service, with an amiability and develop more than cue to the contraction of the contractio

Dold 134.

For ever gazing on the feet of Sita and Rama and conscious of their love for him, not even to his sleep did Lakubman droam of absent kindred, or father or mother, or home Chaupda.

In Itima's company Sita lived so happy that he lost all memory of city, facily and hone. Ever satching the moonlike face of her belovel, she rejoiced like the partridge at night, and essing her lovid; affection daily increase she was as happy as the cockoo by day liter heart was no cannoured of hum that the forcet was a thoused times as dear to her as Aradh; dear was the cottage with her love's sciety, dear were the fawns and birds, now her only attendants; like her husban's father and mother were the hermits and their wives, and week as ambround the will fruits and roots. Shared with her lord, a litter of leaves twas a boundedfold more delightful than Coppa's own couch. How can material delights legalic hum, the mere aight of whom confers the sovereignty of the ripheres.

Dold 135.

Hemembering Ridms, men discard as no more worth than a blade of grass all the pleasures of sense, no wonder then in Sita's case, Ridma's own beloved, the mother of the world.

Charper

Anything that would please Sata and Lakahman, that would Hashmanth do, exactly as they suggested. He would recite legrods and twee of olico times, in the beering of which Lakahman and Sita took great delight. If ever be made mention of Aradh, his gree filled with tears; as he made mention of Aradh, his gree filled with tears; as he

I Here the Lome and Label state are all three presents as increasion as the hand, whose external boses in the Kidy through.

3 Affair, in Fe the Agnatic America (made to attempt a long of print and the least to the second of the called to mind his father and mother, his family and brother, with all Burnt's affection and amidble attentithe compressionate load grew most as 1, but restrained his self knowing that the time was out of joint. At the sig Sits and Lakshimus became distressed also, like the shudthat follows a man. When Reghousedom noticed the emtion of his spones and his brother, being self-restrainand tender and as soothing to his vortices as sands-with when applied to the breast, he would begin to relate son sacred story to direct them.

Doka 136.

Rams and Lakshman with Sits in their leafy but wer as resplendent as Indra in the city of heaven with hi spouse Sachi and their son Jayanta.

Chaupas.

The Lord was as watchful over Sita and his younges brother as the ageild over the papil of the eye wike Lakshunan was as carted of Sita and Raghabir as a fool of his own body. Thus happily the Lord hred in the woods, graifly alike birds, beasts and pious ascetics. I have now told the story of Riam's exile to the woods; here how Sumanta reached Avadb. The Nishaid returned after escorting his Lord, and came in sight of the Minister and the chariot. No words can tell the distress with which he found the Minister to be agonized. Crying out "Ikims, Riam, Sita Lakshunan," he had follen to the ground unterly overpowered, while the horses kept on looking to the south 1 and neighing as piteously as a bird that has lost its wings.

Dohá 137.

They would neither eat grass nor drink water, and their eyes shed tears. At the sight of Ráma's horses all the Nisháds were deeply grieved.

Chaupái.

At length summoning up courage the Nishad said "now." Sumanta, cease mourning; you are a learned mas and a philosopher, submit patiently to adverse fortune." With such kindly expostiations he made him morat the chart, whether he would or any but he was so ansiring by girl that he could not drive, his heart sched so grievently for Rima's loss. The barrer rearred and would not go you would

I Hoping, as Rams had gone to the south, to get the first glimper of him coming back again from that direction think they were wild deer pat in harnest, jibbing, lying down and turning to look lebiled them, bring overcome by ore pain for Rima's loss. If any one mentioned the name of Rima, Lakshman, or Sits, the bores would at once neigh and look at him: the way in which they decired their grief is not to be described, like a snake that has lost its headiewel.

ATODETA 275

Dold 138

The sight of the Minister and the horses made the Nishad very sad. He told off four trusty grooms and with them a charioteer.

Chaupdi.

After making over the charinteer, Goha returned home, more sorry at leaving than words can tell. The Nithkild done off to Aradh; sank every moment in deeper distress. Sumanta, terretred by regerta, a prey to woo, oried: "A corres for life without flagha-bir! This rile body must perith at last; it lori all glory when hereft of lingha-bir sad became a sink of infamy and crime; why does it not take it departure? Ab! fool that it is, it missed its opportunity, seeing that to-lory my learnt has not broken in wisin." Wringing his hands and beating his head in his remove he went his way like a miser robbed of his pell, or like a warrior of high retown, some famous champion, who has had to the form he hattle-file.

Doha 139.

The Minister's grief was like that of some learned Brahman well read in the Vedas, a man of good repute, of Integrity and birth, who has been entrapped into drinking.

Changdi.

Or like some well-born, rituous and directed lady, who is entirely derested to her load, but whom Fars has forced to desert him; such was the creel torture that recked the Minister's heart. His eyes to full of tears that he could exactly see this same deal, his sense all conforced, his lips of his tonges cleaving to his pathet, the breath of Life only restrained by the last of Himin a pensilse to return; all the colour gree (rom his face, he looked like one who had markered his father and mother. His near was no possessed with the greatment of his loss and his removes that he might be some returned as place for termining at the gate of death. Words would not come, but to himself be mound: "flow on I I Asselb in the face; when they see the charist and no Ri in it, they will turn in bewilderment to me.

Dehd 140.

When the agitated citizens run to question me and have to answer them, my beset will be cleft seander as by thunderbolt.

Chaufái.

When the piteors queen-mothers ask of me, Good God what shall I say to them? When Lakehman's mother que tions me, what good nees can I tell her? When Ramm mother comes running, like a cow mindful of its now reason. It can only asways, Ramm, Lakehman and Sita have gone into the furest. Whoever sks, must answer so othis is the treat I shall have at Aradh When the sorrowful king, whose life hangs upon Rima questions me, with what face can I sower him, I have seen the princes aske to their junney's end and have come back. When the king hears the news of Lakehman, Sita and Rams, he will discard his life as not worth a stem.

Dold 141.

My heart bereft of its beloved is like clay drained of water, but it cracks not : now I know how capable of torture is this body that God has given me."

Chaurái.

Thus bemoaning bimself a he east, he quickly arrived in his chariot at the bank of Tamasa. There he courter outly dismised the Nishids, who after falling at his test turned sorrowfully away. The Minister was as downess to entering the city as one who had killed his own spiritual guide or a Bráhman, or cow. He passed the day sitting under a tree, and at eventide took the opportunity to entra Avadh in the dark. He slouk into his house, leaving the chariot at the gate. All who beard the tidings came to the king's door to see the chariot, and having recognized it and observed the distress of the horses, their body melted away like hail in the san. All the citizens were as weekegone as fish when the waters are dried up.

Dohd 142.

When they heard of the Minister's arrival, all the ladies of the court were agitated. The palace struck him with as much dread as a haunted chamber.

Chaupdi.

All the qurens questioned him in great excitement; or souwer canm, his voice was all broken. With no cars to bear, nor eyes to see, he could only ask verry one he met, 'Tell me where is the king.' Seeing his contenion, the bandmaid-ens conducted him to Kaussylas apartments. On entering, Somanta found the king in such state as the moon above when all its loater has wanned. Farting, sleepless, stript of every adornment, he hy on the ground in after wretchedness, sighing as piticously as 'Typidis' later he had been barled from heaven, his heart every moment bursting with grief, like Sampatif' falling with singed wings, foodly crying, 'Risma, Risma, Risma', and again 'Risma, Lakshman, Stat.

Doha 143.

The Minister on seeing him oried 'All hail!; and lowed to the ground. At the sound of his voice the king started up hurriedly and exclaimed 'O Somanta, where is Rima?'

Chaypai.

The king clasped Summata to his boson, like a drowning man who has caught hold of some support. He seated him affectionately by his side, and with his yes full of terrs asked: "Tell me, kind fittend, of liknate where are Raghnasth, Lakshman and Sita? Have you brought them back, or have they cought the forest?" At three words the Minister's yes attended with tear. Overpowered by actient, the king asked again: "give me iddings of Sita, Rama and Lakshman." Calling to mind Rica's beauty and mainlaifty, he scrowed yet more: "I promised him the kingdom and then imposed exile; he obeyed with soal unmoved either by joy or sorrow. Bereft of such a son I yet can live: who so guilty a monster as I? Pold 144.

Take me, my friend, to the place where Lakebman are. If not, I tell you the will take flight at once," Sits and

There fades not him, corements craftly dress him eat. The more his without and done

Chaupdi.

Again and again be implored him: "Friend, tell me my son. Hearken, comrade: contrive some means for spee ly showing me Ráma, Lakshman and Siti." Summon op courage the Alinister gently replied: "Sire, your maje is a scholar and philosopher, a model of courage and edurance, and a constant attendant of holy assemblies. Li and death; pleasure, pain and all enjoyments; loss and gai the society of friends and their bereavement; all, sir, a governed by time and fate as malterably as the succession night and day. Fools triumph in prosperity, and are downen, in adversity; wise men account both alike. Consider the matter wisely and take courage; the good of all depending your open cease vain regrets.

Dohá 145.

Their first halt was at the Tamasa; their second on the bank of the Ganges, where the two heroes and Sits bathed and stayed to drink water.

Chaupái.

The boatmen showed them great courtesy and they passed the night at Singapere. At daybeack they called for milk of the fightree and fastened up the hair of their head into a crown-like top-knot. Then lâmn's friend called for the boat, and after patting his beloved on board, lâm himself followed, and after him by his Lord's permission. Lakshman too claimed the boat capipt with bow and arrows. Seeing my distrees, Raghu-bir restrained his emation and addressed me thus kindly: 'Father, give my salustion to my father, and again and again embrace his lotto feet. There at hir feet entreat him with all hamility, asying, Father, mourn not for me; my banishment to the forest is pleavant and profitable to myself, and on your part it a grace, a favor, and a meritorious deed.

Chhand 5.

By your favour, father, I go to the forest, there to enjoy complete happiness. After falling your command, I shall return again in safety to behold your feet. Next falling at the feet of each of the queen mothers, console and implore them to make every effort that Kowla's king may live happy.

Sorathe 5.

Again and again clasping the lotus feet of my spiritual instructor, give him this my message : ' So exhort the king that he may cease to sorrow on my account.

Chaupdi

Bowing down before all the citizens and the people of the court make known to them, air, this my petiton: 'He is my best friend who ensures the Ling's bappiness' Say to Bharat, too, when he comes, Now that you have obtained the royal dignity, forget not cound polity. Cherish your subjects in word, thought and deed, and be obedient to all the queen-mothers without partiality. Pulfil your duty, brother, as a brother, and in dutifulness to father, mother and kindred, and take such care of the king, sir, that he may never regret me. 'Lakshman gave went to some angry words, but Rams checked him, and begged of me again and again, afjuring me by bimself, not to mention his childishness.

Hold 146.

Sits sent her reverence, and would have said more, but was unable , her voice faltered, her eyes filled with tears, and her body quivered with emotion.

Chauses.

Then it was that at a sign from Raghubar the Lostman propelled the boat to the opposite side. In this manner the Glory of liabu sine went his war, and I stood looking on with a beart as of adament. How can I describe my own anguish, who have come tack alive, bearing Itama's measure age?" With these words the Minister stoffed speaking being overpowered by affection, remorse and distress. When he had heard Sumanta's speech, the king fell to the ground, hearthroken with grief, and in a wild threnzy of soul writhed like a fish in the soons of a turbed stream! All the

I This simile so mired at 1420 51 has precled many of the commentation a from some a state gramm armon cathershan concerns of batters. It is us-1 Contract and early and by a letter in the famour of Sayon 'the famour Contract and eagle and by a letter in the promotion of Sapinal (In 1976), then notices on all Mattages. He writes no 6 "My observed a new party has not not been made of the recording a fail on Posta in Santa and Posta in Posta i A Curreling survey mean or a cut when to work one or control one of a cut to any cut to the part of the cut proper directly place used when promoting to the sectors a long high he hard the east gasput and dring. The sough lairg none the mile firsted draw and relations and proposed even Many Entire mann & one all the Esh newspotter to whatever to welve was as with seem and appreciated and as the abstract these was to the applicat with some titues produced and in the attention, then you do the exemple and finding how is a fixery of decomposity. The row of the 3 children has failed. The water product a minute of the service of the 4 children and abstract a minute of the product and abstract a service of the tentum of the service of dente of the first The faction and many, build it may receive a more bare than queens wept and made lamentation; how can I descri great a calamity? at the sound of their wailings. S itself grew sorrowfol and Endarance could no more ex-

Dohá 147.

Avadh was in a tumult at the sound of the outcry i king's palace: as when a cruel thunderbolt has fall night in some dense forest full of birds.

Chaupdi.

The breath of life flickered at the king's month, fo as a nanke robbed of its jewel; all his senses as h smitten as the lotuses in a lake that has been drained to water. When Kansulyá say the king's misery—the sur the solar roce setting as it were at noon—likama's mo summoned up courage and spoke in words belitting occasion: "Consider, my lord, and reflect that Rat exile is like the vast ocean, you are the belansman of good ship Avadh, and your friends are the merchasts, passengers; if you have courage you will get across: if the whole family will be drowned. Take to heart this treaty of mine, my spouse, and you will yet see ag. Rams, Lakehman and ôtis.

Dohá 148.

Hearing these tender words from his beloved, the kill opened his eyes and looked up, writhing like some haple fish when sprinkled with cold water.

Chaurdi.

The king with an effort sat up: "Tell me, Samaniwith the same of the same of

I The incident is when each bird allusion is been made is told at longth in the seasified flumpars, whereit occupies nearly 200 lines to day, when Dasarah was allife a youth, be was outshouther, and had fall may provide on men the bank of the fading, when he hope I to get a larder some tiper or buffils self-came down in the receipt, to the mine the region of the fall of the self-came in the earth of the self-came in the region of the self-came in the region of the self-came in the region of the self-came in the and he told the whole story to Kauvilya. As he related the circumstances his aglitation correaved: "Bertla as I am of Rima, I have done with His and hope: why should I chered a body that has failed to fulfill my love's engagement? Ah Righunandan, dearer to me than life, already I have lived too long without you. Ah Janaki and Lakhman Ah. Righbart the raincloud of a fond father's réda-disk heart."

75.34 149

Crying 'Rams, Rams, 'and again 'Rams' and yet once more 'Rams, Rams, Rams 'the king's cont bereft of Raghubar, quitted his body and entered heaven.

t hauf di-

This Dasarath respect his reward both in life and death, and his spoiles frame has spread through countiers cycles of creation. In life he was Rami's mono-like face, and dying for he lose had a glorious death. All the queens bewept him in an agony of geref, and spoke of his beauty, his smithility, his power and majesty. They make manifold immentation, throwing thermolers upon the ground again and again. Howeverants and main-servants saidy becommand him i and there was weeping in every home throughout the city: "Coday has set the van of the solar race, the perfection of justice, the treating of all good quantities." All revited Kankeys, who had reloked the world of its very eyes. In this manner the night was spot in lamentations till all the great said learned segar arrived.

P.34 150

Then the toly variethe recited many legends behiting the time, and checked their grief by the wisdom that be deplayed

i havyai

After things lost with of and patting the long a long in it, he removed messages and thus although them; "Resten with alt speci to Execut, and say nothing to any lody about the long, only not Patent when you arrive "The part has entirely one brothers." On processing the which enders, they are of at one with specifit the world yourself better of house. Done the them troubles had logical After the them, but you had end ones, he was facilities and he should be proceed the seasoning formed transfer as he should be not proceed to the seasoning formed.

all sorts of ill conjectures. He deily fasted Brahmaus at gave alms, and with fabrorate ritual poured water over it emblem of Malvides, and with heartfult prayers implore the god for the prosperity of his parents, his family and h brethere.

Dold 151.

In this state of anxiety was Bharat found by the herald on their arrival. As soon as he had heard his guru's commands he offered up a prayer to Ganes and started.

Chaupdi

They went with the speed of the wind, arging on their horses over vivers, rocks and trackless forests. So great was his distress of mind that nothing pleased him; he thought to himself. O that I had wings to fit! A moment seemed like a year. In this manner Bharat draw near to the city. On entering he was met by evil omens. Gruecome noises sounded in uncanny places, asses and jacksls uttered presages of III, which pierced him to the heart as he listened. Even the lakes and rivers, grores and gardens, seemed forlorn; while the city struck him as more melanchofy still. Birds, deer, horses and elephnits were painful to look at, as though the loss of Ráms were some dreadful disease that had destroyed them. The clitzers were as downcast as if they had all lost everything they had it he world.

Dohá 152.

The people who met him did not speak but bowed and passed on. For the fear and dismay in his mind Bharat could not ask ' Is all well?'

Chaupai.

The market places and streets were as dreary as though the city had been the proy of a general configuration. When kalkeyi beard of her son's approach, the moon of the lotuslike solar race rejoiced. She sprang up gladly and rae with lamp in hand and met him at the door and brought him in. Bharat saw all the household as woe-begone as a bed of lotuses when smitten by the frost, his mother as jubilar as a wild hill-woman who has set the forest in a blaze. Seeing her son sad and distressed, she asked. 'I sall well in my mother's house?' Bharat assured her that all was well, and then asked after the welfare of his own family: "Say, where is my father and where the other queen-mother? where is Sim and my dear brothers, Rama and Lakshman?"

Dohá 153.

On hearing her son's loving speech, the guilty woman's eyes filled with false tears, and she replied in words that pierced Bhaist's ears and soul:

Chaupdi.

"My son, I had arranged everything with the help of poor! Manthris, but Gol somebow spoilt my plan half-way. The king has gone to hearten." On hearing this Bharat was overcome with distress, like an elephant at the roar of a lion. Crying "My father, my father, aix, my father "he fell upon the groon of in grievous affiliction. "I could not see you ere you left, nor did you my father, commend me to Ráma." Again with an effort, he collected himself and got up; "Cell now mother, the case of my father's death." On hearing her son's words Kailkeyi replied, as one who drops poison into a wood, and with a glad heart, vile wretch that she was recounted all that the had done from the very beginning.

Dohá 154.

Bharat forgot his father's death when he heard of Ráma's banishment, and knowing himself to be the cause he was staggered and remained speechless.

Chaupdi.

Seeing her son's distress she comforted him, in such a manner as when one applies shall to a borin . The king, my boy, is no fit subject for lamentations received as the content and lived happily. In b' won glory and rewards, and in the end has c... Regard the matter in this it assume the sorreignty o' if the same the sorreignty o' if the same the sorreignty o' the same the same the same than the same that the same than th applied to himself he gave of us all ! if i market e constitue heith? After outling down a tree you water the branches and drain a pond to keep the fish alive.

Doke 155

Born of the solar race, with Dasarath for my father Itama and Lakshman for my brothers, I have had mother, for a mother, what can be done against Fate?

Chaupái.

Wretch! when you formed sech an avil design in y mind, how was it you heart did not breek in piece? Wyou asked the hoon, your soul felt no pain, your longue not burn, nor your mouth fester? How could the king it you? his hour of death had come, and Goh had robbed! of his sense. Not even find knows the ways of a wom leart; such a mine is it of all decit, crime and sin. I king was so simple, good and pions, what did he know woman's nature? Is there any living creature in the war who loves not Haghmath like himself? Yet he was yo special enemy. Tell me the truth, what are you. What were you may be you have blackened your own face; n hence out of my wight.

Dobd 156.

God has created me out of a womb hostile to Ráma who so guilty a wretch as I? hut it is useless for me to so anything to you."

Chaupdi.

When Satrughna heard of his mother's wickedness he burned all over, his sugger was beyond control. At that very moment Homphack came on, dressed out in fine attire and many jewels. On seeing her, Lakehman's young brother was filled with passion, ike fire upon which butter has been poured. He sprung forward and struck her such a blow on her hump that she fell flat on her face and screamed aloud. Her hump was smashed, her head split, her teeth broken and her morth streamed with blood. "Ah I my God! what harm have I done? this is an ill reward for all my services!" Then Satrughna, seeing her so all visit from head to lood, seized her by the hair of the head and began dragging her about, ill the mercilal Bharat rescued her. Both brothers then went to Kausslyfe.

Doha 157.

In sordid attire, pale, agitated, with wasted frame and soul apprest with woe, she seemed some lovely creeper or golden lotus smitten by the frost.

Chaupát.

When the queen saw Birarat the sprang up in baste, but fell awooning to the ground overetaken with goldiness. At this sight Barat was grievously distrest, and threw himself at her feet, forgetting his own condition: Hother, let me see my father, where is hits, and where Riams and Lashman, my two brothers? Why was Kwikeyi born into the world? or if horn, why was then to burren instead of bearing me to disperse the family, a very sink of infamy, the currend only home? Who in the third pipers is no currend only home? Who in the third pipers is not as the piper of the control of the care of all this is claimit; I Wee is me, a very first amongst the reads, fraught with intolerable torment, and thind and offence."

Dold 158.

Hearing Bharat speak so tenderly, his mother again took courage and arose and lifted him up and clasped him to her bosom, while she wiped the tears from his eyes.

Chaupdi

Simple and kind, also took him to her heart as lovingly as though Rims himself had come back. Then Lakhman's young brother was also embraced, while soul overflowed with sorrow and affection. All who witnessed her kindsensid? "She is lifama's mother, it is natural to her." Seating Bharatin her lap the wiped away her tears and said soolhingly; Now, my child, I adjure you to compose yourwill; reflect that the times are well and come to lamost, while the tear and said soolhingly; Now, my child, I adjure you to compose yourwill; reflect that the times are will said come to lamost, the contract of times and fast and execution; remember that the coarse of times and fast and execution; the coarse of time and fast and the coarse of time and fast of the coarse of time and the coarse of the coarse of time and the coarse of time and the coarse of tim

Deld 159

At his father's command Raghul is put aside his ornaments and ordinary attire and assumed the back draw without either d sway or explication.

Chaupái.

With a cheerful countenance and a soul anmoved by anger or attachment, he did all in his power to confort us. Sits hearing he was off to the forest, went too; in her derivant to Rama's feet she could not stay. Lashman slee, when he heard the news, ross up to accompany him, and for all Rama's persuasions would not remain behind. Then Raghupati bowed his head to all in turn and set out accompanied by Sits and his younger brother Rama, Lekthen nor sont my spirit after them. All this took place before yees, and yet—weetch that I am life did not leaven by body. I felt no shame, for all my love, with such a son, standard myself his mother. The king knew well the time to live and the time to die, but my heart is a hundred-fold barder than adamant.

Dohá 160.

Hearing Kausalya's words, Bharat and all the seraglio made woeful lamentation; the palace seemed the very home of affliction.

Choupdi.

Bharat, nay, both brothers, wept piteously. Kanselyá based them to her basom, and comforted Bharat in every way with words of excellent windom. With appropriate maxims from the Paránas and Vedas all the queen reasonal with Bharat. And he, pare, galieless and sincere, male fitting answer thus with clasped bands to The crime of elsyting father, mother or gare; of burning cows in their state of a city of Hrahman; the orime of murularing wife or child; of poisoning a friend or a king; every mortal venial sin, of thought, word and deed, as enumerated by the secre; may all these sins be mine. O God, if this, mother, was a plot of mine.

Doha 161.

May God award me the fate of those who forsike the feet of Hari and Hara and worship abominable demons, if, mother, this was any plot of mine.

Chaupdi

Those who sell the Veds and trade on plety; backliters, bo talk of others' faults the treacherous, the perverse, the sigious, the violent; the revilers of the Veds, the anemier of all creation; the coretous, the lecherons, the fichth, the locatiful, who covet their neighbors' wellth or their neighbors' wite; may I come to a like ill end with them il, mother, his plot hat my connect. The wretches who have no regard for the example of the good, who reject the way of wilvation, who worship not the incarantion of Hari and take no delight in the glory of Hari and Hara, who alsendon the path of Scripture and follows a contexty road, who by knavith digglies impose upon the world; may Saukara allot me a fate his the their if, mother, I know of this plot.

Chhand G.

Hearken, mother; in all my thoughts, word and deeds I am the alave of the Allemeroted. The omissionst Káma dwells in my heart and discerns perfectly letween trou affection and feigned. As he that spoke, his eyes streamed with tears, his body quirered, and his toes drew lines upon the ground. Again his mother took and clayes him to her boom, knowing him to be indeed a votars of Rimars.

Dohp 162.

Hearing Bharat's true and honest and generous words, his mother exclaimed: "Son, you have ever in thought, word and deed been Rama's friend

Chaup de

Riom is the very life of your life, and you are descentant life to him. The moon may drop poison, ice dutil fire, fish avoid water, a sage persist in f-lify; but you could never lecouse Riama somery. If any one in the world says this was of your contriving, he shall never even in his alsep have any peace or happinese. With these words his mother took Bharat to her arms while her because dropped until and her speak filled with tears. As they sat and made such long lamentation, the whole night was speak of says and was the contribution of the same and summoned all that Ministers and nobles and did everything to console Blarat by appropriate discourse on religious topic.

Dold 163.

" Son, take heart and perform the duties of the day."
Bharat arose as the gurn's command and ordered everything to be done.

I for the two words like, forward, it would seem preferable to read, belopseeded, it there were my manuscript to support it.

Chaupái.

As directed in the Veda, he had the body of the king washed and a sumptions four-al car prepared. Then claying the feet of each of the queens he hid them stay! They stayed in the hope of seeing Riams. Many loads of sandal wood and aloes were brought and immense quantities of sweetscented spices. The pile was raised on the bank of it Sarja likes afair ladder reaching to heaven. So all the rif of cremation were accomplished; the prescribed bathing to both the oblistion of sessmum seeds, the ceremony of the ten bal of rice, 2 which Bharat performed after due study of the Vedas, the Parians and the Code or Ritual. Whatever orde was given at any time by the great sage was thereope excepted accordingly a thousand times over. For his purification he gave abundant gifts; cows, horses, elephants, al. kinds of carriages.

Dohá 164.

Thrones, jewels, robes, grain, lands, money, and houses did Bharat take and present to the Brahmans: their every wish was gratified.

Chaupái.

All the ceremonies that Bharat performed on his father's account were more than a million tongues could tell. The came the great sages, after determining an ampicious day and summoned all the nobles and ministers, who were as st down in the royal connoil chamber, where they zent and summoned Bharat and his brother. Vasishths seated Bharat by his side addressed him in words fall of wirdom and piety. First the boly man repeated the whole history of Kaikeyi's monatrous doing and extolled the king for his piety and faithfulness to his promise, who by this death had manifested his love. As he spoke of Rāma's good qualities and amiable disposition the saint's eyes filled with tear and his body quivered with emotion. As he went on to tell of the affection shown by Lakshman and Sita, the saccetic sage was drowned in love and grief.

Dold 165.

[&]quot;Hearken, Bharat"—thus sadly spoke the prince of ! That is to any, he would not allow them to accend the funeral pile with the body of the king and period with him as fatts.

2 One ball is offered on the first day, two on the second, and so on the technique.

sages-" Fate is overstrong; loss and gain, life and death, honour and dishonour are in God's hands.

Chaupái.

Having so considered, why blame any one, or why be nagry with any without cause? Ponder this in your beart, my son; king Dasarsth is not to be pitied. Pitiable the Bráhnan who is ignorant of the Veds and has abundened his faith and become absorbed in the delights of sense; pitiable the king who knows not the principles of government and to whom his subjects sen not as dear as his som life; pitiable the merchant, muserly and rich, who regards not the duties of hospitality nor the service of Mahāder; pitiable the Sudra who insultsa Bráhman, who is boastful, ambitions and proud of his knowledge; pitiable again the wife who deceives her own husband, and who is perverse, quarreslaume and self-willed; pitiable the frigious stodent who breaks his vows and obeys not the commands of his gurre.

Dohá 166

Pitiable the householder who, overcome by delosion, forsakes the path of religion; pitiable the secetic who is enamoured of the world and has lost his judgment and selfgovernance;

Chaupái.

Pitiable the anchorite who has given up penance and takes delight in pleavure; pitiable the backbiter and the engry without a cause, the enemies of their own parents, their sprittant guide and their kinemen: pitiable in every way is the malevolent who cherishes self and is utterly merciles; pitiable in every way is how bo doer not exchang guide and become a follower of Harri; but the king of Korsia is not to be pitied; bis glory is spread abroad through the fourteen upbers. Their neither has been, nor is now, nor shall be bereafter, a king like your father, Bhart. Brahms, Vishus, Sire, Indra and all the Regents of the air sing the virtues of Danarath.

Doha 167.

Tell me, my sou, in what way can may one magnify bim, who has such noble sons as Rams, Lakshman, you and Satrughna?

Chandi.

The king is allogather fortunate; it is vain to Isment on his account. Thus bearing and considering, cases from grief; al-aliently exhant to the rayal community. The king has given you the throne, and you must need fallily your father's word. The monarch who fur the eaks of his word abandone! It times thought in the anguish of separation for Illiams he least his life, and then held his word desare this life, is a father, my son, whose word must be obsyed. By your head to the rayal commond; it will be in sergy may your good. Parsvariam, to obey his father's order, slow how motifier, as all the world bears witness; and Xayát son gure him up his youth; it in a father's order there or be no nin nor dustrace.

Dala 168.

They who cherish their lather's words, without discouing right or wrong, they are result of honour and glory and dwell in the palace of the king of heaven.

Ch tupdi.

You must certainly make good the king's word; charist pour subjects and cease to grieve. He will receive confort in beaven: for you it will be a merit and honour, and no fault. It is laid down in the Veda, and approved by all men, that he takes the crown to whom the father gires it. Reign then, nor further distress yourself, but accept my advice as the best for you. Riams and Six will rejoice when they her of it and no wise man will call it wrong. Kausalyá and all the queens will be happy in the happiness of the people. Riams knows your secret thoughts and will take it quite in

I The legend of Xyyati as thus given in the Vibbane Frains. IV, 10:3—
It was the second so not king Sababha, and sacceled to his fixed throne. He had two wives, Derayhon, the desghter of Canasa (tho only distribution), the proception of the Dairyan, and Sarainstoned by Tasain, whose describer had complained to him of her bunband is indicately. The same whose describer had complained to him of her bunband is indicately, he became to assure the same through the same through the same through the tensor any the same through the same through the same through the tensor any through the same request of his office and of the same that when he made the same request of his office and proceed dominant that when he made the same request of his office and proceed dominant for the same through the same transport of the fifth and proceeds the faither's definitive. After some press of enjoyment Lyayli beneatly withdraw hermalogs in the wood and reagond the throne to Care, whom he specified hermalogs in the wood and reagond the throne to Care, whom he specified hermalogs in the wood and reagond the throne to Care, whom he specified to hermalogs in the wood and reagond the throne to Care, whom he specified to hermalogs in the wood and reagond the throne to Care, when he specified to hermalogs in the wood and the wood in annual has deliver themselves the recently inside good part; on his return you can deliver up the throne and serve him with cheerful affection."

Doha 169.

The ministers with clasped hands exclaimed: "You must needs obey your guru's command: when Raghupati eturns, you can then do as shall seem good."

Chaupái.

Kauszlyá took courage and cried : "My son, you have our father's and your guru's commands, which you must espect and affectionately carry out. Cease to lament, knowng it to be the will of Fate that Rana is in banishment, the ing in heaven, and you in such perplexity. You, my son," ontlined his mother, " are the sole refuge of your family, our people and the ministers of state Seeing God against s and the fates untoward, summon up resolution. I, your other, adjure you, obediently comply with your guru's mmand : cherish your people, relieve the affliction of your mily." The guru's speech and the ministers' approval had en as grateful to Bharat's hearing as sandal perfumes. but hen be heard his mother's tender appeal fraught with the

Chhand 7.

When he heard his mother's pathetic appeal, Bharat was ercome; his lotus eyes rained with tears that bedewed the sh shoots of desolation in his soul. All who then beheld his dition entirely forgot about themselves-ab, Tulsi !-I reverently extolled him as the very perfection of true

Soratha 6.

Clasping his lotus bands, Bharat, the champion of honour, itly made answer to them all in noble words that seemed Chaupdi.

"The gorn has given me good advice, which has been roved by ministers, people, and all. My mother, too, has in me proper commands, and I must needs bow and obey, injunctions of a guru, a father or mother, or master, or id, should be cheerfully performed as soon as heard, and If for the best ; to deliberate whether they are right or ng is a failure of duty and involves grievous sin. You have now given me honest advice, which it will be good me to follow; yet, though I understand this clearly, soul is still discontent. Hearken them to my prayer, according to my circomstances so instruct me, forgi my presumption in answering you: when a man it distress good people do not recken up his merits and merits.

Doka 170,

My father is in heaven, and Sita and Rama in exile, a you tell to be king; is it my gain or your own advant that you expect to result from this?

Chaupái.

My gain is to serve Situ's ford, and of this I have be robbed by my mother's wickedness. After reflecting a searching my thoughts I flod no other way of happiness this. Of what account is a throne with all its cores, if I ca not see the feet of Lakshman, Ráma and Sita? Vithe clothes a mass of jewels is of no use; of no nes is ascelicis without divine meditation; of no use is an enjoyment to diseased body; prayer and penance go for acaght without faith in Hari; without life, heavy of body is nought; as all is nought to me without Ráma. Permit me to join Ráma this is now mot is my only happiness. If agoi in makis; me king it is your own advanture that you desire, you aperl under the infleence of fogish's flection.

Dohá 171.

In your infatuation you hope for happiness from the reign of such a wretch as I, Kaikeyi's son, of wicked nature, Rama's enemy, and lost to shame.

Chaupái.

I speak the truth; hearken all and believe; in a king required a righteons disposition. If you permits in giring the crown to me, earth will sink into hell. What gollly wretch is equal to me, for whom Sita and Rāma have beer selled? The king banished Rām, but dide in loving his. I, the miserable cause of all this wrongdoing, sit and little to it all unmoved. I see the palace with no Rāma thee, yet live to andure the world's jeers. Holy Rāma secher all pleasures of sease, and I, a greedy king, an hangering after enjoyment. In what words can I tell the hardness of my heart, which sergasses erre adamant?

Doba 172.

That every result is harder than its cause is no fault of mine; the thunderbolt is harder than bonet, and iron more still and unbending than the rock from which it is quarried.

Chauf ás.

If my worthers life can cling to a body born or Kaikey, it will have a surfact of meers: it, bereaved of my beloved, life is still does to me, I shall have much bereafter to see and bear. Kaikeyi has basuched Lakshmon Riams and Site and for her own airstangs he seamed the death of the king; the has taken upon berself valowhood and disprace and has caused the people sorrow and affinition, has allotted me glory and henour and domitson and has settled every body's business. What good is thus more to me? and yet you to cry out to make me a king 1 have been born into the world from Kaikeyi's womb, and all thus is only my doe; Odd has Iushioned all my deritor, but why should my people combine to give a being hand?

Doks 173.

Stricken as I am by fate, overcome by organic disease, 2 and then stung by a scorpion, you give me wine to drink : tell me, tell me what kind of treatment is this?

Charge

The wise Creator has ordained for me everything that before a not fixing: I that make the same the conbefore a not fixing: I that make the same the condupon me to no perpers. You all tell me to allow myself to be crowned for kingly sower is desired by all men, then and whom shall sowers? You talk at rantom as the fancy takes you. Apart from myself and my unhappy matter, talk my how will say that I have ancet rightly? a copying myself, who also is there in the whole assume to or imminute everstom that does not love bits and line as they

I The expedictual to past to be made from the trans of the fact list. Built-11, but detected from the made to the transit to death to refer the transit of the series of the series with a seen against size habitary depart, for a town the series commended with a seen against size habitary departs, for a town the series are series of the s

2 Arrending for Monte plansingue all yet in the boston of freeze are at these delegance extended the 52 and the least, depths belongs, at all the least, depths belongs, at all and 3 monte belongs and the least to the least to own life? That a universal culturity should be my great gain, this is my illifortune and no blame to any one. You are moved by anxiety, kindness and affection, and anything you say is all for the lest.

Dobd 174.

Iláma's mother is so utterly guileless and bears me such great love that she speaks from natural amiability, on seeing my remorse.

Chauf4i.

The guru, as all the world knows, is an ocean of wisdom, and the universe is like a plum in the prim of his hand. If too is making ready for my orneation; when Got is against me, every one is against me. Except Râms and Sita there is not any one in the whole world who will not asy this was a scheme of mine, and I must listen and bear it patiently: wherever there is water, there at last will be mud. I am not alraid of the world culling me vile; it have no thought for leaven: the one great intolerable anguish of soul is this that through me Sita and Râms have been rendered unhappy. Well has Lekshman respect his life's reward who left will not all the sum of Râms's banishment. Wretch that I am, why thes lament in view of Râms's banishment. Wretch that I am, why thus

Dold 175.

I declare before you all my grievous distress; unless I see Rama's feet, the fire in my soul cannot be quenched.

Chaupdi.

No other remedy can I discover: without Ragbular who are I for life? This wish alone is stamped upon my soul; at daybreak let me follow my lord. Although I am a guilty wretch, and all his trouble is on my account, still when he sees my suppliant mein he will in his great merey forgive me all. Regburáo is so meck and utierly guileless of disposition, such a home of mercy and tenderness, that he would never it-jure even an enemy: while I, had as I sm. am his son and hisservant. Be pleased, sirs, then to give me your bleasing and permit me to depart, knowing it to be for my good; so Ráma will come again to his kingdom, after hearing my prayers and considering my develon.

Dohé 176.

Though born of a wicked mother, and myself evil and ever doing wrong, still I am confident of Raghobir that he will know me for his own, and not abandon me."

Chaupái.

Bharat's words pleased all. imbund as they were with the nectar of piety. The people seffering from the baneful poison of separation revived as if at the sound of a bealing charm. The queen-mothers, the ministers, the gura and all the men and women in the city were agilated by the vehrence of their affection and kept on villing Bharat's praises: 'His body is the very personification of devotion to Ráma; ab, my lord Bharat, how can we say otherwise, seeing that Rams is as precious to you as your life? If any churl in his folly ascribe to you your mother's sin, the wretch, with all who are his from generation to generation, shall have their abode in hell for hundreds of ages. The jewel is not infected with the guit and villany of the errpent (in whose head it is found), but is an antidote to poison and sabduce yain and powerty.

Dohd 177.

By all means let us follow Rama to the wood; Bharat has given good advice; sinking as we all were in an ocean of despair, you have held out help to us?

Chaupat.

There was as great joy in the hearts of all as when the chiefed and quench hear the sound of thunder. To start to comorow seemed an excellent resolution; Bharat; was to revery one dear as his own file. After reverencing the sage and bowing the head to Bharat; they all took leave and went to their several homes, praising as they went its filtestimate disposition, whose life was a blessing to the whole world. Exclaiming to one another, what a glorious idea! 'they all went to make their preparations. Whoever was left with orders to keep watch at home felt: if like his desth-dricke, and one would cry: "No one ought to be told to stay; who does not desire life's but reward!

Dohá 178.

Perish property, house, fortune, friends, parents, kinsmen and all, that does not help to bring one to Ráma."

Chaufdi.

In every house carelages of all kinds were making resignand the start to-marrow was a heart-felt joy. Bhrast peadered on going home: The city, with this fores, elephan palaces and treavories, and all its wealth. Is Rama's. It recklestly go and leave it, in the end it will not be good for it in its peader of the contract of the contr

Dohd 179.

Understanding the ways of love, he sympathized with a mother's anxi-ty and ordered to be got ready convenient palanquins and seated carriages.

Chaupdi.

The men and women of the city like the chakea and chakei were anxious at heart for the dwar, when they might start. The whole night had been spent in watching, when Bharat summoned his wise couns-tiors and asid to them: "Take all materials for the coronation, and there is the forest, sirs, lowest Rama with the soverignty start at once." At his word they howed and specify made ready horees, carriages and elephants. The king of ages (Vasishal first mounted his chariot and led the way with his spouse Arandhati and all the materials for sacrifice. A host of Brahmous renowned for their ascelidism, followed in weblicles of different kinds, and next the citizens on their own conveyances all set forth for Chitra-kint. The elegance of the palanquins in which the different Ránis were sested is beyond description.

Doka 180.

After making over the city to his faithful servants and ceremoniously starting the procession, Bharat himself with his brother started too, his thoughts fixed on Rams and Sita.

[!] Dohai here would seem to be not for duhai, i lamentation, but for droha, 'injury,'

Chaupái.

All the peaple were as eager for a 'sight of Ráma as whon a here of slephants makes a vals for a stream. Headering within themselves that Sits and Ráma were in axial, Bhrest and this brother wert on foot. The people were moved by their affection and themselves diamounted and left heres, elephants and carriages. But Háma's mother stopped her palanquin by his side and softly said: "My not it entersty not to mount your chartot, or all your people will be sufferer; if you walk, they will all walk, and they are to wasted with sorrow what they are not fift for the form and they are to wasted with sorrow what they are not fift for the journey." Obdefient to her commands he howed his; head to be feet, and with his brother mounted the charlot. They halted the first day at the Tamasa, I and the second on the back of the (femali?

Doha 181.

Out of devotion to Ráma, some vowed to drink only water, some to est nothing but fruit, others to make only, one meal and that at night, and they forswore all luxuries of dress and food.

Chaupai,

After resting at the Sai's they started at dawn and drawn near to the city of Singayarea. When the Nithád heard the near he thought saily to himself: "For what reason is Bisrat going to the fores? I he has some with a bears. If he had no wrong intention, why should be bring an army with him? He thinks to kill Ráms and this brother, and then to reign in ease and security. Bharst has not taken to heart the maxims of sound polity; there was diagrace aiready, and now there will be less of life. If all this gods and demons were to combine to fight, they would 1 The Tanam. It dears coloured (more commonly seed Tonat ke.

branch of the Ghopra (the Sanskni Gharzhars, 'the roaning'), which leaves that river about 10 miles above Ayolbys, and after passing the town of Arangarh falls into the Gargi (Sarawa) 2. The Gonati [the name oreaning 'rich in cattle'] ruses us a lake near Pithibit, and after a course of 482 miles, in which it passes the cities of ² The Gomant (the name pleasing, 'free in cattle'; justs to a lake near Phibbit, and after a course of 483 miles, in which it passes the cities of Lakhnar, Solthapur and Janspur, tails into the Ganges.

3 The bat a river in Audh, which rases about midway between the Oomati and the Ganges, and after a course of some 230 miles falls not the former, 10 miles below the carry of Janupar.

4 The rate of the ancient Stingarers is marked by a milege bearing the

The Nicol (in ancient Stringards or washers of a ringst begring the same name, under the modernised form Sangraux, 2 miles to the north-west of Aliababad. The river has changed its course, and only a small branch now flows through the old chancel.

never conquer Ráma in battle. What wonder that Bharat should act thus; fruits of ambrosia do not grow from a poison stock."

Dold 182.

Having thus reflected, Guba cried to his kinsmen: "Be on the alert, up and sink the boat and close the ferry.

Chaupái.

Make ready and blockade the pass, equip yourselfs with every instrument of death. Take np arms gainst Bharat, and never let him cross the Ganges alive. To die in the battle and on the Ganges bank; in Ráma's cross to lay down this frail body; and mean as I am to join battle with a king like Bharat; all this is a great gain for me, wen if I meet my death. If I war and light on my lord's behalf, I reap brilliant renown throughout the fourteen spheres. If I lose my life for Raynaúth, I shall have both hands fall of Inscious sweets. Whoever is not numbered among the just, nor conside among Rhay's votaries, is all the time that he lives only a burden to earth, and an axe at the foot of the tree of his mother's youth.

Doh4 183.

The Nishad king thus fearlessly excited that ardour of his followers, and mindful of Rams called in haste for quiver and bow and coat of mail.

Chaupái.

"Hasten, brethren, to complete your equipment, and strength hearing my command let no one hesitate." All cherrefully responded, "Tis well, my lord," and mutually encouraged each other's zeal. Bowing again and again before the Nishidal all the gallant warriors, eager for the try, invoking the sandtle of Rism's lotus feet, girt themselves with quiver, elling on the bow, donned their coats of multiput helmet on head, and farbithed up are and bludgen and spear—some so expert in the use of sheld and sword this property of the strength of the

. .

Dohá 184.

"Do not play me false, my brethren; this is a great day's work for me." At this they cried with vehemence, "Fear not, captsin.

Chaupái.

By Rāma's favour and your might, my lord, we will leave the comey without a single fighting man or bores. While life last, we will never draw back our foot, and will make the earth our less p of corpses and skulls." When the Nishid lord had inspected his gallant band he cried "Best the dram for the onset." When he had so said, some one streeted on the left. The southsyers exchanged. "A prespectus issue to the battle?" One old man thought over the ones and said. "Bharat must be such, but there will be no highling. He is going to make entreaty to Rāma, the omen says thus; there will be no battle." On hereing this, Gha said: "The elder has spoken well; fools act in haste and respect. Unless wa accetain Bharat's temper and disposition, we may do ourselves harn by fighting without knowledge.

Doha 185.

Close up, my men, and stop the pass, and all join to discover the mystery. When we know whether he is a friend, an enemy, or a neutral, we can then by our place accordingly.

Chaupái.

We shall soon test his devotion and honest intent; hatred and love are not to be concealed. So sying, he began to make ready a present, and sent for holbs, roots and ferils, blirds and houst, with the finest of fish, large pathrat; which were brought by the fisheremen in basketsful. When verything was arranged they went out to meet him, and had the most anspicious onness of good fortune. As soon as he saw the great sage afar off, he declared his name and protrated himself before him. Varishtya, koowing him to be a friend of Raima's, gave him his blessing, and told Bhasta shout him. He, on heaving that he was Raima's friend, left his chariot and salvanced on foot to meet him with embersar affection. Ghas declared his home and race and name, and making obstance faid his forehead to the ground.

¹ The pathin is a kind of she fish, the Silaras Prioress or Boatis,

Dold 199.

Not Bharat, seeing him about to prostrate himself, took him to his bosom with as much uncontrollable raptore as though it were lakshman he had met.

Caburds.

Bharst receives him with the very greatest affection, and the people extelled the muner of his love. There was a fabilisatery of 'Glory, Glory,' as the gols applied and rained down flowers upon him. "Though this man is it every way vile, both by custom of the world and by scriptural prescription, so that contact with his shodow requires ablation, yet lâma's botther has enhursed him in his armand thilled all over with delight at meeting him. One who cries 'Blaima, Râma,' even in a yawn, a multitude of nin will not rise up against him. Here is one whom Râma had clasped to his bottom and thereby parified him and all his family. If water of the Karmańcz falls into the Grages, tell me who will refuse to reverence it? gazing, it is known throughout the world that Vâlmiki was male equal to Brahmá simply for repeating Hâm's name backwards.

Dold 187

Even a Chandál, 1 a Savara, a Khasiya, a stupid foreigner, an outcast, a Kol, or a Kirát, by repeating the name of Ráma becomes most holy and renowned throughout the world.

Chaupái.

It is no wooder, it has been so for ages; who is there whom Raghabir cannot exalt?" As the goods told the greatness of Ráma's name, the people of Aradh listened and were glad. Bharat affectionately greeted Ráma friend and saked him of his health and welfare. At the sight of Bharat's affectionate disposition, the Nishád was at once nitely overpowered; so great was his confusion, his loves and his.

I The word translated 'Chandia' is in the original Struppath Intentily's degeoober,' i. e., either one who feeds on dog't fieth, or who cosh food of the dog't a degal eyeler.' A Stream is will domentation to finding it is a salite of Klasse, a bill treat the Northern India.

The Committee of th delight, that he could only stand and stare at Bharat. Collecting, himself, be again embraced his feet and with clasped bands made this loving speech: "When I belieft his blessed lotter leaf 1 accounted myself blessed for ever. Now my lead, by your high favour my prosperty is secured for thousands of generations.

Dohd 188.

Reflecting on my past deeds and my descent and again considering the greatness of the Lord, any man in the world who adores not the feet of Raghubir must be under supernatural delasion.

Chaupdi.

Eslas, cowardly, low-minded and low-horn as I am, an utter outcast by the laws both of God and society; since the time that Râms took ane for his own, I have become the glory of the world." After witnessing his draviolon and hearing his granceful hemility. Lakshman's younger bruther next embraced him. Then the Nishád introduced himself by name and respectfully asluted the royal dames, who received him even as they would takshman and gave him their blessing: "May you live happily for millions of years" The clittens too were as glad to see him as if he had been Lakshman and crueft: "Here is one who has lived to some parpose; whom Râma's our brother has taken to his arms and embraced." When the Nishád herat them the way.

Doha 189.

At a signal all his attendants, having learnt their master's will, went on and made ready tents under the trees and rest-houses by the ponds, gardens and groves.

Chaupái.

When Bharat behold the city of Sringavers, he was overcome by emotion and was unnerved in every limb. As he leant upon the Nishel, it was as goodly a right as though embodied Hamility and Love had met together. In this manner Bharat with all his, army went to see the earth-purifying stream of the Ganges. As he made his obeience to the ford where Hanat had proceed, he was as entranced as though he had met Râms himself. The critrees howing low gased upon the divine stream with trapture, and sign bathing prayed with clasped hands; "May our love to Rümchandra's feet never grow less." Bharat exclaimed: "Thy sand, O Gangs, are the bestowers of all happines, the very cow of plenty to thy votaries: with folded hands! beg this boon, unalterable devotion to Sits and Riams!

Dolat 190.

When Bharat had thus bathed and knew that all his mothers had bathed too, he received the guru's permission and took them to their tents.

Chaupái.

Wherever the people had pitched their tents, Bharat took every care of them all After paying bossage to garra and obtaining his permission, the two brothers v to Rāma's mother. Then Bharat, after kissing their is with many tender phrases did reverence to all the que and having left them to the dutiful care of his broth went away with the Nishad, Handin-hand they went, body fainting with excess of love, as he begged his comming to show him the spot—that the ferce longing of eyes and soul might be a little assuaged—where Sita, Rā and Lakshman had spent the eight. As he spote, his spoverflowed with tears, and the Nishād in great distress his speech led him at once to the place.

Dola 191.

Where Raghubar had rested under the sacred sinsipa tre With great reverence and devotion Bharat prostrated himsel

Chaupái.

When he spied the delectable grassy couch, he sgis unde obeissnee and reverently paced round it. He propon his eyes the dust of the foot-priats, with an enths siams of devotion beyond all telling. And seeing two three golden spangles, he placed them upon his head a relice of Sita. With streaming eyes and aching bearth thus in gentle tones addressed his companion: "They are dim and lustreless through Sitis' absence, and all the people of Avada are equally went-begone. To whom can I compare her father, Janak, who was conversant at one with all life's pleasures and all philosophy? Her father law, the sun-like monarch of the solar race, we the any of even the lord of heaven. Her hosband is the below!

Ragbunath, by whose greatness slone it is that any one is great.

Doha 192.

I gaze on the couch of Sita, that devoted wife, that jewel of good women, and my heart breaks not with agitation; surely it is harder than a thunderbolt Chaupói.

Lakhman so young and comely and made to be foodled; never was there such a brother, one is there, no will be a so beloved by the people, the diviling of his father and mother, and dear as their own life to Bana and Sita; the picture of delicacy, the disinless of straylings, whose body has never been suposed to the hot wind, how can be bear the hard-ships of the forest Y O my beart woold shame for hardness a million thenderbolts! Likima at his birth was the light of the world, an ocean of beauty, of virtue, and all good qualities. Ráma's amichitut was the delight of his subjects, bis houvehold, his garut, has father and mother, and all. Erea enemies would praise Itâma: his courtesy of speech and manner stole every heart. Not a million Starsartis, not a bundred million Seshonigs could reckon up all my lord's princes.

Dohd 193

The image of bliss, the jewel of the family of Righu, the storehouse of all suspicious delights, slept on the ground on this littered grass: how wonderful are the ways of Providence?

Chaupdi.

Himm had never heard mention of pain, the king checished him like the tree of life, and day and night all him mothers Ruarded him as the expelles guard the eyes, and as a serpect Ruardet him passed in its head. And now he is rounning on foot through the woods, with nothing to est but wild roots and froits. A curren on the, Kaskeyt, root of all oveil, than two does my best beloved: carsed he my wretched self, that coesan of iniquity, on whose account all these exlamities have come to pass. God created me to disgrace my family, and my whiche mother has made one the rein of my lord." Hearing these words the Nishád affectionately implored him: "Why, my lord, make these vain haments? Ramis;

dear to you, and you are dear to Rams; even she is blameless; the blame rests with adverse fate.

Chhand 8.

The ways of solveres fate are crul; it has made your mother mad. That every night Rama again and again broke out into respectful praise of you. There is no one so dearly beloved by Rama as you. I declare this on oath a be assured that all will be well in the end, and take comfort op your soil.

Soratha 7.

Rama is omniscient, full of meckness, tenderness and compassion : of this make firm assurance in your heart; and come, take rest."

Chausdi.

Hearing his companion's speech he took comfort and with his thought directed to Righthic went to his tendement when the citizens were informed heary with wor lity on came to see. Having reverenly paced around, they make oberiance and oursed Knikey to their hearts content. Their cyres streamed with tears as they reproach the cruelty of fate. One would praise Bharat for his devotion, another would say the king had sown the greatest love; they reproached themselves and praised the Nishida' who can describe their agitation and distress I in this manner they all kept watch throughout the night and at daybreak began the passauge. First the guru was put on a fine handsom boat, and then all the queees on another boat newly boill. In an hour and a half all had crossed over; as they came to land Bharat took count of them all.

Dalid 194.

After performing his morning rites and reverencing his mother's feet and bowing the head to the guru, he sent the Nishads on ahead and started the host.

Chaupdi.

He made the Nishād king lead the van and started all the queens in their palsangains. He charged his younger brother with their escort, and made garn go with the Brāhmans He himself bowed reverently to the Gange, and Foreking Rāme, Sita and Lashman, set forth on tegs his his horse was led by the bridle. Agdin and again the faithful seventae cried: "He pleased, my lord, to monal your horse." "Rams," he answered, "has gone on foot, and are charlots, elephants and horses made for me? I knoold be right for me to walk on my head; a servant's work shoold siways be the hardest." When they saw his behaviour and heard his tender speech, all his servants melted away for pity.

Doká 195.

At the third watch of the day Bharat entered Prayag, crying 'O Rama, Sita; Rama, Sita! with irrepressible affection.

Chaupdi.

The blisters on his feet glistened like drops of dew on a lotten but. The whole company were distressed, when they heard that Bharat had made the day's march on foot. After ascertaining that all the people had bathed, he went and did homege to the threefold stream. All who had dipped in the particeloured flood gave alms and did homour to the Brahmans. As Bharat gazed on the commissing of the dark and white waves, his body throbbed with emotion and he clayed his hands in prayer: "O queen of the holy places, bounteons of every blessing, whose power is declared in the Vedas and renowned throughout the world, I shandon my proper calling and make myself a begar: is there anything so with that a man in dustress will not do it? As I know you to be all—wise and bensücent, accomplish the prayer of the yappliant.

Dohá 196.

Il crave not wealth nor religious merit, nor voluptuous dights, nor deliverance from transmigration; but only that in every new birth I may persevere in love to Ráms; this is the boon I beg, and nought else.

Chaupái.

Rima knows my wickedness; the people call me the roin of my lord and master; through your favour my my devotion to the feet of Sits and Rima increase more and received the result of th beloved endure through all tribulation." In answer to Bhars's speech there came a soft and anspicious roice from the midst of the Tribeni: "Son Bharst, you are altogether upright; your love to Ráma's feet is unfathomable; you distress yourself without cause; there is no one so dear to Ráma as you are."

Dohd 197.

As he heard the river's gracious speech, Bharat's bo quivered with heartfelt gladness; the heaven resound with shouts of applause, and the gods rained down flowers

Chaup4i.

The inhabitants of Prayag, sged anchorites and be students, householders and celibites, were all enrapture and said to one another as they met in groups: "Blassi affection and amisbility are thoroughly genoise." Sil bearing of Rama's many charming qualities, Bharat approached the great sint Blaradráj. When the saint sum prostate himself upon the ground, he looked upon him as his own good angel incarante, and ran and taise him up and took him to his arms and gave him the bestig he desired, and made him sit down. He bowed his head and sat, shrinking into the immost recesses of shaws-facedness; greatly distrest lest the saint should ask any question. Seeing his confusion the saint said: "Hearkee, Bharat; I have heard everything; God's doings are beyond our power.

Dokd 198

Be not distrest at heart by the thought of what your mother has done. Son, it is no fault of Kaikeyi's: it was Sarayrati who atole away her senses.

Chaurdi.

If you say thus, 'No one will excess me;' I reply. Scriptore and the practice of the world are both scriptore as authorities by the wine; and your glory, my son, will be song onsollied, while the Veda and cutobut be benouved, for every one admits that this it exceeding both to custom and the Veda that he takes that the whom his Tables gives it. The trainful king summered you to confer upon you the honour of severely not it higher duties. Ifkinn's bothsmost is amountous woog.

which the whole world is grieved to hear of: but the queen was demonted by the power of Fate, and in the end she has repented of the evil she has done. You are not be less in fault; wheever says you are is a vile and ignorant wretch. Had you reigned, it would have been on sio, and Ráma would have been pleased to hear of it.

Dola 199.

But now, Bhurut, you have done still better: your present purpose is exaction: devotion to the feet of Raghubur is the root of every blessing in the world.

Chaupai

This is your wealth and the very breath of your life; is there any case with good fortune egual to your? Nor, my san, is it strange that you should not thus; you are a son of Dynarath's and Riam's own brother. Hearken, Bharat, jan Raghopail's heart there is no one upon whom so much love is lavined as upon you. Lakshman, Rama and Sita are all most fond of you; they spent the whole night in your praises. I learnt their searct when they came here to Prayig to baths; they were overwhelmed with love for you. Kughubar has as great affection for you as a feel has for a life of pleasure. And this is no great credit to Rughurai, who chrishes all bis appliants and their km; while you, Bharat, as it seems to me, are the very incarnation of fore to him.

Dold 200.

That which seems a reproach! to you, Bharat, is a lesson to all of us; it is an event which mangurates a new flood of passionate devotion.

Changes.

Your glory, my son, is a newly created and profises moon; its lotses and particles are Rism's everant; it, ever tising and never sets, nor wanes to the world its heaven, but increase day by day; the three spheres, like the chalcus are exceedingly enamoured of it, and the sun of Rism's majesty never code it of replandors, but by day as well as night it is ever houstiful to all, and Kaikey's will deady cannot sclipse it. Full of the nective of devotion to Islam,

I Your disobetience to the makes of your mother and the commands of your given in relating to accept the three and unsullied by any stain for wrong done to the gurul, you are esturated with the nectar of faith, and have brought this nectar within the reach of the whole world. Ning Bhagiratha brought down the Ganges?, whose invocation is a mine of all prosperity; but Dasarath's virtues are past all telling; why say more? I he has no equal in the world.

Dolid 201.

Through his devotion and humility Ráma was made manifest, whom the eyes of Siva's heart are never wearied of beholding.

Chaupdi.

You have created an incomparable mono of glosy, in which for the figure of the hare is stamped lore to Rima. Cease, my son, from lamentation; you have found the philosopher's stone and yet fear poverly! Harken, Bharti tell not also have a stamped to the forest. I obtained a glorious reward for all my good dead when I beheld Rima, Sita and Lakbman; the freit of that fruit is the sight of you: Prayag and I are both highly favoured. Bharat, I congradulate you; you have achiered universal ranown." So saying the saint was overwhelmed with emotion. As they bearkened to his words, the whole assembly rejoiced; the gods applauded his goodness and in heaven and in Prayag; Bharat was lost in rapture at he sound.

I There is a popular legend that Vribaspati, the gurs of the gods, on one occasion when he returned from his bath in the Ganges, found his wife in the embraces of the Moon-god He was not able to sent the adulterer, but threw his drapping bathing robe at him and hit him to the face, thus causing the spots that are still to be seen there. Throughout this stanza Bharat's glory is compared to a newly created moon, which is in every respect superior to the ordinary moon which we see in the bearent The one sets and wanes, the other is always on the increase; the one main'y delights only lotuses and partridges, the other is the joy of Rama's faithful servants, the one shines only by night, the other by day as well; the one yields nectar, it is true, but none can get at it; the other is impregnated with the nectar of fatth, which is brought within the reach of all, the one is branded with the marks of Vrihaspati's indignation, the other is spotles; though Bharat too offended his garn by refusing to reign at his command, the one is stamped only with the figure of a hare [the man in the moon of European nurseries], the other is inscribed with love to Hama.

² Dhagaratha, the son of king Dhips, after althouand years speni is anticities, brought down the Garges from her are to earth, and with its virifying flood watered and restores, the state of the sixty thousand some of his press grant of the sixty of the state of the sixty thousand the state of the sixty thousand the sixty thousand the sixty thousand press are sixty of the sixt

Dohá 202.

With quivering body, with his heart full of Rams and Sita, and his lotus eyes flowing with tears, he bowed to the saintly assembly and thus spoke in faltering accepts:

Chaupdi.

"In a conclave of saints and in this so holy a place, truth must once she spacken; any oath is superfluous and vain if in such a spot I were to say snything Islae, no wind in such a spot I were to say snything Islae, no therefore I speak bonestly; Riam, too, knows the secrets of the heart. I am not givered for what my mucher has done, nor pained at heart test the world deem me caitiff. I have no dread of the loss of braven, no serow for my Islaer's death, whose good deeds and renows are glorious all the world over, who had such sons as takehum a nod Riam, and who, as soon as he lest itema dreep this fregite body; why make long moorancip for the king? Bell Riam, Lakubman and Sita, without shoes to their feet, in hermit's dress, as wandering from wood to wood;

Hohd 203.

Clad in deer-skins, feeding on wild fruits, sleeping on the ground on a litter of grass and leaves, under trees, ever exposed to the inclemency of cold and heat and rain and wind.

Chaupái.

This is the burning pain that is were convening my breast, so that I counter set by day nor eleep by night. For this one disease there is no remedy: I have searched in mind the whole world over. My mother's evil counter, the root of all calentity, like a carpeter Inhibated as use out of my advantage, made a handle of the ill-wood of Reseatment, and fixed the term of basishment as it were a horrible spell. To me she applied this infamous contriverse and has burted mo down in wide-spreading rain. These distants will case when likims returns to true in Arabi; there is no other remedy." When the sants heard Bharat's speech, they were glid and all gave him high praise: "Son, grisse not so corely: at the night of Rilams' lett all sorrow will pass ware."

Dold 204.

The great mints comforted him and said :: " He our welcome guest : accept such berbs and roots and fruits as we can offer, and be content."

Chaupdi.

On hearing the saints' words Bharat was trubled at beart: the time was not one for feasting, and yet he was very loth to d-eline. At lat, reflecting that a guru's command is imperative, he kissed his feet and replied with clasped hands: 'I must needs bow to your bebest, for this, my lord, is my highest duty.' The great saint was pleased at Bharat's words and called up all his trusty serrants: "An entertainment must be provided for Bharat: go and gather herbs, roots and fruits." They bowed the head and said 'Certainly, my lord,' and gladly set about each his own work. But the saint thought to himself: "I have invited a distinguished guest, who should be treated like a god," At his command Anima and the other good Fairies came: "What are your orders, muster, and we obey."

Dalat 205.

"Bharat and his brother and all their host are distrest by the loss of Rama; show them hospitality and ease them of their toil;" thus cheerily spoke the great saint.

Chaupdi.

The Fairies bowed to his commands and thought themselves most highly favoured, saying one to another I himselves indeed a guest beyond compare." Then histor the saint's feet, "To-day we will do such things that the whole of the king's party shall be plessed." So arpine, a number of such charming javilions were created, that the sigh of them. They were furnished with so much laury and myanifesure that the immortals label? them longingly. Menservants and mad-servants with every appliance were in attendance and gave their whole mind to their work. In an instant of time the Fascier completed all the arrangments though no desum of basen was ever so becalled. First the people were assigned their quarters, all bright and pleasant and in accordance with their taste.

Del4 204

Then, as the saint had ordered. Bhares and his family hat there assigned them, which actorished even the Pres're by their insgniferace; so great the power of the hills accessed genace.

Chaupdi.

When Bhorat beheld the saint's power, the cealms of all the rulers of the splace seem to him as trilles. The locative that had been prepared cannot be described; any philosopher would forget his self-restraint on seeing them. Thrones, concless, draper; and canopies; grozes and gardent; birds and hearts; sweet-scented flowers, fraits like nectar, and many a lake of limple water; with luscions food and drinks of innumerable kinds, to that the people were quite put out of condenance by what they saw, as though they had been ascetics. Each one had as it were his own caw of plenty and tree of paradise. Indra and Sachi grow covetous at the sight. The season, spring; the six soft, cool, and fragrant; all the great objects of the ready at hand; guitude, perfames, denotargiets and delights of every kind to charm and astonish the spectator.

Doha 207.

Affluence, like the chakert, and Bharat as her mate, by compulsion of the saint's order were prisoned together that night, as by a fewier, in the cage of the hermitage, till dawn broke.

Chaupa.

Then he hathed at the holy place and with his hoth bowed the head of the sage. Having sobnisively received his commands and biesting, he prestrated himself and made much supplication. Then taking guides well acquainted with the road, he set out resolutely for Chitracket; supported on the arm of litims a friend, he seemed, as he went, the very incarnation of Love. With no shoes and no shelter for his head, in the folithment of his loving row and his unterigonal integrity, he saked his companion for a history of the wanderings of Rüms, Sitts an I Lukhman. In southing accounts he told it. When he saw the tree where

I donoring to Hand belief the relevon of he female mate, the clakes, and donored for rect non-trained spectrum. Even though they may be expell tool top-reasonal contrained to the contrained contrained to the co

Rama had rested, his heart could not contain its emotion. At the sight of his condition, the gods rained down flowers, and the path that he trod grew smooth and pleasant.

Dold 208

"The clouds afford him shade and the air breathes soft and refreshingly: Rama's road was not thus, as it is now for library

Chaurdi.

All created things, whather living or lifeless, that are the Lord, or were seen by him, were rendered fit for relation, and the sight of Blarat has now healed them of the curse of transmigration! This is no great thing for Blarat, whom Rfam is mindful to remember. A single mention of the name of Rfam on earth makes a man safe and a saviour of others. But Blart is Rfam's beloved and own brother; why should he not bring a blessing on the read be treads? As saints, sages and hermits thus reasoned and gazed upon Blarat, they rejoiced at bear! Index was troubled by the sight of his power: "In the world things turn out well for the good and halfy for the bad." Then turning to his yeare (Vrihaspati), "Something must be done, sir, to prevent the meeting between Rfam and Blarat.

Dold 209

Rama is so modest and sympathetic, and Bharat such an ocean of affection; our scheme threatens to be spoilt; we must bestir ourselves and devise some new stratagem."

Chaupdi.

Hearing the speech, the teacher of the gods smilled, to find the thousand-eyed so blind, and said: "Leave tricks alone it will be all trouble in varies and proposed to the lord of deusion must recoil on the contriver. I lister fered once, knowing it was Riams's wish, but any under hand work now would notly do harm. Listen, O king; it is Riams's nature never to be angry at any sin against hier self, but whoever sins against one of his servanct it cost and the first of his grant was the servanct in the first of his water.

Vedas abound in such legends; Dorrásas! knows well this great trut in his character. And is there any one so faithful to Rams and Bharat, who is ever repeating Ráma's name and Ráma his?

Dold 210.

Think not, lord of the immortals, to injure any servant of Righubar's, unless you would suffer the prin of disgrace in this world, sorrow in the next, and a daily increasing barden of regret.

Chaupái.

Hearken to my advice, king of the gods: Rāma has the Regrested law for his servants; he is pleased at any service done to a servant, while comity to a servant is the height of comity himself. Although he is ever the same, without either passion or anger, and contracts ceither same or merit, wirten nor defect; and though he has made fats the normering of the universe, and every one has to taste the frait of his own actions, still be plays a travisions according as hearts are faithful or unfaithful. Though without attributes of form, illimitable and impossible, Raims has yielded to the love of his followers and taken a material form. He has always regarded the wishes of his servant, as the Vedes and Porfans and gods and saists bear witness. Knowing this, refrain from analytics and show fitting devotion.

Dohá 211.

Any worshipper of Rama is zealous for the good of others, sorrows, with the sorrowful, and is full of compassion; then fear not Bharat, O king, who is the crown of worshippers.

Chaupdi.

The lord is an ocean of truth and a well-wisher of the gods, and Bharat obeys his orders. You are troubled by your own selfishness; there is no fault in Bharat: it is a

I king Ambatha was devou workshipped Valund (with whan Blam there identified) and thereby grateful the product of the tracquite age Durrians, the host mobilerant of all the affilierant of Str. On some trivial Durrians, the host mobilerant of all the affilierant of Str. On some trivial Valun was ready a shared to second in a faithful followers and seen has figured once upon Durrians, which cheach but all forest the world and up into began and hosting for the strength of the detains on your part.! When the great god heard the words of the heavenly preceptor he got understanding and bis entirity passed away. In his for he rained down flowers and began to extel fiberat's good qualities. In this monore librant went on his way, while sinin and mages looked and praised. Whenever he sighed Ráma's name, it seemed like the bubbling over of love. Thunderbolts an istones milled at his words; as for the people, their emotion is beyond description. Encumping half-way, he came to the Jamusé, and as he gazed on its water his eyes filled with tears.

Dold 212.

As he and his retinue gazed on the lovely stream, the colour of Rama's body, he was plunged into a sea of desolation, till he climbed the boat of discretion.

Chaupdi.

That day he halted on the bank of the Jamuna, giving every one time for what they had to do. In the night baccomes from all the ghâts in greater number than could be counted. At daybreak all crossed in a single trip. The good service of Riam's companion pleased him greatly. After bathing and bowing to the river, he again set forth with the Nishida king and Sarteghna. First of all in his glorious car went the great saint, followed by all the royal host; after them the two brothers on foot; their dress, appared and ornaments all of the very simplest. With them their servants and friend and the minister's son, invoking Lakshman, Sits and Riam. Any spot wherever Riam had enamped or restell they lovingly solated.

Dol4 213.

At the news, the dwellers by the roadside left their household work and ran after them; seeing his form, they were overcome with love and joy and had their life's reward.

Chaupái.

Lovingly one said to another: "Friend, are they Rism and Lakshman, or not? In age, figure, complexion and beauty they are the same, does girl, and resemble them in an equally affectionate disposition. But their dress is not he same, friend, nor is Sits with them, and before them

I In the Sanskrit poem there is nothing that corresponds to this colloquy between Indra and Vribaspari. It is introduced by Tulgi Dasa pegon which to bang a theological exposition.

AYODHYA 315

marches a vast host of horse and foot, elephants and chariots. Nor are they glad of constienance, but have some sorrow at heart: from this difference, freed, a doubt arises." The women were persauded by her arguments and crief: "There is no one so clever as you." After praising her and admiring the truth of her romarks, another women epoke in winning tones, and lovingly related the whole history, how Rams had lost the delights of empire; and again set to praising Bharat for his affectionate disposition and happy matter.

Tiohd 214

"He travels on foot, feeding only on wild fruits, and abandoning the crown given him by his father, is going to Ráma to persuade him to return; is there any one at the present day like Bharat?

Chaupái.

To tell and hear of Bharat's brotherly devotion and his course of action dispels all sin and sorrow. Anything that I can say, friend, is all too little; be is Ráma's brother; bow could he be different from what he is? All of us who have seen him and Satreghna have truly become blessed among women." Hearing bis virtness and seeing his forlorn state they lamented; 'He is not a fit son for such a mother as Kaitesji.' the said : 'It is no blame to the queen that God has been so kind to as. What are we, outcast from the world and the Yedz, women of low birth and mean livelihood, whose home is a wretched havel in some por village of this misrable country, that we should have such a vision, a sufficient reward for the highest religious merit?" There was the same delight and wonder in every town, as though the tree of paradise had prompt up in the depend

Dohd 215.

At the sight of Bharat, the good fortune of the people by the wayside manifested itself in like manner, as though by the will of providence Prayag had been made accessible to the people of Lanks.

Chaupai.

Hearing these praises of his own and Rama's many virtues, he went on his way, ever mindful of Raghunath. Whenever he spied any holy place, or hermitage, or temple, he fessiond and reservatly salated it, praying in his heart of hearts for this one hoon, preservance in devotion to the feat of Site and Itams. If these met him a Kirst, or Kol, or other dweller in the woods, anchorite or stodest, hermit as accesse, whoever he might be, he salated him and after in what part of the lowest were Lakshman, Rima and the Videlan prisones. They told him mill the news of the lord, and at the sight of Bhavat respect their hele seward in any person and Wie have seen them well, they were counted a stear as Itams and Lakshman themsires, the this manner asking countened of creep one, he heard the whole story of Itams's forces iffe.

Dohd 215.

Halting that day, Bharat started again at dawn, invoking Raghunath : all who were with him being equally desirous with himself for a sight of Rama.

Chaurdi.

Every one had asspicious omens jucky throbbings in the eyes and arm; Bharat and the host rejoiced, "Blama Will be found and our sore distress will be at an end." Each indulged his own Isany, and as they marched all seemed intozated with the wine of love, their limit relaxed, their fert unsteady on the ground, and the accents of their voice in articulate from excess of emotion. Then was the time that Ráma's guide pointed out the monarch of mountains in all its beauty, near which on the river's lank the two beroes and Sita were dwelling. All at the sight fell to the ground with ories of 'Glory to Ráma, the life of Jánaki!' The royal host was as overwhelm-II with emotion as though Ráma had come hack to Avadab.

Dohd 217.

Bharat's love at that time was such that not Seshuag could describe it; it is as far beyond the poet as the bliss of heaven is beyond a man stained by selfishness and sensuality.

Chaupái.

Being all unmanned by their love for Raghabar, they had gone but two kas by the close of day, then scanning land and water they halted. When the night was past, the beloved of Raghanath sallied forth again. On the other hand Ráma white it was yet dark, awoke, and Site told him which she had seen in a dream: "Methought Bharat had come with an army, being tortared in body by the fever of separative from his load; all were sad, wretched and downcat; and the guerns connort were greatly altered. On beeing State dream, his healer of sorrows grow sorrowal and his eyes filled with tears: "This dream, Lakebana, bodes no good it we shall hear of something that we by no means wished." So saying, he and his brother bathed, worshipped Parári and projusted the sample.

Chhand 9.

After propitisting the gods and reverencing the saints, the bord went and sat down with his gaze to the north. The dast in the air and the many birds and deer taking to flight dispoieted his and he returned to the hermitage. He stood up and looked, anxious in mind as to the cause. Then came Kirists and Kols and told him all the news.

Soratha 7.

When he heard the glad tidings his heart was full of joy and his body quivered all over: white his eyes, like the autumnal lotes, were filled with the moisture of affection.

Chaupái.

Again Sita's lord became anxious: "What can be the cause of Baara's coming? Then came one and said: "Three is with him no small even jet loll equipment.' Hearing this, Ráma was greatly disturbed; on the one hand was his Lather's injunction, on the other his regard for his brother. Thinking to himself over Bharat's disposition, the lord's mind found no sure standing-point; but at last he caused himself with the reflection: Bharat is said to be good and seasible. Lakhaman saw that his lord was troubled at heart, and spoke out as he thought the occasion demanded: "I speak, sire, before I am asked but sometimes impertience in a servant is not impertience, but I say what I thick.

Dohd 218.

You, my lord, are kind and easy, a storehouse of amiability; you love and trust every one, and think them all like yourself.

Chaupsii.

A worldly man, who has got power, becomes mad and infatuated and so betrays himself. Bharat was well-taught, good and clever, and, as every one knew, was devoted to he lord's feet; but now that he has become king, he bresh down in his course all the bounds of date. A wickel and ill-disposed brother having spied out his time, and knowing that Riam is, alone in the forest, he has taken evil consert and equipt an army, and has come to make his sovereignly secure. After plotting all norts of wicked scheme, the level of the security of th

The Moon-god debenched his gene's wife; Nahudmounted a palanquin house by Brahmana; and who fell a low as Vena, the enemy of established usage and the Vela?

Champal.

Saharra-habu, Indra, Trisanku; all were brought to disgrace by the intoxication of kingly power! Bharat has planned this clover whome, so as not to leave himself a

The profit of a record to the processing the boar interted by the freeness as at familiar physical press major. Define in the profit live gal, who is the first masses of process which are some approximational intertes? Consequent, of the fact of the standard of the same appeal in the first of the planet Memory. The time appeal areas in the consists in market at matter data the standard in the same appeal is the same and the same appeal is the same matter of the same appeal is the same appeal is the same and the same appeal is the same appe described was the province of the special contracts of source of the following districts of the special contracts of the single nemy in the field; but in one point he has made a mistack, indipting Ráma as if he had no friends; he will discover this to-day with a vengeance, when he sees Radia's indignant face in the battle." So saying he forgot all prodence, and his whole body, so to speak, bustled with pagmetity. Falling at his lord's fret sud potting the dast of them upon his head, he cried in tones of natural and honest reherence: "My lord, think is not wrong of me; Blarat has tried me not a sittle; how long shall I ender to remain quiet, my lord bring with me and my bow in my hand?

The State of the court of the c

Experience of the control of the con

Dohá 220.

Am I not of warrior descent, a scion of the house of Raghu, and known throughout the world as Ráma's brother? What is so low as the dust? Yet if stirred by a kick it rises and fails upon your bead.

Chaupa.

As he stood with clasped hands and sought permission, be seemed like Heroism itself aroused from slamber, binding up his hair in a knot, girding on his quiver by his side, followed after Kattayers and on of he, thousand are and slew line. The hing's some, to average their father's death, attacked Jameslage; in this berwitage; and in consequence of this, Parasuram made his famous yow to exificate the whole hishatriva race

ISDBs, the king of degrees, became enamoned of Abulya, the wife of the age-handman, and reprod for risquired as the husband. The page saw thin as to left her room and correct him with perpetual loss of willing, Adalya was changed into a stone till finate should come and deliver ber, we likel, i. pp. 51, 145.

This MKW was a king of Ayothya, who is his prode aspered to orlobate a great searching and by the most autout to beseed a person. He that the United Visualities to conduct the correctionary — but the against new through the notifiers and refused than the three applied to Visualitation and the three applied to Visualitation and the three three

I The general meaning of the passage would seem to be . Sharat has free such provocation that the meanest creative in the world would resent it is much more should I, who see a warrior by birth trimming his bow, and taking arrows in hand. "Tood I shall distingaish myself as Itäma's servant and will gir Bharat a lesson in fighting. Resping the fruit of their contempt for Itäma. both brothers shall sleep on the conce of battle. It is well that the whole hast has come; to-day I shall manifest my wrath and have done with it. Iion tears in pieces a herd of elephants, or as a I clatches and carries off a quall, so will I lightly overil upon the field Bharat and his brother and all their I If Siva himself should come to their sid, in Ráma's nar would worst him in battle.

Dohd 221.

Lakshman spoke so furiously that the regents of spheres, beholding and hearing his solemn oath, looked in terror and longed to flee away.

Chaupdi

The world was outranced: a voice was heard in the is declaring the mighty power of Lakshmun's arm ". Son, et an tell, or who can auterstand your might and majesty? I amy business, whether right or wrong, should be done of beretely; is orvery one agrees. They who act rashly and it terwards repent, the Velas say are anything but wise." bearing this voice from heaven Lakshman was abashed, a both Rama and Sitn addressed him consteously: "Whyou have said, brother, is cond wisdom: the intoxication power is the worst of all the merest taste of it maddens at king who has not been trained in the school of philosoph; But hearken, Lakshman: in the whole of God's creation have carer seen nor heard of any one so god as Bharat.

Dohá 222.

He would never be intoxicated with power, even though he sat upon the throne of Brahma, Vishnu and Sira What! can a few drops of kdaji curdle the milky ocean?

Chaupdi.

The sun may grow dim at middy; yea, sooner may the pure ether be absorbed in cloud; sooner may Agastyal be drowned in the pudile of a cow's footprint, or ertif forget to be long-antiering; sooner may the bast of a mosquito pai ways Mount Mero, than kigly pride, my brother, touch Bharat. O Lokehman, I swear by you and by our father there is none so two a brother as Bharat. The Gerator has tashioned the world by mixing the milk of goodness with the water of evil; Bharat is the swan in the lake of the Solar race, who from the day of his birth has known to distinguish between the good end the evil; choosing the milk of goodness and disaurding the water of evil, he has illumined the whole world with his glory. As Raghurát thus recible Bharat's virtues and amiable disposition, he became drowned in a sen of love.

Doh4 223

The gods, hearing his speech and seeing his affection for Bharat, all applauded Rama, saying: "Who so compassionate as the Lord?

Chaupái.

If Bharsh had not been born into the world, who was there on earth to be the champion of all right? Bharch good qualities are more than all the poets could describe; who save you, Reghunish, could comprehend then?" When Lakhbusn, Ráma and Sita heard these words of the goods they were more glid than can be told. Now Bharsh and all his host bathed in the sacred Mandákini. Then leaving the people on the bask and having asked permission from his mother, his guru and the Minister, he set out to vitif Sita and Ragharfai with the Nibáda king and his brother. As he thought upon his mother's deeds he was abashed, and formed a thousand ill conjectures to his initia! "What if Ráma, Lakhhana and Sita, on hearing my name, should leave the places and go elsewbare?"

Doha 224.

Taking me to be my mother's accomplice, nothing that he might do would be too much If, again, he overlooks my sin and folly, and receives me kindly as his well-wisher;

Chaupái.

Whether he spurms me as a black-hearted wretch, of welcomes me as his servant, my only reduge is at Rima's feet; he is the best of matters, the fault is all his servants. The eldate and the fifth are celebrated throughout the world for the thoroughness and constancy of their rows of love. With these thoughts in his mide he west on his way, his whole body rendered powerless by excessive love and trepidation; his mother's six, as it were, turning him back, while his his mother's six, as it were, turning him back, while his strong faith, like some sturdy bull, dragged him forv Whenever he thought of Ránn's good nature, his feet as writty along the way; his course was like that of a w. fly curried about by the stream. Seeing Bharst's and and affection, the Nishd was transported out of himself.

Dohá 225.

Auspicious omens began to occur, and the Nishid a hearing them and making a calculation said: "Sorrow pass away, joy will succeed; but in the end there will distress again."

Chaupdi.

Knowing his servant's words to be all true, he went and draw near to the hermitige. When Bharat saw the woods and rocks, he was as glad as a hungry wretch getting a good meal. Like people afflicted by every cale ty!, worn out with troublest; ill fortuce and pestile who rejoice on escaping to a prosperous and well-goven country, so were Bharat's feelings. The forest where like dwelt was as bright and happy as people are happy whave got a good king; with Ascelicism for King Widdo Minister of State; with the beautiful and secred groves his realm; with Continence and Entheluess for chample and the rocks for his capital; with Paces and Good will his virtuous and lovely queens; a king perfect at all pelot a suppliant at Kinaw's feet, and therefore sey in mind.

Dohá 226.

Itoyal Wisdom, having conquered King Delusion with his host, held undisputed sway in his capital: all was jo happiness, and prosperity.

Chaupái.

The frequent bermits' cells about the woods ward because a descriptions were his lumerative tempy hinds as beasts of all descriptions were his lumerative subject. The hares, elephants, hoors, tigers, bears, befilers workers, a wooder to behold, forgetting their antiquities graard together, like a duly marabilled army complete is all its parts. The roar of the mountain torrests soft the

I Public ralamilies, or visitations of God, iti, are rectoned as serial number, rec. drugghts, diode, locusts, rate, parries, systemy, and lovades

² Franke (top) to of three kinds, specified in Book VII, Dabé 21 a darkida, derrake, and blantika, physical and spiritual cries of mad elephants were like the du of kettle drams; the chakvat, chakvar, chidake, perrots and cuckous made a delightful concert; swans were in their giory; the bees burned and the peacocks danced like the festive encourage of some Rája, while the creepers, trees and grasses, with the flowers and fruits, formed his brillant control

Daha 227.

Beholding the beauty of Rama's hill, Bharat's heart was overpowered with love, like as an ascetic is overjoyed when he completes his yow and reaps the fruit of his penance.

Chaurds.

Then the pilot mounted a height and reaching out his hand oried to Birnat: "See, my lord, those bage trees pidar, jóman, mango and tamdid, in the midst of which is compicious a far tree, so beautiful and grand that the soil is charmed at the sight, with dense dark shoots and red freit, affording a pleasant shade in all seasons of the year, a mass of black and purple, as if God had brought together all that was drowly to make it. Under this tree, near the riter, sir, where Ikims has roofed in his sylvan hat, are many greeful shrates of floid, planted, some by Sirks 10nd and some by Lakshman, and in the shade of the bar tree Situ with her own jote hand has rearred a chroning altar.

Dohá 228

There the well-instructed Sita and Rama are ever wont to sit in the midst of the hermits, listening while sacred legends are read and all the Vedas, Shistras and Puransa,"

Chaupdi

As he listened to his friend's speech and graced upon the tree, Bharat's spea overflowed with teven. The two brothers advanced reservedity; i. Strada's would fail to do justice to their low. When they saw the prince of Ridmickett they rejoiced like some beggar on finding the philosepher's stone, and applied the doubt to their head, heart and eyes, with as much delight as if they had found Rimm himself. Seeing Bhrata's atterfy indescribable condition, bride, beats and all created hings, whether admate, or instinute, were absorbed in deviation. The guide in his excitament to the way, but the gods showed it to him and rained down flowers. Saints and sages gazed in rapture and burst out into praises of his sincere affection: 'Who in all the world is like Bharat, who makes fools wise and the wise fools?'

¹ The Pakriathe Ficus renns the fames, the Everts jambiana, the familia, the Xanthochymus (letotius the ber, or bunyan, the Fires Engalena .

Dold 229.

Raghu-bir, the ocean of compassion, after churning the depths of Bharat's soul with the Mount Mera of beresrement, brought out from it the nectar of love.

Chaupdi.

The two fair brothers and their guide were not visible to Lakshman, by resson of the dense shade of the forest; but Bharat could see his lord's scored bermitage, the charming home of everything delightful. As he entered it his borning grief was nessaged, as when an ascetic is rewarded with salvation. He saw before him Lakshman affectionstely conversing with his lord, his him lastened in a knot, a hermit's robe girt about his loine, his quiver slung, across in his hand, and his bow on his shoulder. By the altar an assembly of saints and sages, among whom Sits and Rams were comprisenous in hermit's attire, with matted hair and body darkened by exposure; like Rati and Kamadera in saint's digguise. He, who with one smiling glance can disple every anguish of soil, had bow and arrows ready in his lotts hands.

Dohd 230,

In the midst of the circle of saints, Sita and Rama shone forth as fair as Faith and the Supreme Spirit incarnate in the council chamber of wisdom.

Chaupái.

He, his brother and their guide were so absorbed that joy and sorrow, pleasure and pain were all forgatten. Gyring 'Mercy, mercy, O lord and master !' he fell flat on the ground, like a log. Lakshumn recognized his loving cy and made obeismoe, knowing that it must be Bharat. On the one hand he was moved by brotherly affection, but ce the other was the stronger claim of obedience to his leaf. Unable to embrace him and yet loth to refraie; what poet di.

I The idea would seem to be that Rams, though the benefactor of the whole world, was obliged in the forest to go armed, to proteet himself against attack.

could describe Lakshman's state of mind? Though obedience was the weightier, and therefore he stayed, he was like a child pulling against a kite high in the air. Bowing his head to the ground, he said affectionately : " It is Bharat, O Righunath, who greets you. On bearing this, Rama started up in loving agitation, his robe flying in one direction and his quiver and bow and arrows in another.

Doha 231.

Whether he would or no, the All-compassionate took and raised him up and clasped him to his bosom. Those who witnessed the meeting of Bharat and Rama lost all self-consciousness.

Chaupai.

How can such an affectionate meeting be described? Their thoughts, words and actions were beyond any poet. Both brothers were filled with the utmost lave; self, reason, knowledge and understanding were all forgotten. Tell me who can pourtray such perfect love? by what shadow can the poet's mind attain to it? If the poet has a medel, he can work out his meaning by the force of words, and players dance when they have an accompaniment; but the love of Rama and Bharat is unapproachable, beyond the conception even of Brahma, Vishon and Siva; how then can I describe it? If an instrument is only strong with grass!, can it make sweet music? When the gods saw the meeting of Bharat and Raghubar they were alarmed and trembled all over; but when Vrihaspati had spoken to them, they awoke from their folly and rained down flowers and applauded.

Doha 232.

Alter affectionately embracing Satrughus, Ráma greeted the pilot; and then Lakshman too as a brother courteously greeted Bharat.

Chaupái,

When he had foully embraced his younger brother, Lakshman next took the Nishad to his bosom. Then the two brothers, Bharst and Satrughns, after reverencing all the saints and joyfully receiving from them the desired blessing in a rapture of love, placed on their head the dust of Sita's lotus feet. As they again and again prostrated themselves

I I know no other instance of the use of the word goaders in one sense or great, which is the meaning that the best Hundr commentators give it fire. It ordinarily means 'a sheep' I know no other instance of the use of the word golders in the sense of she raised them up, and with a touch of her lotus hands motioned them to be seated; in her heart invoking a blessing upon them, and so absorbed in affection as to how all selfconscioneress. When he saw Sita to thoroughly propition, he became free from anxiety and all fear passed away. No one made any remark nor saked any question: the soil wat so full of love that it ceased to sat. Then the pilot took corage and bowing with clasped funds made thumble petition:

Doh4 233.

"Distressed by your absence, my lord, there have ec with the great sage your mothers and all the people of city, your servants, captains and ministers."

Chaupdi.

When the Ocean of amiability heard the ouru had con het Satrughna with Sita and went off in hastel the very minute; he Râma, the steadfast, the righteous, the a merciful. On seeing the ouru, he and his brother we delighted and fell on their faces to the ground. The ho man ran and raised them up and embraced them, argreeted both brothers with the utmost affection. The pilo quivering with emotion, gave his name and proteste himself after off; but the Richi must needs greet himself ended of the man, as though love hall been split upon the ground and he stopped to pick it up. Faith in Ram i the root of all goods; in heaven the goods applieding raine down flowers: "There is no one so attrety wite as he, not any one in the world equal to the year! Vaishtheir

Dold 231.

Yet the king of scinte on seeing him was averjoyed and embraced him before Lukshman; so glorious in their manifestation are the effects of faith in Site's ford."

('haurdi,

Finding all the people rad, Rama, the alloweriff and deviced on an instant he with in the way he most deviced, in an instant he wad his brother embrace of them all and at once removes the sore anguish of their pain. This was no such great thing for Rama to do similarly file set is reflected at once in a thoround water fire settlemen with reptrease affection embrands the pild and prailed his good firstone. Heaving his mothers as quantum for the statement of the statement of the settlement of the statement of the settlement of the statement of the statement of the settlement of the statement of the settlement of the statement of the frost, Rama first of all saluted Keikeyi, softening her will by his gentleness and plety. Falling at her feet he soothed her with many words, attributing all the blame to Pate, Destiny and Providence.

绘

Dold 235.

Raghubar embraced all his mothers and consoled them, saying : Mother, the world is subject to God; there is no one to blame."

Chaupda

The two brothers kissed the feet of their gara's wife; as also of the Brahman ladies who had accompanied her, paying the same honour to them as to Ganga and Gauri ; and they with gentle voice gladly gave them their blessing, When he embraced Sumitra, after classing her feet, he was like a beggar who has picked up a fortune. Then both brothers fell at the feet of queen Kausalya and their whole body was convulsed with love; the mother took them tenderly to her bosom and lathed them with tears of affection. How can any poet describe the mingled joy and grief of such a time, any more than a dumb man can express the sweetness that he tastes? After embracing their mother. Rams and his brother requested the guru to accompany them, and at his commend the citizens crossed over, admiring the scenery as they went

Dold 236.

Taking with them the Bruhmans, the Minister, the queens, the guru, and some others chosen out of the people, Bharat, Lakshman and Raghunath proceeded to the holy hermitage.

Chaupdi.

Sits came and embraced the saint's feet and received the precious blessing that her soul desired. The affectionate manner in which she greeted the guru's wife and the Brahman ladies is beyond description. Agein and again she kissed all their feet and received their benediction rejoicing her heart. When the queen-mothers looked at Sits, they closed their eyes and shuddered to see her so delicate, like some cygnet fallen into the clutch of a fowler ; what a cruel thing God has done! As they gazed at her, they became distrest beyond measure, that she should have to bear all that Fate had put upon her. Then Janak's daughter summoning up courage, while her dark lotus eyes were entitions with tours, want and embraced all her mothers inless and that moment Earth reaked with pitropapers.

25

Š.

11/1/2 217.

Again and again kirsing all their feet. Site most tenderly embraced them rand from their heart came the loving benediction. May you long live a happy wife !

Chaufdi

Stat and the queens lesing the egitated by emotion, the learned grew bode them all be sented First he exponded to them the instability of the world and spoke a little of the foys of heaven, and then announced the king's dealt the new's Righanith was grievously ditrect; thinkin, he had died out of love for him, the firmest of the first was over shirken. On hearing the self-timest, which fell spot them like a then ferfolt, lakshman. Sits and all the queen books out into lomentation, and the whole assembly was much agitated as if the king had died only that very day. Then the great sage exhorted Riams and directed him and at the people to bathe in the sacred stream. All that sky the ford fasted even from water; and though the saint allowed them, no one else would direkt either.

Dold 238.

At daylireak, according to the order given him by the saint, the lord Raghunandan reverently and devoutly performed his father's funeral obsequies.

Chaupdi.

Having celebrated every rite as prescribed in the Vest, be become pure, even he, the Snot to annihilate the eight of ain, whose name, is a fire that consumes the cotton of wickedness, and which if merely invoked its the source of all prosperity. He became pure, in like manner as, theologians say, a battler in the Ganges who invoke other rites is partified. After his partification, when two ddys had passed, Itams said affectionately to the gure: "My north the people are much inconvenienced by having nothing to take but water and the wild produce of the woods. When I look at Bharat and his brothers, the Minister and Histo

10

In the Ganges are concentrated the virtues of all holy places and one who bathes in it is purified, and it is therefore a work of superrogation for fing to invoke any other power. He cannot make immedif clears than be laid become already; nor could fiams, the all-pure, become purer by any act of cremountal purification.

queens, a minute seems to me like an age. Return, I pray, with all of them to the city : for you are here, the king is in heaven, and there is no one left at Ayodhya. I have said too much and have presumed greatly : but do, sir, as you Dohá 239.

"O Rama, bulwark of righteousness, home of compassion, it is but natural for you to speak thus : the people are wearied, let them rest for two days and enjoy your presence." Chaupdi.

On hearing Rama's words, the assembly was in dismay, like a ship tossed on the ocean; but when they heard the saint's anspicious speech, it was as if the wind had turned in their favour. At the three set times they bathed in the sacred stream, the mere sight of which destroys any multitude of sins ; and ever feasting their eyes on the incarnation of blessedness, and again and again prostrating themselves before him, they looked and rejoiced Then they went to see Rama's hill and wood where all was good and nought evil; the torrents flowing with streams of nectar; the air so soft, cool and fragrant that it soothed every pain of mind or body ; the trees, creepers and grasses of infinite variety ; the many kind of fruits, flowers and sprays; the magnificent rocks and the pleasant shade under the trees, all made the forest beautiful beyond description.

Dohá 240.

The ponds were gay with lotuses, the haunt of cooing raterfowl and buzzing bees, while forgetful of mutual autiathies, beasts roamed in the forest and birds of varied

Chaupdi.

The Kols, Kirats and Bhils, the inhabitants of the foods, brought delicious honey sweet as nectar, and piled up aly bowls with herbs, roots, fruits and flowers daintily rranged. With humble salutations they offered them to I telling the taste, character, quality and name of each. he people offered a liberal price, but they would not cept it, and begged them for Rama's sake to take it back, ying in gentle tones in the depth of their affection : The good accept what they know to be of love. You are oly, and we low Nishads; by Rama's favour we have been R--45 admitted into your presence, an honour as difficult of attainment for us as for the desert of Maru to be watered by the Ganges. Rama is merciful and the Nishada' patron; as is the king, so should be his family and subjects.

Dold 241.

Consider this in your mind, and without more demur recognize our affection and make friends with us; accept these fruits and herbs and flowers and so render us happy.

Chaupái.

You have come to the forest as our welcome guest* though we are all unworthy to do you service. And what it, sirs, that we offer you? Fuel and fodder are a Kirat tokens of friendship, and our greatest service is not to ste and run off with your clothes and dishes. We are a rud people, often taking life, of vile nature and vile pursuit low-minded and low-born, who day and night commit at without either clothes for the body or food to satisfy th belly; how could we possibly have ever dreamt of the koow ledge of virtue, but for the effectual apparition of Rama Since we beheld our lord's lotus feet, our sore distress and sin have both been removed" On hearing this speech the citizens were much affected and broke out into praise of their good fortune.

Chhand 10.

All began to praise their good fortune and addresed them in loving terms, being delighted to find in their speech and attitude such devotion to the feet of Sita and Rams. Every one, man or woman, thought little of his own devotion, on hearing the language of the Kols and Bhili; through the mercy of the jewel of Raghu's line (says Tuls) a boat floats, even though laden with fron-

Sorathd 9.

Day after day all the people felt as great delight, as they roamed through every part of the forest, as the frogs and peacocks when invigorated by a shower at the beginning of the rains.

Chaupái.

The citizens of Ayodhya were so absorbed in excess of love that a day was gone in a minute. Sita, assuming as many forms as she had mothers-in-law, waited reverently upon them all with equal attention. No one but Râma noticed the migracle; for Sita is the very power of delusion, and the Delusion's lord. Sits won over all the queen by her services, and they being pleased gave her both instruction and tenediction. Looking at Sits and the two noble brethers, the winked queen repeated bitterly; and Katkayi, one work winked queen repeated bitterly; and Katkayi one prays in her heart: "Is there no evape for one? Does Od relass me even death? as it is declared in the Veda and by popular tradition, and as the poets also have unag, that if Râma he against you, not even in hell can you find a restingplace." Now this was the question in every one's mind; "Good Good. will Râma restar; to Awado or not?"

1

Dohd 242

Bharat was so anxious and sorely perplext that he could neither sleep by night nor eat by day, like as a fish sunk in the last of the mud is in trouble about water.

Chaupsi.

"It was Fate in my mother's form that did me this injury, as when a riosefled ripening for the harvest is smit-ten by thail In what manner can Riam's coronation be secured? There is nothing now left for me to do. He would certainly return in obedience to an order of the guru; but then the saint will only order what knows Riama to with. At his mother's bidding, too, he would return, but Kunshja would never insite upon anything. Of what account am I, who am only his vasad, and am fallen upon ceil immes, and have God against me. If I erest him, it would be much a surface of the day of the contract of t

Dohá 243.

After saluting the guru's lotus feet and receiving his permission, he took his seat: while all the Brahmans, nobles and ministers of state came and assembled in council.

I The fish thinks to himself, 'There is now only a little mud left, in which can just manage to live, if that two drees up, what whereit and to do for water?' In like manner Boarts was thinking. 'The two days are now nearly over; when they are gone and I am left without Riena, how shall I be able to surfive?

Chaurdi.

The great sage addressed them in words appropriate to the occasion: "Hearken, ye counsellor, and you, wise Bharat. The champion of righteousness, the sun of the Solar race, king Rama, the autocratic, the lord God, the ocean of truth, the protector, the bulwark of scripture, has taken birth for the benefit of the whole world. Obedient to the word of his gurn and his father and mother : destroring the armies of the wicked and befriending the gods; ipolicy and devotion, in all things that pertain to this life of the next, there is no one equal to Rams in the knowled; of what is right. Brahma, Vishnu and Siva; the sun, th moon, the guardians of the spheres, Delusion, life, Fate, and this Iron uge ; the sovereigns of hell, the sovereigns of eart! and all the powers that he : manio and sorcery and every spell in the Vedes and the Tantras -ponder it in your best and consider well-all are obedient to Rama's commands.

Dald 911

If we observe Itama's pleasure and commands, it will be well for us all : now, wise sire, think it over, and all resolve to do whatever may be decided.

Champdi

Râma's coronation will be agreeable to all, as nate source of happiness and the one way to felicity. How is he to be brought back to Ayath? Think before you reak, and upon this plan we will act. "All listoned respectified to Varishth's speech, fall as it was of pictor, religion and worldly wisdom; but no enswer was fortherming everyon was dambloaned, till with bowed head and claped hold. Bhrast spoke: "In the Sader race there have been mark those, such one greater than the other; all owed their bits to their parents, but their good or ill fortone was the all of God. And, as all the world knows, it was through your blessing that they trumphed over sorrow and strained complete properties whateup the control fate that pair, marked out for them, once coult alter fix; it was fard improved.

11.34 215.

And yet now you ask a frice of mossesh famt it. Then the green heart site affect orate speech, first and in his beart.

Chaupai.

"My son, this is a true saying, it is all Lifam's mercy, without Ricans cone can ever deem of hippiness. There is one way, my son, though I am ashumed to propose it; but a wise man will sacrifice the half when he sees the whole going; do you two brothers go into calls, them the same will sacrifice the same will come back. The control of the same whole body thrilled with excitement; they were as placed at heart and as radiant all over as if king Dasarah had been restored to life and Rican were already entireach. The people gained much and assertinged little; but the queen all wept, for their pain was equal to their joy.' Said Bharat: "What the saint has proposed is already as good as none; he has granted me the one thing above all others that I most desired. I will stay all my life in the forest; there is nothing I should like batter.

Dohá 246.

Rama and Sita know my heart and you are full of knowledge and wisdom; if, my lord, you mean what you say, make your word good."

Chaupai.

Hearing Bharst's words and seeing his love, the saint and the whole assembly were transported out of themselves. Bharst's wast generooily was like appeared to water and the saint's proposal like a woman standing in the brink, nations to cross and trying different ways, but enablested either ship, boat, or rate. Who can desavite Bharst desarrating to the saint was inwardly at heart charmed with Bharst, and accompanied by the assembly went to Rams. The addited him and led him to a seat of shoots and on reacting the saint's permission all sat down. Then spoke Vasishth in well-considered words, according to the circumstances of the place and time: "Hearkee, Rams; you are compisient and wise, a store-house of plety, prudence, virtue and intelligence:

You dwell in the hearts of all and know what they really wish or do not wish: now advise what will be best for your subjects, your mothers and Bharat

I For, though they recovered two of their sons, they lost the other two,

Chaupai.

A man in pain talks wildly, and a gambler watches only his wom play." "On hearing the saint's speech, Righurd replied: "My lord, the remedy is in your own hands. To attend to your wishes will be heat for all. Only give the order, and oheerfully, I assure you, whatever your commands may be, I answer for myself in the first place, those instructions I will dutifully obey; and after me, each, as he has his orders, will hasten to do his service." Said the saint: Râms, you say truly; but Bhart's affections disturbed calculation; therefore I say again and again my indegment is overcome by Bharat's piety; in my opinion, Siva be my witness, whatever will please Bharat is the best thing to be done.

Dohd 248.

Listen respectfully to Bharat's prayer; reconsider the matter; and after weighing well the duties of a king and the texts of Scriptare, take the advice giren you both by philosophers and men of the world."

Chaupái.

Seeing the guru's love for Bharat, Rāma's heart rejoiced exceedingly, for he knew Bharat to be a chumpion of righteocames, and in thought, word and deed his own laithful servant. In obedience to the guru's commode, he made this sweet, gentle and excellent reply: "I sweat by you, my lord, and by my father's Feet that in all the world there has been no brother like Bharat. All who lore the lotts feet of their guru are highly hiesend: so say obth the world and the Ved. But who can tell Bharat's blesedart, to whom such love has been shown by you? When I look at him, my younger brother, my senses are abanded, at I thus praise him to his face. Whatever librarit says, that will be good for us to do." Having so mail Rāma remnied dilent.

Doh4 249.

Then the mint said to Bharat. " Put saids all diff lence, my son, and tell the Ocean of mercy, your own dear brother, what you really have at heart."

I Therefore me come for wivice to you, being too much earlied and baring the great a personal interest in the matter to juice for entwice calmiy an importantly

Chaurdi.

Hearing the min't address, and having already received Hism's concent, he was satisfied of the good-will beth of his gure and his master; but seeing the weight of the whole briness put upon his head, he could say nothing and remined lost in thought, as he stood in the assembly, quivering all over his body, and his lotte spes filled with the moisture of affection: "The king of saints has already spoken for me: what more is there for me to say? I know my lord's amibbe disposition, that he never shows displeasure even to the goilty; and for me he has a special tenderness and lore; even in ply he never gave me an angry look. From a child I have never left thum, and easer at any time has he wounded my feelings. I have observed my lord's gracious ways; when beating me in any game he would allow me to vin.

Doha 250.

I am too much overcome by affection and modesty to say a word before him; to this day my eyes, thirsting for his love, have not been satlated with the sight of him.

Chaupái.

God could not endare my fondness, and cruelly interposed an obstacle by means of my mother. I saying this now I do myrelf no bonour. Who is made good by his own good estimation? To get into my mind that my mother is a wretch and I myrelf good and apright is a thousand times were. Can rice be produced from stalks of kada, for the shells of a pood sreat pearls? Not a shadow of blame or wrong-doing attaches to any one; it is my lill-tock, like some fatheomies occas. Not perceiving that it is the fruit of my own sins, I revile my mother, to my own undoing I search my beart, but am besten all round. I note matter only an I really fortunate; with Vasishtia for my gerns and Sits and Hams for my masters, things must come right in the ond.

Dok4 251.

In this honourable assemblage, in the presence of my lord and my gurn and in this holy place, I speak my true sentiments; the saint and Ráma know whether my affection is sincere or feigned, and my words true or false.

I The kode (Sanskrit keleaps is the Pospulant framentaceum or arrobrcula lun, which bears a small grain of inferior quality, exten only by the box,

Chaupdi.

The whole world is witness to the king's death, the result of his uncompromising love, and to my mother's wickedness; the queens are so wee-begone that I cannot bear to look at them ; the citizens are consumed by intolerable anguish ; and I am the cause of all their troubles ; and yet though I hear and feel all this, I can still endure the torment. When I heard that Raghunath had taken with him Lakshman and Sita, and in pilgrim's weeds had set out for the woods, without shoes and walking on foot, be Sunkara my witness, how I survived the misery. Again, when I saw the Nishad's devotion, my heart must have been harder than adament not to break. And now I have come and with my own eyes have seen everything; surely in this life my wretched soul has borne all that can be borne. The serpents and scorpions on the road at the sight of them forget their virulent venom and savage viciousness;

Dohd 252.

But to her Ráma, Lakshman and Sita appeared as enemies; and how can God spare her son, or on whom would he rather inflict intolerable pain?

Chaupdi.

On hearing these lamentable words of Bharat's fraught with distress and love, homility and discretion, the whole assembly was lost in sorrow and anxiety, as when the frest smites a bed of lotuses. The learned sage comforted Bharat wise; "Bother, griere no ancient legends, and Riama, the moun of the files of the Solar race, spoke then is seemly wise; "Bother, griere not your heart in vain; know that, the ways of life are in God's hands. To my mind, brother, all the men of highest renown for virtue in all time, particularly present or future, and in the three spheres of creation, fall short of you. Whoever even imagines wickedness to shall perish both in this life and in the next. It is only fools, who have never studied in the school of philosophy and religion, who sortibe blame to your mother.

Dohá 253.

Sin. Delusion and the burden of every ill are destroyed by the invocation of your name, glory is own in this world and eternal happiness in the world to come.

Champdi.

Be Siva my witness; I state the fact truly: the world, Bharat, exits by your support. Do not, brother, entertain avil armines to no purpose; love and butted cannot be hid: birds and bests cowe up close to a sunts, but flee at the sight of a flowler, though he bries to stop them. If beasts and birds can distinguish between friends and enomies, how much more man, whose body its vessel of virtoe and intelligence. I know you thoroughly, brother; how can id anything that would be discordant with your spirit? The king, to keep his word, abandoned me and, to keep his vow, abandoned me and, to keep his vow, abandoned me and, to keep his vow, for bearing right in your construction of the grave in the your moreover has given me his commands; in short, whatever you say, that I su needs to do

Doha 254.

Set your mind at ease; cross this timidity and speak out; I will do it at once." When they heard Rams, the ocean of truth, speak thus, the assembly rejoiced.

Champái.

But the king of beaven and all the gods were alarmed and began to think "Bings will all go wrong." Though they took towned together, nothing exme of it: mentally all had recorner to Rikan for protection. After gain considering, they said to one another: "Rism is moved by the faith of the taithful." Remembering the story of Arubarisha and Durrásay, Indra and the gods were greatly dejected. "Long time the gods endered distres; till at half Prablid revealed Naringha." They best their heads and whispered in the sar: "Now our only chance lies with Bhart there is no other plan, sir, that I can see. Risma accepts service done to one of this errants; do you all with loring heart do service to Bharst, and he will subdec Risma to his own temper."

者法法法者者以此於其以明明所

I If they had gone to him in person their whole scheme would have been fruitrated, for fillers would have been did a and thus ture become awar of Rama's drillings.

2 The agends of Ambarista and Frable I show how ready Yuhang (e.g.

Rama) has always been to hear the prayers of his followers, and how heree is his in ignation against those who personate them; it was therefore useless for the great to think of opposing librars; their only plan was to win him over to their side.

Dold 255.

When the guru of the gods heard this their plan, he said: Well done, you are in great good fortone; devotion to Bharat's feet is the source of every good in the world.

Chaurdi,

The mervice of the servant of Sita's lord is as good thousand Kunndhenus. Now that you are resolved to faith in librard, cease to have any anziety; God has provid a way. See, Indra, the extent of Bibrat's power its subdued Riams with the greatest ease. Make your mind et sir, never tear, knowing that Bibrart is Riams's shoot The Lord, who howes the heart, was disturbed who heard the planes and tears of Vribargati and the other ge Bibrart, knowing that the whole responsibility rested of him, was raising a thousand different arguments in mind. After much deliberation, he came to the conclusitant this happiness consisted in obeying Riam. "He breaking his own vow in order to satisfy me, and in this showing me no little love and affection.

Dalid 256.

Sita's lord has in every way done me great and unbouned favour." Then bowing low, and with his lotus have clasped in supplication, Bharat thus spoke:

Chaupdi.

"All-meroiful and omniscient lord, what now con I as myself or have others to say for me? My garn is plass and my muster kind: the inaginary torments of my tous bled sool are all over. I feared diagrae, but my fear with the contract of the same in take the points of the compass! My ill-lock, my mother wickedness, God's adverse action, and the miligally not set themselves firm and combined to overthrow me? This is no stronge procedure of dis; it is declared both of the protector of suppliants has ministend his charge by Sorpier on stronge procedure of dis; it is declared both of the tous of the ford only is good; tell une by whose goods save by his own? Your startbulets, sire, are those of the tree of paradise, which is never either for or against and one in particular.

I Your mercy is as sure as the course of the sun; but ereo with son let bis guide, a man may lose his way by mistaking the possis of the conyas in fike manner I was starmed through my Ignorance of the course that your mercy was taking.

Dohá 257.

All who draw near and acknowledge that its shade relieves every sorrow, high or low, rich or poor, ask and obtain the fruit that they desire.

haupái.

Now that I have seen the affection of my guru and my mater, my antisty is gone: my mind is freed from dust Now, O Mine of compartion, do whatever will be for the good of your servant, without being a trouble to the seal of my lord. The servant who worries his mater and seeks only hisown advantage is a base-minded variet: A servant's gain is to do his mester's service, to zet him every comfort, and not be greedy. If my lord settors to Avoldrya, every one will be a gainer; but obesience to orders will be a thousand times greater gain; it is the highest good in this world, and in the next it is the freit of all well doing and the ornament of bestitude. Listen, sire, to this my one request, and then do a syou think proper. I have brought with me all the requisites for the coronation; if you approve, my lord, here them brought into use.

Dold 258.

ing the world's bappiness.

10

14

Send me and my brother into the woods, and give the people back their king; or else let Lakshman and Satroghna return and let me accompany you;

Chaupdi.

Or all three brothers go into the woods, and only you and Sits return. Of most meetical lord, do whatever it must pleasing to yourself. You have east the whole borden upon me, sire, who am nearesed both in politics and theology; I make all my proposals on the ground of worldly interest hat when a man is in distincts be cannot recain. A secretal who heart his material surfaces and sowers him is one that Name herself would be askanded to be 1 at a set yet though the second world would be askanded to be 1 at a set yet though materia his kinders praises means of the present the second plane, the second praises means and the will came my lards wall the lesst recursion. By my load's feet I were that I speak that the the the test is not your perhant for weight

Dohá 259.

If my lord cheerfully and without reserve will only give each one of us his ordors, they will be reverently obeyed, and all this trouble and perplexity', will be at an end."

Chaup i.

On hearing Bharat's guileless speech the gods were glad of heart and extolled his generosity and rained down flowers; the people of Avadh were overwhelmed with uncertainty, and the hermits and all the dwelfers in the weeds were greatly rejoiced. Raghonthin maintained an anxious silence. Seeing his state, the whole assembly became disturbed. At that very moment arrived messengers from Jamak. Saint Vasiahtha on hearing of it sent for them at occe. They made obeisance and looked towards Râma. At the sight of his attire they were exceedingly grieved. The great saint asked the embassy the news: 'Tell me is all well with the king of Videha?' At this question the noble heralds with a deprecating air howed their heads to the ground and with clasped hands replied: "Your courseour enquiry, sire, makes all well."

Doha 260.

Otherwise, my lord, welfare died with the king of Korsla; the whole world is in bereavement, but especially Mithila and Avadh.

Chaupdi.

When Janak and his court heard of king Dassenth's death, every one was mad with excess of grief. All who at that time saw Videha thought that name a troly appropriate one. J As he listened to the tile of the queen's wickender to the mourach became as helpless as a surport without list headjewel. Bharat king, and Itama in exile I Janak's soil maistest. He enquired of all his wise mean and ministers, 'Consider and tell me what ought now to hadone.' Reflecting on the state of Awadh and the double

I Apareen, which I translate 'perplexity,' is explained by the H stucommentators as meaning the same as ghat or peach. The word is not given in Dr. Fallin's or any other Hindusenni-English. Dictionary that I have seen. Jacobia for de-find no counterpart in the funderit feeth.

² Janak's six and the long decommon that follow it, which comprises all the romander of the book, are the invention of Ta'el Dag and End on outcomergary in the Fancerity posts.

3 Fidela, meaning interally out of the body, and Janak being out of his mind, beside himself, as we should say, he gred difficulty, if he went or if he stayed, no one gave any answer. After reasoning with himself, the king resolved to send four clever spice to Avadh, to discover whether Bharat meant well or ill, and return in haste without being seen.

Doha 261.

The spies went to Avadh, ascertained Bharat's movements and saw what he was doing, that he had started for Chitra-kút, and then went back to Tithút.

Chaupdi.

On their arrival, thay announced in Janaki's court to the best of their shithly all Bhraria dodings. The pure, the citizen, the ministers and the king were all agitated with grief and love at the report. Restraining his sendings and love at the report. The straining his sendings and baring taktioned guards for the pulses, city, and result and having taktioned guards for the pulses, city, and result and hard propertion, all in level than an hour, the king set out and halled nowhere on the road, but this morning at daybreak hathed at Payage. The host has begun to cross the Januania wad we, my lord, have brea sent on shead for news." Bo sping, they bowed the head to the ground. The saint at once gives them an ercort of six or seven Kristia and allowed them to also leave.

Dohá 262.

The people of Avadh were all delighted to hear of Janak's arrival; but Raghunandan was greatly disquieted and Indra overwhelmed with alarm:

Chaupai.

The wicked Kaikeyi was sinking with remore, 'to whom bail I be able to speak or whom can I blame?' while the people were delighted with the thought that now they had got another day or two to stay. In this manner the day was spent. On the morrow all bathed and utions worshipped Gaues, Gauri, Sive and tt snow the feet of Lakshum is jord and escent the test of takenmin's ford and holders, the men's raising their join holding out the skirt of their dress and

1 Skhaul, which I in Any Retinary
2 Thus skir skir shifting

Jánaki our queen, may Avadh, our capital, the centre of all delights, be gloriously re-peopled, court and all, and Ráma install Bherat as heir-apparent. Revive us all, Olord, with this ambrovial blies and grant the world its life's desire.

Dolat 263.

May Rama sway the state, assisted by his guru the council and his brothers; and may we die with Rama still Avadh's king." This was the universal prayer

Chaufdi

When they heard the citizens' loving words, the wisest saints thought little of their own penance and ansterities. When the people had in this manner performed their daily devotions, with much joy they went and saluted Rama. High and low and of middle estate, men and women, all looked up to him as their own special patron, and he discreetly received them all with due honour. Every one extolled his inexhaustible generosity: "From a child it was said of Raphubar that he cherishes all in whom he recognizes sincerity and affection , with his bright face, bright eves and guileless wave, he is a very ocean of amisbility and gentleness." Thus affectionately telling Rama's good qualities, all began to magnify their own good fortune. "There are few people in the world who can have been so meritorious as we, whom Rams has thus accepted for his own."

Dold 264.

At the time when all were thus absorbed in love, they heard of the approach of the king of Mithilá: the Sun of the lotures of the Solar race rose in histe, he and the whole assembly.

Chaupái.

Raghunáth led the way, accomposited by his brokhers, the grut the Minister and the people. As soon as King Janak saw the holy hill, he distured from his chrick as saluted it. In their eigeness and excitement to see Risas, no one felt the slightest strigue from the tolloom founce, for their soul was with Rāms and Sīta; and who with soul on he conscious of bodily rain or pleasure? In this manner Janak and his host advanced, drunker of the decoration of the string of the strin air, act, cool and Ingrant, was delightful to every one; and the heating of the scene was beyond description, as though Earth herself had prepared Janua's reception. When seek and all of the people had followed bathony and had received permission from Hams, Janua's and the saint, they gazed with rapture on the magnificent trees and three thempiered down here and there; while leaves and fruits, downs and roots of svery kind, fresh and fair, and sweets and Italia 968.

Were courteously sent to all, in baskets full, by Ilams's sure ; on which they made their repart, after reverencing their succestors, the gods their guests and the own

Chaujdi.

In this manner four also, were agent, in which the people are liftmen and were happy. In both Camps there was this desire at heart. "It is not good for not o return without Sits and Rimon, Liller in the woods in their conceive is a thousand times better than heaven. If any one, on his longing for hoom, would devert Lackmann, Rimm and Sits, his fate was unlocky one. it is the bright of good fortone for we all to dwell for the ferrether Rimon, latting of three times a day in the Mendalami, sweng liama, which will be a constant delight, sandling shorts on the service held and roots and fruits, no constantly that the fourthern person will be such as the formation in the wood, and before you were herby and roots and fruits, no constantly that the fourthern years will peak his a minority, without our knowing how they go

Hold 269

We are not worthy of so great happeness they all exclaimed. "What lock can be like it?" Such was the spontaneous devotion to Rama's feet in both camps

Champa

In this manner and were expressing their herrs, deare in affectionate word, which it ratioled the soul to hear, bits mother sent a handmail who assertained that it was mothers sent time and returned. On hearing that high mothers to the were at I now, Jonal's grown and has attendent came to not these. Knowles reserved there with this house and part them and went as corresultance allowed. On his both nice there was not been and tenderness, that he must right hundrich would have matted.

whose and full of love for Rims; but without knowledge love for Rims is imperfect, like a best withouts belowern." When the seint het fürlicht his eshortstion to the king, all the people bethefat the Rimgdeit. Every one, men and women alike, were an aginted with grief that they speat the day without drinking water; seen the cattle, bit? and deer would est nothing; much less would his on kinder! think of doings.

Disa 266.

At dephreak the royal son of Nimit and the royal son of Higher having bathed with all their retinue went and sat under the for tree, and at heart and wasted in body

Chang di.

The Brahmon from Ayothya, as also those from the repixel of the king of Mithila: Vasishthe, the general the Soler race, and Satanand, Januk's family priest, who while or earth had explored the path of heaven, began long exhortations full of seigion, more tilty, acceptations and philosophy. Then Visramitra eloquently admonished the astembly with many a reference to accine legend; till Raghunath suggested to him: "Sire every one since yester by has gone without water." Said the saint: "Riam has spoken in season! two-and-a-half watches of the day are now spect." Daferstanding the saint's pleasure the king of Tirthit replied: "It is not good for us to eat bread here." The king's out of least of the saint's pleasure the king of Tirthit replied: "It is not good for us to eat bread here." The king's more pleased every one, and having obtained his permission they went to bather.

Dola 267.

At the very moment arrived the people of the woods, bringing large baskets laden with fruits, flowers, leaves and roots of every description.

Chaupdi.

By Risma's favour the mountain had become a granter of day Risma's favour the mountain had become a granter of the same and glades were bursting as it were with joy and love; all the oreepers and trees broke out into blossom and fruit: the burst and beasts made a most melodions concert. In abort, the gladsomen-ss of the forest was surpassing; the always known that Bharat was the glory of his house, and the king repeatedly told me so. Gold is known by assay and previous stones by the test; a man's temper is tried by fortune. It is not right for me now to have spoken thus; but sorrow and love have left me little reason." On bearing these words, as pure as Gauges stream, all the queens were overecome with emotion.

¹ Nim: was a former king of Videba and one of Janak's anorstors.
2 This refers to the custom which forbids a Handa ever to take facility for frome of his sun-in-faw.

ATODHYA 347

Dobs 272.

Kausalyá continued: "Hearken to me, queen of Mithiiá, and take courage. Who is able to advise you, the consort of the wisest of men?

Chaurdi.

Having found a fitting opportunity, speak, madam, to the king as if af youtself, and suggest that he schould stop Lakimans and lei Bharat go to the forest. If the king agrees to this proposal, I will then deries and carry cet some proper plan I am greatly disturbed about Bharat, for bit love is so profound that if he stays I surmise evil." When they saw her generoisty and heard her frank appeal, they were all overpowered with sympathy. There was a shower of flowers from hearen with ories of Gary 'Glory; saints, accetics and anges grew faint with love. The gueens, despite their faitgue, still looked and martel; till Somitra made bold to my: "Madam nearly an hour of the night is gone." At this Karoulyi from and affectionated.

Doha 273.

Said, "Pray return at once to your tent; of a truth now our help is in God and the king of Mithila."

Chaupdi.

Seeing her affection and hearing her modest speech, Janek's queen clarged her holy feet: "Madam, this modest to made and any actual, since you are Described to so your part is only natural, since you are Described to write and Rama's mother. Monerche give honour to the lowest of their servant; in the same way as fire tope itself with snocks and a hill with grave. King Jean is your severant in thought, word and deed, and Mahider and Bhawinis even constant auxiliaries. Who is there on earth who can act as your supplement? Does the sam shine by the help of a torch? After going into each all and avisting the god, Itima will hold undispated away at Argalyai. Through the might of his gray, servenice and mee will could it have seen and beard. Their body quiverin unnerved, their oyes full of tears, and all lost in they drew lines with their toes on the ground, esparate incurnation of love to Sita and Risms, or were tearful Sympathy repeated in many forms. Sit mother: "God's judgment has gone astray, we thundarbolt for a chiest to break up form!

450

Dohd 270.

We hear of ambrosis but see only venom; all his are hard; crows, owls and cranes are everywhere, bu only in the inaccessible Manas lake."

Chaup4i.

Upon this, queen Sumitrá said saidy; "God's wontray and onaccountable. He creates and cherist then destroys: his purposes are as idle as child's Said Kausabyā; "It is no one's Init; pain and I less and gain are governed by actions; the effects of are insortable; God only knows them, who awards if real to every act, whether it be good or lad. The decree dominates over all, whether for rising, siz, talling, whether for poison or ambrosia. It is vain, to give way to sorrow; God's solicenes are, as I har nonchangeable and from overlating. Consider the of the king's life or death; look now, freed, and whether it was a loss to him or gain. Size replied: "Noblest of noble women, consort of finings, your colopest words are true.

Dohá 271.

If Lakshman, Rama and Sita stay in exile, all 'right in the end and no harm done." "But" (said Ki with a troubled heart.) "I am anxious about Bharat.

Chaupsi.

By God's favour and your blessing, my soot a wifel are both pure as Ganges water. Though I never yet swort by Râms, I now invoke him to a friend, that I speak trolly. The greatens of Bharat's ity, geoders and Inmitity, his brotherly affection, hope and charity, even Sarasvatic doquence would declare; can the count be Jadello out with a shall? I

I For auta-badan, 'a son's wife,' might be better to read to her to their arms and gave her kind instructions and invoked rich blessings upon her. Sits could not speak out, but was anxious at heart: "It is not well for me to spead the night here." The queen saw her wish and explained it to the kings, inwardly praising the excellence of her disnosition

AYODHYA 349

Doha 276.

After again and again embracing her, they graciously gave her leave to depart. Having now an excellent opportunity, the discreet queen adroitly mentioned Bharat's going

Chaupdi.

When the king heard of Bharat's conduct, brilliant as gold, refreshing as sweet perfumes, consolatory as ambrosia or the soft light of the moon, he closed his tearful eves and his body thrilled with rapture, as he broke out into ecstatio praises of his glory " Mark me well, fair-faced and brighteyed dame, the legend of Bharat is effectual to loosen the hands of existence. According to my ability, I too have mastered somewhat of theology, statecraft and spiritual meditation ; but whatever my shility, if I would tell Bharat's greatness, I cannot make a pretence of reaching even its shadow. Brahma, Ganes, Seshnag, Siva, Barasvati, the inspired posts and the sages most renowned for wisdom, when they hear or meditate upon Bharat's doings, his glory, his vigour, his piety, his temper, his virtues and his spotless dignity, all are enraptured; it has a flavour of purity like the Ganges, surpassing ambrosia.

Dohd 277

His perfection is limitless; he is incomparable protoplarm; I know none like Bharat but himself. Can Mount Meru he weighed in any balance? The wit of the whole race of poets is at fagit.

Chaupdi

He is, fair dume, as impossible to describe as the impossible for 8 but to walk on dry land. Hearten, ledy; Idma knows, but even be cannot describe Bhrat's illimitable greatens. If Jak'bunn extrume and Brat goes to the forest, every one will imagine it to be good for all; bet, madam, Bhrat's love and confidence in Himm are partel telling. Bharatis the perfection of lave and devoted attachment, but Ram's is the lord of importality. Harat's mind all dwell in peace, each in his own place. This has all beforetold by Yajnavalkya; and the words of a saint, motion can never be false."

AYODHYA

Dohá 274.

So saying, she fell at her feet and affectionately make request for Sita; permission was accorded and Sita set are with her mother.

Chaupái.

Sita embraced all her old domestics in such manner as in each case was most befitting. When they saw her in hit dress, they were all distrest with exceeding sorn Janak, on receiving the permission of Ráma and the gw came to the tent to see his daughter and clasped her to bosom, the sanctifying gnest of the soul of lors. His boss walled with a flood of affection and his royal soul resemble Prayág; with his love for Sita conspicous as the presing bar tree, on which devotion to Ráma appeared like thoild, clatched for support by the king's bevildered seek as by the sage Chiranjiv when on the point of drowning Videha was so overwhelmed by his feelings that he had seenes left; such is the power of love for Sita and Righbar

Doha 275.

Sits could not bear to see her father and mother so orer come by affection, but calling to mind both the tize and her own duty, Earth's daughter summoned up courage.

Chaupdi.

When Janak looked at her in her anchorite's dres, by usa filled with love and consolation: "Daughter, you hav sanctified both families: averybody in the world precising your brilliant renown. The stream of your fame stells by Ganges and has spread over millions of mireress. The Garges has only three great sites' on earth, but the confers, tions of saints that have been made by you are innumerable. At her father's sincere and loving eloquence Sits was abused and shrank into hervelf. Again her father and mother the

I Thouse Markandera had the presumption to ask Ninyis to have the control of his delistic power. The god in assure to have decided to the control of the con

[?] They are Harl-dwar, Frayag, and Sagar

Dold 280.

O king of onen, you are the wisest among the most wise, the champion of true piety; who save you can at this time on these troubles?"

Chaurde

Janak was so moved by the state a lives and by the spirit of his spirit the inderest to trath a realest in religion, not of hindness, the endures inconvenience without marmaring that if you have any other to the case.

Del4 281.

Christ

At the Beard's whole frame quirseed and its eyes. Elife with tears, that patting a riving restraint a post benealt be replied; "My tord, I love and severy years my father, while old you an dear as not considered were father and mother I have none. Here are historitas and the other ages and all the amenths, was four generall, as commend uniform, I have more discipling and the dear father ages and all the amenths, and an interest though how method and nature on I at the amenths and at the half yiew years, where does, and for the area of the control of the dear discipling the probability of the dear the dear the dear the probability of the dear and the consistency there is a dear the dear and the consistency that a feet mediaters are the deal and the consistency that a feet mediaters are the deal and the consistency that a feet in the dear and the consistency that a feet mediaters are the deal and the consistency that a feet mediaters are the deal and the consistency that a feet mediaters are the deal and the consistency that a feet mediaters are the deal and the consistency that a feet mediaters are the deal and the consistency that a feet mediaters are the deal and the consistency that are the deal and the deal has never even dreamt of all the felicities of this world and the next; only his love for Rúma's feet has brought him success. This, as I consider, is Bharat's belief.

Dohá 278.

He would never be beguiled into thwarting an order of Ráma's; do not then in your affection give way to "orrow." said the king, and sighed as be spoke.

Chaupái.

As the wedded pair thus affectionately discoursed of Bharat's excellences, the night passed like a minute. At daybreak both the royal camps awake and bathef and wershipped the goods After bathing, Rams approached his get, and on receiving permission spoke thus: "My lord, Bharat and the people and my mothers are distrest and inconvenienced by their sojourn in the woods. The king of Mithila too and his retinue have been enduring hardships for, many days; be pleased to do, my lord, as seems to you good; the happiness of all is in your hands." So saying, Rams was greatly abashed. The sain thrilled with delight on seeing his disposition "Without you, Rams, the greatest bliss would seem to both camps like hell.

Doha 979

O Rama, you are the soul of their soul, the life of their life, the joy of their joy. Any one, my son, who would desert you for the sake of the pleasure of home has destion seminst him.

Chaupái.

Perish the happness life and religion, in which is no love for Riam's lotus feet! That piety be impirely a wisdom nowisdom, to which love for Riams is not septemal. Through you men are made happy, and without you they are unhappy; you know the heart of every one. Your mander sule all, and every motion is thoroughly manifest it your benignity. Return now to the hermitage. The king of saints was over-powered with love. When Riams had been and retired, the your composed himself and went to Jank, and repeated to him what Riams had suid, enharing upon his amisbility, affection and excellent disposition: "Nor sire, do whatever will be for the advantage of all without prejudice to religion.

Chaurdi.

Indra practised this villatory, kinking "Success or defeat is all in Bharat's bands." When Janak approached Rima, the glory of listable "line received them all with honour. Then spake Vasishtha in terms appropriate to the time, the assembly and the principles of religion, mentioning the conversation between the property of the conversation between the property of the conversation between the property of the conversation of 11.3hd 285.

On hearing Rúma's oath, the saint and Janak and the whole assembly were confounded; and fixed their eyes on Bharat's face helolessly and without power to answer.

Chaus di.

Bheat aw the distress of the assembly, and being Rima's brother, note a strong retraint apon binself. Seeing the unditures of the time, he sublead his emotion, in the same way as Agastya bowed down the Vindaya mountain. Grief like Ilicanyakhi, carried away his soul as it were the Learly but at once from his spotless perfection like the would of the universe cause forth the nightly Boat's of discretion and wranget imms laste di-nersence. Chapung his hands, he howed reverentially to all, to Ikams, the king, the guer, and the sints: "Fardon me if In-day I set most an becomingly and with the toaces of a child speak atchborn words." As he mentally invokal by gravious Sandal, from the child of the course to his lotus mouth a realth course.

I agarga is said to base conspelled the hindury module as to prostrate the medium by the delimination of a sub-module of an above mode of an above module to state from the based of the delimination of the state of ² The allesson is to the third Arman, when I inhauda the formed a Breat removed the satist, which had been moundful the demon IR magazaka and satisfactor of the strain.

17:14 242

Have regard to Rama's wishes, so pione as be is, and remember that I am but a servant do as all approve and as will be best for all, but forget not their love"

(haujdi

When the king heard Bharat's speech and witnessed his generosity, he and his court borst out into praise Simple but profound, soft and delicate but severe; pregnant with meaning in a small compass; his speech was as mysterious as the shadow of a face in a glam, with no hand can group. The king, Uharat, the mint, and all the venerable assembly went to Itims, by whom the gods were male as glad as the lilles by the moon. On bearing the news all the people were as distrest as fish in unaccustomed waters. The gods seeing first the emotion of the family ourse, and then Janak's exceeding affection, and Bharat so full of devotion to Rana, were sorely anxious and began to despond in their selfishness. The sight of Rama's kindness made the company of heaven unspeakably dismayed

Dold 283.

Indra cried sadly. Rama is overcome by love and modesty : we must combine to devise some scheme, or else we shall be undone "

Chaupdi.

The gods invoked Sarada in flattering terms : "Protect, O goddess, the gods your suppliants. Exert your power of delusion and change Bharat's purpose; by some deceptive artifice rescue the host of heaven." When the wise godden heard their prayer, she understood their stupid selfishness and said : " you tell me to change Bharat's purpose : Jon have a thousand eyes and yet cannot see Mount Mern. The delusive power of Brahma, Vishou and Siva is exceedingly great, but it cannot see through Bharat's purpose, and yet you tell me to pervert it. What ! can the moonlight rob the moon? Bharat's heart inhabited by Sita and Rams; can darkness invade the splendour of the sun? So saying, Sarada withdrew to Brahma's heaven, and the gods were as downcast as the chalica at the approach of night.

Dold 984.

The self-seeking gods were troubled at heart and devised artifices of fear, error, sorrow and vexation.

Dold 288.

Who now has corrected his servant and treated him with bonour, and made him the crown of the head of the just. Who is there, save the all-merciful, who, whether we will or no, maintains our fair fame?

Chaupdi.

Whether it was from grief and affection or from mere childishness that I came here in despite of your commands, you in your compassion have looked upon measa friend and in every way taken it in good part Seeing your blessed feet and knowing my lord's natural benignity. I look upon this great assembly as a piece of good fortune, and my great sin as evidence of my lord's kindness! ; for by his gracious favour be has satisfied my whole being and his compassion has exceeded everything. Out of the goodness of his own disposition my good lord has made sure of my fidelity. I have now displayed great audacity in disparding respect for this august assembly and speaking boldly or humbly, just as the fancy moved me ; but pardon me, sire, for I am in grievous perplexity.

Dold 289.

It is a great mistake to say too much to a true friend or really wise man or good master. Be pleased, sire, to give your commands and set me all right.

Chaupèt.

I swear by the dust of my lord's lotus feet, the glorious consummation of truth, virtue and happiness; with an oath I protest that the desire of my soul, whether waking, sleeping or dreaming, is to serve my lord with spontaneous devotion, without any regard to self-interest, fraud, or my own ends in this life or the next. There is no duty so imperative as submission; let your servant, sire, obtain this favour."2 So saying he was utterly overwhelmed with emotion; his body quivered, his eyes filled with tears, and in great agitation he clasped his lord's lotus feet. So pathetic a scene dafies description. The Ocean of compassion honoured him with gracious words and took him

2 That is to say, farour him with some order, that he may show how good a servant be is, by his immediate submission to it.

I The meaning would seem to be : the greater my sin, the greater bia Lindness in forgising it, and the greater the assembly, the greater my glory in having so many witnesses to his love.

Doha 286.

With the eyes of his mind, Bharat saw that the assembly was faint with love; howing low and invoking Sita and Itama he thus spoke;

Chaupdi.

"My lord is my father and mother, my friend, my g and my master object of my adoration, my best b factor, reader of my heart; the kindest of patrons, the fection of amiability, the protector of the humble; the learned, the all-wise; the proverful befriender of suppling quick to appreciate merit and to ignore demerit and wick mess; my sovereign, my god-like God; while no servan be so bad as I am. In my infattation I have come b at the head of an army, in defiance of the commands of I lord and my father. In the world there are god not in high and low, ambrosis and heaven, poison and destip. I never have I seen or heard of any one who even in those could cancel an order of Ráma's. Yet I have benthe continuacious, and my lord in his kindness has taken it is service.

Dohá 287.

Out of his own mercy and goodness he has made my good; my errors have become adornments and my fair fame has been spread all around.

Chaupai.

Your mode of procedure, your gracious, speech, and generosity are known throughout the world ; they are song in the Vedas and Tantras. The cruel, the perverse, the vile, the low-minded, the outcast, the base, the ill-conditioned, the godless, the reckless, so soon as you hear that they have come before you as suppliants and have made a single protration, are all reckoned as friends. Though you see fault, you never take them to heart; and if you but hear of virtues you proclaim them in the assembly of the saints. What other master is there so kind to his servants, so perfect in all points, who never dreams of reckoning up what he has done bimself, and is heartily vexed at any embarrassment of his servants. He is my sovereign lord, and there is none other. with arms upraised, I declare on oath. A beast may dance and a parrot be a clever talker; but all depends upon the music of the dancing-master and the method of the teacher ha piled up trouble on the heads of all. Every one was inferenced by the god's delaive power is their love for Ráma was so violent that they would not be separated from him. They were all distracted with nothing settled in their misel ; at one moment longing for the woods, at another anxious to return home. The people in their distress had the current of their issue as divided as the water as the confinence of a river with the sea. Thus wavering in mind they got no confort in any quarter; in one told snother his secent thoughts. Sering this the Ocean of compared on smite to homself and asid; "Indra is like a dog in his ways."

Dold 220.

Excepting Bharst, Janak, the saints, the ministers and the more intelligent nobles, the heaven sent delution took effect upon all, seconding to the circumstances of the individual.

Chaupdi.

The Ogean of compassion saw the people distrest by their love and by Indra's potent deception; the assembly, the king, the guru, the Brahmans and the ministers, all with their hearts under the spell of Bharat's devotion : motionless as pictures, gazing upon Ilams, nervously uttering words which they seemed to have learnt by rote. The enlogy of Bharat's affection and constant humility is delightful to hear, but difficult to pronounce. Seeing only the tiniest morsel of his devotion, the stints and the king of Mithila were shorted in love ; how then can I. Tolsitell its greatness? It is only by the blessing of faith that the ambirings design of my heart has prospered I am little : I know the enormous greatness of my subject, and I shrink in confa-ion before a growt of other poets; mubla to atter the vehemence of my passionate lave for his paye fection, the motions of my fancy are like the stammerings of a child.

Doha 291.

Uherat's bright fame is as the bright moon rising in the bright sky of a faithful heart, ever intently watched by my daring fancy is by an unfl-dged partridge.

I Must renders of the original util agree with the poses but his powers of control of the best accept and explose to the intensity of his inviting. All this part of the power abounds with other on an invited greaters, the precise interpretation of which is effect only of "I'm its or determine, and I quest distinguished and proceeded to history gree it.

by the hard and seated him by his site; while hims? and all the assembly were faint with love, after hearing Bharat's prayer and essing his online nature.

/74 to 1 12

Higher in himself, the argust assembly, the print the hing of Mithii all were first with lare, and mentally appeared the according greatness of Christ's traderly all other and deviatelness. The polystoc commended Danis of raised down Concert, though with a heavy heart. Ere one, may Tule, was as distrest by what he had head, the forte that withers at the approach of night.

Seentld 11

Seeing every man and woman in both assemblies i grieved and downcast, Indrat, vile wretch, still soulhis own happiness, killing as it were the already dead.

Chaupás.

Though king of the gols, there is no limit to be decided and the light per below and the low and the grant per gin; Pakaripa's ways are like those of a crow-craft disreputable and with on faith in any oze. Having in the grant per grant per grant grant

I Though false has contrastic agreements of the surface of the full false dark that the error and 1.0 mil does not admissful of the contrast at the present day, be take in the fastient sides of their motions scanning to see the west of the surface of the contrast and the surface of the contrast scanning to the surface of the contrast of the contrast contrast and reported as one of the manifestation of the system specific scanning that the state are more for the contrast contrast to the false that the state are more for the state as power for whose full scanning to each small of the state and expected of the state of the s inflation upon at an if iterature, each true. Yeals, truthely many the periode, and sarriedy a seried parse to a world be true any anime of links except a processed in all. Now a world become any anime of links except a processed in all. Now a world process and the period of the pe humanity.

Philamps, 'hin's every, is excel industrates, is constant of his having destroyed a demon called filts.

he piled up trouble on the heads of all. Every one was infectioned by the gol's delayire power; their love for Ráms was so violent that they would not be separated from him. They were all distreted; with anothing settled in their mind; at one moment longing for the woods, at another anxious to return home. The people in their distress had the corrent of their ideas; as divided as the water at the confidence of a rirer with the sea. Thus wavering in mind they got n confert in any quarter; in cove told snother his sevent inaughts. Seving this, the Oeven of comparsion smalls to hunsell and said: "ladra is like a dog in his ways."

Dold 290.

Excepting Bharat, Janak, the saints, the ministers and the more intelligent nobles, the hearen sent delusion took effect upon all, according to the circumstances of the individual.

Chaupái.

The Ocean of compassion saw the neople distract by their love and by Indra's potent deception; the assembly, the king, the ourse, the Brahmans and the ministers, all with their hearts under the spell of Bharat's devotion; motionless as pictures, gazing upon Rama, nervously uttering words which they seemed to have learnt by rote. The enlogy of Bharst's affection and constant humility is delightful to hear, but difficult to pronounce. Seeing only the tiniest morsel of his devotion, the saints and the king of Mithila were absorbed in love ; how then can I. Tulsi, tell its geatness? It is only by the blessing of faith that the ambitions design of my heart has prospered I am ittle ; I know the enormous greatness of my subject, and I brink in confusion before a growt of other poets; unable to utter the vehem-nee of my passimate lave for his perbetion, the motions of my fancy are like the stammerings of a chold.

Doha 291.

Bharat's bright fame is as the bright moon rising in he bright the of a faithful heart ever intensly watched by my daring famous as by an unti-dued partridge.

I Most reader of the original will some with the post that his powers of pression have here been scarcely adequate to the instead of his fertings. I his part of the power absonals with observe and introduct groups, the coler interpretation of which is often very doff at its determine, and I must better upper that I have iteratively succeeded in latting upon it.

Chaupdi,

Bharat's generosity is scarce fathomable by the Vedas; pardon, ye poets, the frivolities of my poor wit. Who, that hears or tells of Bharat's perfect nature, does not become enamoured of the feet of Sita and Rama? Whoever invokes Bharat and still finds love for Rama a difficult matter is a monster without a parallel. Seeing the state that every one was in the merciful and all-wise Rama, who knows their devotion to him, being the stanneh champion of religion, a master of policy, an ocean of truth and love and amiability and everything good, having considered the place and circomstances, the time and assembly, Raghuraj, the maintainer of justice and affection, delivered a speech, the quintessence of eloquence, grateful as ambrosia at the time of bearing, and salutary also in the end : " Brother Bharat, you are the champion of righteousness, perfectly conversant with all the laws of the world and the Vedas :

Dohá 292.

For purity of thought, word and act, your only equal, brother, is yourself. In this venerable assembly and in such distressing circumstances how can all the virtues of my younger brother be told?

Chaupdi.

Brother, you know the custom of the Solar race and the renown and the affection of our father, that Ocean of truth; the oircumstances of the time and of this assembly, the reverence due to these venerable personages, and the secret thoughts of all men, whether they he indifferent, or friends, or unfriends, are understood by you, as also your own highest gain and mine and the requirements of religion. I have entire confidence in you and yet I speak as the circumstances suggest. My words, brother, in the absence of my father, have been kept straight only by the favour of our guru ; otherwise all my subjects, together with the citizens, the people of the palace and myself, would have been undone. If the lord of day sets at the wrong time, tell me, will not the whole world be in confusion? Such trouble, brother, fate had ordained; but the saint and the king of Mithila have averted it.

Dold 293.

The State ; our honour and fair name ; Religion ; our land, wealth and homes; all have been defended by the power of the guru; and everything will be well in the end.

Chaupdi.

My followers and yours, the palace and the forest, are both protected by his favour. The order of a father or mother, a yours or a master, is like Sushing, the supporter of a whole world of rightcoseness. Obey it yourself, brother, and let me obey it, and thus become a protector of all the bolar race. Obedience is the one means for the attainment of every success, a triple flood of Glory, Salvation and Power. Having thus reflected, endure the grievous burden and make your people and family happy. I have distributed my afflictions amongst you all; but upon you is the fall weight of the greatest difficulty. I know your tenderness, though I speak to harshly; the times, brother, are out of joint; the fault is not mine. In an emergency a brother is used for a shield, in the same way as the stroke of a sword is particle by the hand."

Dobd 294.

A servant is like a hand, or foot, or eye; a master is like the head. Hearing this description of love, say Tulsi, the greatest poets are full of admiration.

Chaugeli.

When they heard lighbulan's speech, induced as it were with the nextex of an ocean of tenderases, the whole ascendly became lost in an overpowering trance of love. Siradia berself was strack domb at the dight of them. Bharst was immensely consoled by the graciousness of his lord and his patting away of every trouble and winon-designs. Chervild of supert and with the grief of his soul effect, he second like a dumb man who has received the gift of speech Africa in the second like a dumb man who has received the gift of speech Africa control of the second like a dumb man who has received the gift of speech like the control of the second like a dumb man who has received the gift of speech like a dumb of the like a dumb of the second like a dumb of the like a dumb of Det 4 225.

In compliance with the great's course, I have tought here water from all I garpose of your royal inauguration : what are your orders concerning it?

Chaurdi.

I have one great desire at heart, but for feer and shame I cannot tell it." "Tall me what it is brother," Upon this his land's command, he replied in affectionate and winning terms: "With your permission I would go and see Chitracked with the lists he-mitages, whines and woods, its bids absently its ponds and streams, its waterfalls and rocks, and heaves, its ponds and streams, its waterfalls and rocks, and heaves, its ponds and streams, its waterfalls and rocks, and feet." "Certaints, hrother; outs obtain Atris permission, and then wander without fear through the wood. It is easily and then wander without fear through the wood. It is easily and the wander without fear through the wood. It is and then wander without fear through the wood. It is a safe that wander without fear through the bod of sages may direct, there deposit the hot water. On hearin, his lord's words. Bluarat was glad and joyfully bowed his head to the saint's lotus feet.

Dohá 296.

The selfish gods, when they heard this most delightful converention between Bharat and Rama, praised the whole family and rapturously showered down flowers upon them.

Chaupdi.

"Blessed be Bharat and glory to our lord Ráma," cried the gods in their irrepressible delight. The saint the king of Mithilä and every one in the assembly rejoiced on hearing Bharat's speech. King Videhs broke out into exactia many received the many virtues and the direction both of Bharat and Ráma; master and servant of equally charming disposition, there fidelity and love the purest of the pure. The ministers too and all the spectators affectionately extelled them, as each best could. In both camps there was blended jov and sorrow, when they heard the conversation establishment of the saint sure and pain equally balanced, exhauted the queens, reckoning up both good and earl. One would magnify Ráma another would praise Bharat's amiability.

I One of the temples of Chira-kat bears the mane of Charancadoria and has been erected over a rock, which is said to bear the impression is Raba's foot. Supposing them were not roth in the Ingent, it wout seen rather from the name that it ought to commissionate the place where Rams gave Bharath his sendals.

Doha 297.

Then said Atri to Bharat: "There is a fine well near the hill; there deposit the boly water, pure, unsullied, incomparable."

Chaupdi.

On receiving Atri's command, Bharat despatched all the water vessels, and bimself with Satraghas, the saint and elders, went to the deep well-1. There he poured on the holy water on that sacred spot; and Atri in a rapture of affection thus spoke: "Son, this has been a holy place from all eternity; but time had obscured it, and it was known to no one, fill my servants, seeing the spot to be a desirable one, made this great well for the sake of a good supply of water. By the decree of fate the whole cutivers has been benefited, and a merit most difficult to compass has been readered easy. People will now call it Bharat's well, hallowed in a special degree by the combination in it of the water of all hely places. Every one who lovingly and religiously bathes in it, will be made pure in thought, word and act."

Dold 228.

All then went to Raghunath, telling the virtue of the well; and Atri explained to him the blessed efficacy of holy places.

Chaupsi.

The night was pleasantly spent in loving discourse on matters of religion and morred legends until it was dawn. After performing their daily daties, Bharst and his brother, having received permission from Rima and Saint Afri, at tanded by all their retinue in simple attire, proceeded on foot to visit Rame's wood. Earth, in contesion of heart at being tradeen by their delicate and unshould deet, smoothened hereall, and cleaved away all the spilty grass and thorus and stones and crais and severything rough and unpleasant. Larth made the way delightfully easy for them; they were crieched by soft, cool and fergrant breezes; the gods raised down flowers; the cluds afforded shade; the trees gave blossom and fruit; the grass made a soft carpet; the deep your royal inauguration : what are your orders concerning it?

•

I Thimsel makes no mention of this well. Under the name of the Rhannt kip, it is now one of the seven processel stations united by the palgrims to Chirackit.

Chaupsi.

I have one great desire at heart, but for fear and chus I cannot tell it." "Tell me what it is, brother," Upon this bis lord's commund, be replied in affecti onte and wir sing terms: "Wi h your permission I would go and see Chitracku, with all its hemitages, shrines and woods, its bids beasts, its ponds and streams, its waterfalls and rock, an' the spot so specially marked with the prints of my left feet." Certaint, brother: only obtain Atr's permission and them wander without fear through the woods. It is his saint's breaking, brother, that makes the frest o coepicion toly a dexquisitely beautiful In whitever place the kind of sages may direct, there deposit the holy water "Os hearin, his lord's words, Bharat was glad and joyfully bowed his head to the saint's lotus feet.

Dohá 296.

The selfish gods, when they heard this most delightfal conversation between Bharat and Ráms, praised the whole family and rapturously showered down flowers upon them.

Chaupdi.

"Blessed be Bharat and glory to our lord Rāms," cried the gods in their irrepressible delight. The sint the king of Mithilk and every one in the assembly rejoiced on beering Bharat's speech. King Videla broke out into cetsible praises of the many virtues and the affection buth of Bharat and Rāma; master and servant of equally charming distributions of the present of the pure. The ministers too and all the spectators affectionately actually thou, as each best could. In both camps there was bloodly out of the present of the pure was bloodly on the server, when they heard the conversal in extensions and some conversal in extensions and produced the server and pain equally balanced, exterted the question reckoning up buth good and evil. One would magnify Rāma another would praise fiberat's ambelifity.

I like of the temples of Chitra-Lut hears the name of Charannal and has been erected over a rock which is said to beer the imprication at Lamas sout, disposing there were any trach in the legend, it would rainer from the name that it unght to command rainer from the name that it unght to command rainer from the smaller.

Dohá 297.

Then said Atri to Bharat: "There is a fine well near the hill; there deposit the boly water, pure, ansallied, incomparable."

Chaupái.

On receiving Atri's command. Bharat despatched all the water vessels, and bimself with Satrughas, the saint and cliders, went to the drep well. There be poured out the holy water on that sourced spot; and Atri in a repture of affection those spoke: "Son, this has been a holy place from sill eternity; but time had obsoured it, and it was known to no one, till my servants, seeing the spot to be a desirable one, made this great well for the sake of a good supply of water. By the decree of fate the whole converse has been benefitted, and a merit most difficult to compass has been randeard easy. People will now call it Bharat's well, hallowed in a special degree by the combination in it of the water of all holy places. Every one who lovingly and religiously bathes in it, will be made pure in thought, word and act."

Doha 298.

All then went to Raghunath, telling the virtue of the well; and Atri explained to him the blessed efficacy of holy places.

Chaupăi.

The night was pleasantly spont in loving discourse on matter of religion and scored legends until it was dawn. After performing their daily daties, Bharat and his brother, having received permission from Rama and Saint Atri, attended by all their retions in simple attire, proceeded no toot to visit Rama's wood. Earth, in contusion of heart at being tradical by their delicits and unshold deck, smoothened herself, and cleared away all the spiky grees and thorns and stones and ruts and everything rough and of the and stones and ruts and everything rough and of the refreshed by soft, cool and fragrant breezes; the gods raised down flowers; the clouds afforded shade; the trees gave blossom and fruit; the grass made a soft expire; the deep

I Valmiki makes no quention of this well. Under the name of the Rharatakpy, it is now one of the seven principal stations visited by the pligrims to Chira-hot.

ż

of the saint your mother and the Minister, and protecountry, your subjects and your capital."

Doha 303

A chief should be like the mouth, which slor Tulsi) does all the eating and drinking, and yet's and nourishes to a nicety each separate member of it

Chaupái.

A king's duty includes everything, in the same every latent desire exists potentially in the mind. ways he consoled his brother; hat without some his mind would not be satisfied nor at rest. The minister and the whole assembly were like-min Bharat; and Ráma overpowered with modesty and took compassion upon him and gave him his sanda Bharat reverently received and placed upon his beauthese the more foot-gear of the All-merciful, but rath guardians of his people's life; a casket to coutain the of the soul struggles; the folding-doors that guard their the hands for holy work; the pure eyes of servirghtenomess. Bharat was as glad to receive this min as if Ráma and Sita had themselves stayed.

Dohá 304.

As he bowed and begged permission to depart, took and clasped him to his bosom. Wicked Indra a sad opportunity made the people weary.

Chaupdi.

But his villainy was a good thing for all; the boys time of exile would soon be over was the life of life. Otherwise the separation from Lakshman, Sin Ráma would have been such a blow that all would died of it. The mercy of Ráma solved this difficulty the hostile gods became serviceable allies. Ráma towarms scound Bharat with a burset of affection that be described. Body, son and speech overflowed love; the firmest of the firm lost all firmens, and his great streamed with tears. The assembled gods grieved to see his condition; the saints and gurus why as firm as Janak, the gold of whose sonl had keep in the saints and gurus who

I The two letters are the consonants in the name RAma : for $ per ant which see Dobá 21, Book 1, page 18.

Dohá 301,

But, O merciful and compassionate king of Kosala, teach me some way by which your servant may see your feet again when the time is over.

Chaupái.

Your citizens, your kinsmen, and all your subjects, sire, are true and real, and bound to you by ties of affection. The sorrows of this miserable life, borne by your command are a delight; without my lord, highest heaven is a worthless gain. The all wise master knows the fancies, the desires, the habit of mind of all his servants : the protector, of empliants will be our protector, and both in this world and the next will secure our deliverance. I have thus the most perfect confidence ; not a particle of anxiety disturbs my calculations. My own distress and my lord's forbearance have combined to make me thus presumptuous. Pardon, my lord, this my great offence, and shrink not from instructing your servant what to do." All who heard Bharat's prayer applanded it : like a swap it had separated the milk prayer applanded it; like a swan it had separated the milk of truth from the water of error.

Dold 302.

The all-wise Rams, the brother of the meek, on hearing his brother's meek and guileless speech, replied in terms appropriate, to the place, the circumstances and the time:

Chaupets.

"The gure and the king, brother, take thought for yor, for me and our people, whether at home or in the forest. So ong as Vivaimitra, Variabita, and Janat direct us, neither con nor I can derson directable. For a viro brothers, both or me and you, obedience to our father's command is the sighest object we can have, our greatest gain, our glory, are duty and our altration. A king's good is a good thing outh in the Vedas and in the estimation of the world. Whoever observes the injunctions of gures or father and sucher, or master treat he neary path and never stambles, lemember this, and putting saids all regrets, go and reign 4 Arath for the appointed time. The turden of the result, heteresury, the people and the family will weigh no havier and the deat of the general; feet. Observe the instructions in the deat of the general feet.

of the saint your mother and the Minister, and protect your country, your subjects and your capital."

Dobd 303.

A chief should be like the mouth, which alone (says Tulei) does all the eating and drinking, and yet supports and nourishes to a nicety each separate member of the body.

Chaupái.

A king's duty includes everything, in the same way as every latent desire exists potentially in the mind. In various ways be consoled his brother; but without some memento his mind would not be satisfied nor at rest. The guru, the minister and the whole assembly were like-minded with Bharat; and Ráma overpowered with modesty and affection, took compassion upon him and gave him his sandals, which Bharat reverently received and placed upon his sandals, which Bharat reverently received and placed upon his bead. Not lesse the more foot-gear of the All-merolfal, but rather this guardians of his people's life; a casket to contain the jeval of Bharat's love; the there's of the alphabet for which the soul strongles; the folding-doors that guard the house; the hands for holy work; the pure year of service and righteonness. Bharat was as glad to receive this memento as if Ráma and Sita had themselves staved.

Doha 304.

As he bowed and begged permission to depart, Rimat took and clasped him to his bosom. Wicked Indra finding a sad opportunity made the people weary.

Chaupdi.

But his villainy was a good thing for all; the hope this time of exile would soon be over was the life of this life. Otherwise the separation from Lekshusan, Sits and Ráma would have been such a blow that all would have dide of it. The mercy of Ráma solved this difficulty, and the hostile gods became serviceable allies. Raima closed his arms around Bharat with a burst of affection that cannot be described. Body, soul and speech oreflowed with love; the furnest of the firm lost all firmness, and his lowe yes streamed with tears. The assembled gods were grieved to see his condition; the saints and yours who was firm as Jasak, the gold of whose soul had been tested by the fire of wisdom, and whom the Creator had created as unimpressionable by the world as the leaves of the lotus by the water;

I The two letters are the consumants in the name Rama : for a panegrie on which see Dobà 21, Book 1, page 13.

Doha 305.

Even they, seeing the unperalleled and boundless affection of Rama and Bharat, were overwhelmed in body, soul and speech, lost all reason and restraint.

Chaupái.

II Janak and Vasishtha were dumbfounded, the emotion of ordinary persons is not worth speaking about. People would think any poet harsh when they heard him describe the parting of likims and Bisart; Elequence herself, remembering the unspeak-tile pathes of the scene, would be struck domb with confasion. Baghebar first embraced and consoled Bharat and then rejoiced to take Satrughan to bits arms. Knowing Bisarch weekes, his cereants and ministers began each to set about his sown work. In both campa there was sere distress at the news, es they commenced their preparations for the march. The two broibers, receiving his commands, et act on the way, broices and be sints, the hermits and forest gods and again and again having them terseed.

Dold 300.

Lakshman, too, they embraced, and making obsisonce, laced on their head the dust of Sitz's (set, and received or affectionate blessing, the source of happiness Charges.

Hams and his brother bowed the head to the king with any expression of modesty and praise: "In your kinders, sire, you have suffered great inconvenience, you and our retines, by coming to the forest; now grant me your casing and return to the city." The monarch mastered semotion and wook. After reverencing the semotion and wook. After reverencing the task and tables, and taking leave of them re the equals of Hari the apeached their most sing

V: 'r th

igna to

.

court, the citizens, the good ministers and all; with courteons speech and a liters, as was most belitting. The Ocean of compassion respectfully dismissed them all, men and women, high, mildisclass and law.

Dold 307.

With sincere affection the Lord kired the feet of Bharate mother and embraced her, and exceeting her to the paik! that he had in reviliness, effaced all her slarm and distress.

Chaupdi.

After estating her father and mother and the court, Sitcan back purified by the love of her beloved. Hevereally also embraced all her mother-in-law, with an affection which the poet's soul-drinks from describing. Hearkening to their instruction and receiving the blessing the desired of them. Sits stood burdened with conflicting fore. Having sent for elegant palkty, thans with words of consolation excerted each of his methers to their carriage. Again and again both brothers embraced them and led each by the hand with equal affection. When the horses, elephants and different vehicles were really, the king and Bharat started the host. Their hearts full of Ráma. Sits and Laskhuna, all the prople went disconoclate; even the bullocks, horses, elephants and cattle were out of heart and went only by force and against their will.

Doha 308.

The Lord with Sita and Lakshman kissed the feet of the guru and the guru's wife, and turned and came back to their leafy but with mingled pleasure and amazement.

Chaupdi.

The Nishéd was disnissed with honour and departed a sorely grieved at beart to leave. The Kols, Kiris and Bhilis, the people of the woods, turaed again and again, after they had been dismissed, to make yet one wore observance. The lord with Stis and Lakshnam as inner the shade of the fig-tree and scrowed for the loss of their destricteds. Rama, overpowered with affection, discoursed to his spouse and brother in eloquent terms on Bharais leve and generosity, and with his own blessed month declard that faith and devotion were in his every thought, word and deed. At that time the birds, deer and fish, every his devotion a fixed and unsullied moon shining ever clear amidst a galaxy of stars. All the greatest of poets would fail to describe Bharat's composite, wisdom and magazinimity, his faith, his impassibility, and the perfect splendour of his virtues; not even Seshnag, Ganes and Sarasysticould statia to them.

Dold 313.

Paying daily homage to his lord's sandals, his affection was greater than his heart could contain: he constantly referred to them in the disposal of all matters of state,

Chaupái

His body quivering with emotion. Sita and Râma in his heart, heir ames spon his tonger, and with heart in his eyes. Râma, Lakshman and Sita dwelf in the forest, but Bhanat dwelling in the palace sodared the bodily penance. Every one after considering both sides soid that Bharat was in overy way praiseworthy. The religious were abashed who heard of his fasting and penance the king of snits, who saw his condition, was put to shame. Bharat mode of life was utterfy holy, were and charming, and the cases of twenty blessing; it transvers the garrows distress of this sized age; is the sun to disporse the darkness of the great delution; the liberator from the borden of existence the essence of the ambresio of Râma's love.

Chhand 13.

If theret had never been born, full of the ambrosis of devotion to Runa and Sits who would have practiced each self-restraint and penance, such composure, patience and rigorous fating, transcending every imagination of the saints? Who in legendary disguise would have removed our tunning sorrows and powerty, our strongance and sin? What poor wretch like Tolki now in this iron use would have returned to set Rama before you?

Soratha 12.

All, says Tulsi, who make a vow and listen with reverence to Bharat's acts shall assuredly acquire a great devotion R-50 the securing his common I and his blessing, he sent for a great astrologic and fixed the day, and then devortly placed upon the through his load's sandals.

Stoke 311

Chaupdi.

After bowing his head at the feet of Rama's mother and the gurn, and receiving the commands of his lord's sandals, the champion of righteoneness made for himself a hus of leaves at Nandicams, and there abode, with his heir gathered up into a knot on his head, attired in hermit's drove, and his couch of grave spread in a cave in the earth, lovingly practising the austerities of religious life in food, drees, posture, fasting and prayer ; discarding in thought, word and deed, as of no more value than a broken blade of grass, all clothes and ad roments and every luxury and enjoyment. The city of heaven envied the capital of Avadh, and the god of riches was confounded at the sight of Danarath's wealth ; vet in that city Bharat dwelt as indifferent as a bee in a garden of champa trees." A man so highly blest as to be enamoured of Rama spurus like vomit all Lakshmi's delights.

Dokd 312.

This is no such great achievement for Bharzt, the very shrine of the love of Riama; even the chiral and the swan are models in their way, the one of marrellous constancy, the other of discrimination.

Chaupdi.

Day by day his body graw thinner, but his faster and vigour were not diminished, and the beauty of his face remained the same. Nourished by an ever-incressing derotion, his virtue wared stronger and his soul was unclouded: as the waters decrease in the brightness of the autum, but the reeds apring up and the lotures blossom. His transition of the control, plety, fasting and prayer were files star in the pure heaven of Bharat's soul: his faith like the pole-star, the return from exile as the full moon, his character exemplazance of the Lord as the glistening milk-way.

⁻¹ Nandigrams, now contracted to Nandganw, is a few miles from Ayothya.

² Though the champs bears a very sweet-scented flower, it is said that no bee ever sucks it.

his devotion a fixed and unsallied moon shiring over clear amilists spalary of stars. All the greatest of poets would fail to describe Bharat's compoure, wisdom and unganzimity, his faith, his impassibility, and the perfect splendour of his virtues; not even Seshuág, Gaoes and Saraveti could stain to them.

Dalid 313.

Paying daily homage to his lord's sandals, his affection was greater than his heart could contain: he constantly referred to them in the disposal of all matters of state,

Chaupdi

His body quivering with emotion. Sits and Itima in his heart, their names spon his tonges, and with tears in his eyes. Itima, Lakshman and Sits dwelt in the forest, but Bhoatt dwelling in the palace endured the bodily penance. Every one after considering both sides sold that Bhoat was in every way praiseworthy. The religious were absoluted who beard of his fasting and penance; the king of saints, who saw his condition, was put to shame. Bhastis mode of life was otherly body, wweed and charming, and his cases of every blessing; it removes the grievous distress of this sisful age; it she sum to dispute the darkness of the sisful age is the sum to dispute the darkness of the great delation; the lion to quell the elephant host of sin the pucifier of every kind of affiliation the joy of the faithful; the liberator from the borden of existence the evence of the ambresia of Hama's love.

Chhand 13.

If thank had ever been born, fall of the ambrosis of devotion to livms and Sits who would have practical each self restraint and pennace, such composure, patience and rigorous fasting, transcending every imagination of the saint? What in legardary disguise would have removed our burning sorrows and poverity, our strapages and sig. What poor wretch like Tolds now in this from age would have ventured to set flame before yea?

Soratiá 12.

All, says Tulsi, who make a row and listen with reverence to liberat's acts shall awaredly acquire a great devotion to the lest of Site and Rams and a distaste for the pleasures of life.

[Thus emieth the look entitled AVODITA, composed by Tulis [Ms for the lestowal of pure windom and tentinence being the second desent! into the holy lake of Rama's deeds,' that electures from every defilement of the world.)

BOOK III THE FOREST

THE FOREST

Sanskrit Invocation.

I HEVERISCE the Brálmanic race; the very root of the tree of piety; the full moon of the see of intelligence; the jorgiver; the sun of the lotus of secticism; the destroyer of sin; the dispeller of darkness; the healer of distress; the most asspicious companious in the high hevere of wisdom, which scatters the thick clouds of delasion; the sin cleaning; the beloved of king Riams.

I worship him, whose body resembles a cloud teaming with abundant delights; the yellow-apparelled; the beautiful; the hero with how and arrows in hand and well-fitted quiver gleaming by his side; with the large lotte syea; the long tresses of whose him are bound into a knot on his bead, all glorious to behold; the way-farer secompanied by Sitt and Lakshiman, the charmer of charmers.

Sorathá 1.

O Umú, the saints, who are learned in Rama's mysterious qualities, enjoy peace of mind; but fools, we are Hari's enemies and have no love for religion, reap only delusion.

Chaupai.

I have sang to the best of my ability the isocomparable and charming affection showe by the citizens and fibrart: bearken now to the all-holy acts of the Lord, that he wrought in the forest, to the delight of gods, men and saints. Once upon a time Ráms picked some lovely flowers and with his own hands made a wreath, with which he reverently decked Sita. As she sat in her glory on the crystal rock, the son of the king of the gods, took the form of a crow and wickedly thought to make trial of Rimm's might, like an ant so imbedie of mind as to attempt to sound the depths of ocean. With its besk it his Sita in the foot and few wavy, the foolish crow, in its mitter stapidity. The blood flowed; Raghundyak naw it and made ready his bow and acrow, skabined meraly of reeds?

I Jayanta, the son of ladra.

² In the Sansket Ramirana this incident of the crow forms the subject of the 105th canto of the Apodhya Kand, Correso's chillon,

Dobd 1.

The All-merciful Rams, ever full of compassion for the poor, even he it was upon whom the wicked wretch came and played this trick.

Chaupái.

The divine arrow, winged with a charm, sped forth; the crow in terror took to flight and assuming his proper form went to his father, who would not shelter him, as he was Rama's enemy. He was in despair, and as paniestricken in soul as was the Hishi Durvasas by the terror of Vishou's discus. Weary and worn with fear and remorse, he traversed the realm of Brahma, the city of Siva and every other sphere; but no one even asked him to sit down : who can befriend an enemy of Rama's? Hearken Garur : his own mother becomes his death; his father is changed as it were into the king of the infernal regions! : ambrosia turns to noison: a friend does him all the harm of a hundred enemies : the Ganges is converted into the Vaitarani?, and all the world burns botter than fire-mark me. brother-when a man opposes Rams. When Narad saw Jayanta's distress, being tender-hearted and good, he took pity on him and sent him straight to Rams. There he cried . Save me. O thou that art the suppliant's friend!" In terror and confusion he went and clasped his feet, crying " Quarter, quarter, O merciful Raghurái! Thy might imm-asurable, and immeasurable thy majesty; in ignorance of mind, I knew thee not. I have reaped the fruit of my own actions; now my Lord, succour me, for to thee I have come for refuge." When the Mercifal heard this most piteous appeal, he dismissed him Bhavani, with the loss of one eye.

Sorathd 2.

Although in his infatuation he had committed such an offence that death was his due, the Lord had compassion upon him and set him free; who is so merciful as itaghabir?

Chaupdi.

Ráma stayed on at Chitra-kut and performed many acts that were like the scriptures or ambrosia for excellence.

¹ Someon, "the destroyer," here denotes Yama, the ledian Flath.

The Yaitaram is the Hinds Styr, or sizer of helt, which the dead have to cross before entering the infarnal regions. It is represented and impetaces and fifthy torrent, fall of blood, hair and bonce and every the of importing the state of the principles.

At last, he thought to himself—"There will be a crowd here, now that every one knows of me." So the two trothers with Sita took leave of all the saints and went on their way. When the Lord drew near to Atri's hermitage, the holy man was rejoiced at the news, and quiering in every limit he aprang up and ran to meet him. On seeing him. Raims advanced horriedly and was falling to the ground before him, but the saint took him to his besom. Both wept tear of affection. At the sight of Raims's beauty, his eyes were gladdened and he reverently conducted him to his cell, where doing him every honour he addressed him in gracious terms and offered him roots and freits such as his soal reliable.

Sorothá 3.

As the Lord took his seat, the great saint supremely wise, gazed with streaming eyes upon his beauty, and joining his hands in supplication he thus hymned his praise:—

Chhand 1.

" I reverence thee, the lover of the devout : the merciful. the tender-hearted : I worship the lotus feet, which hestow upon the unsensual thine own abode in heaven. I adore thee, the wondrously dark and beautiful; the mount Mandar to churn the ocean of existence; with eyes like the full blown lotus; the dispeller of pride and every other vice; the long-armed hero of immeasurable power and glory : the mighty Lord of the three spheres, equipped with quiver and how and arrows; the ornament of the Solar race ; the breaker of Siva's bow ; the delight of the greatest sages and saints; the destroyer of all the enemies of the gods ; the adored of Kamader's foe (i. e., of Sirs); the reverenced of Brahmi and the other divisities; the home; of enlightened intelligence ; the dispeller, of all erect Lakshmi's lord ; the mine of felicity ; the salvation of the saints I worship thee with thy spouse and thy brother. thyself the beloved younger brother of Eschi's lord. Men. who unselfishly worship thy holy feet, sink not in the ocean of existence, tost with the billows of controversy. They who in the hope of salvation, with saldard passions, ever

I This epithet is a permiss one; but it would arm to be intended s'untly as a periphrasis for Upontea, the lower loden, a we'l-known title of Vishnu, who, in the dwarf incarnation, was born as a sou of hosping a judga, here called "achie bord," being accounted the client of harvings a mosdelightedly' worship thee, having discarded every object of sense, are advanced to thy own sphere in heaven. I worship thee, the one, the mysterious Lord, the unchangeable and omnipresent power, the eternal governor of the world, the one absolute and noiversal spirit; the joy of all men day after day. I reverently adore thee, the king of incomparable beauty, the lord of the earth-born Sita; be gracious to me and grant me devotion to thy lotus feet." They who reverently repeat this bymn, full of faith in thee, will undoubtedly attain to thy heaven.2

Dolld 2.

Again with bowed head and folded hands the saint made supplication and cried, ' Never, O Lord, may my soul abandon thy lotus feet.

Chaupái.

The smiable and modest Sits clasped Apasuva's by the feet with frequent embraces. The soul of the Rishi's wi was filled with joy; she gave her her blessing and seate her by her side. Then arrayed her in heavenly robes an jewels which remained ever bright and beautiful. In simpl and affectionate phrase the saintly dame spoke and instruct ed her in matters of wifely duty. " Hearken, royal lady mother, father, brethren and friends are all good in limited degree ; but a husband, Vaidehi, is an unlimited blessing; and vile is the woman who worships him not Courage, virtue, a friend and a woman are four things that are tried in time of adversity. Though her lord be old diseased, important and poor, blind, deaf, passionate and utterly vile, yet even so the wife who treats him with disrespect shall suffer many torments in hell. Her one duty, her one fast and penauce consist in a devotion of body, word and thought to her husband's feet. There are four kinds of faithful wife in the world, as the Vedue, Paranas and saints all say. The best is so firmly settled in mind that she could not even dream of there being any other man living : the next regards another's husband as her own brother or father, or son ; she who is restrained by thought of duty and consideration for her family is said in Ayothya Kani in one recension of the Saintrit Landyons.

A Mada is here the instrumental case of med, 'delight' 2 The whole of this Chhand is in lowe and occasionally angrammatical Sanskrit, like the language of the Gathes in Bud thist inerature 3. The interview with Atri and Annuga is marrate | at the ent of the the scriptures to be a woman of low character; but reckon her the very lowest of all, who is restrained only by fear and want of opportunity. She who deceives her husband and carries on an intrigue with another man shall be cast for a hundred ages into the hell called the terrible. Who such a wretch as she, who for a moment's pleasure considers not the torment that shall endure through a hundred million the torment that shall endure through a hundred million lives ? Without any difficulty a woman attains to salvation, if only without guile she adhere to her duty as a faithful wife; while she, who lives to despite her spouse becomes widow while still a girl Soratha 4

An utterly wicked woman who is faithful to her bus-and has a happy fate when she dies; so sing the four feder and so too in these days sings Harrs poor friend, folsi, Hearken, Sita ; a woman will be kept faithful, if beinvoke your name, for you live Hama like your awa ife ; these words that I sav are for the good of the world " Charages

On hearing this Januki was overjoyed and reverently owed her head at her feet. Then the Allemerciful said to he saint, " With your permission I would go to some other rood. Continue to be ever gravious to me and knowing se to be your servant, cease not your kindness. On bearing is speech of the Lord, the clampion of righteogeness, the ies saint affectionately replied "O flams, you are he hose favour is desired by Brahma Niva, Sanat-kumara, od the other gods and by all the preachers of estration; in parsiculess the kindly, the friend of the helpless, who in modestly be speak me. Now I understand the cleverof lakel mi who has left every other god and worships m alone. Of a truth there is mone your equal. how then ald your goodress to other than it is? How can I, my ed, tell you what would be rist? hay marter, for youread a heart. Having thus sychon the saiet strong-minded he was, fremiled in every link and his exceptressed ith tears not o gazed upon the level

Theest :

Trembling exceed agin in exception be fixed to fering as also fit fries from t. It is speciency of basbeauve 1:-:1

penance that I have beheld the Lord, who transcends the sentes and every faculty of thought and reason." By prayer and meditation and religious observances, men attain to the crowning virtue of faith; therefore day and night, Toli-Dás sings the holy acts of Righabir.

Dald 3

Rama's preises remove the pollution of this wicked age, subdue the soul, are the source of beatitude; sof Rama continues gracious to all who reverently hear them.

Sorathd 5.

Grievous is the burden, of the sin of the world; nor religion, nor knowledge, nor meditation, nor penance avails against it; they are wise who discard trust in all else and worship Rama only.

The Lord of gods and nien and saints, after bowing his head at the lotus feet of the sage, proceeded to the wood. Riam first and after him his brother, in the garb of hermits all folls and complete. Between the two the incarnation of Lakhmis shone forth like Mays between God and the soul. The rivers and thickets and precipitous and mountain-passes all recognized their lord and made the way smooth for him. Wherever the divine Ragahrai passed, the clouds made a canopy in the heaven. As they went along the road the demon Viráuha met them. While he way yet coming Raghubir overthrew him, then at once he assumed beauteurs form; and Raima seeing him sorrowful dismissed him to his own ephere.\textit{1} Then the All-beautiful with his brother and Janakt visited the sage Sarabhanga.

Dohd 4.

At the sight of Ráma's lotus face the bee-like eyes of the saint reverently drank thereof; blessed indeed was Sarabhangs to have been born.

Chaupái.

Said the saint: "Hearken, gracious Raghubir, the swan of Sinkara's lake. I had taken my departure to the balls of the Creator, but I heard say that Rama is coming into the forest. Day and night I have been watching the road; now

I The encounter with Viradha, which is here so very baidly told, occupies more than a handred lines in Valaniki's poem.

² Válmíki represents Indra as having come with his chariot and horse to carry off the sage to Brabma's sphere at the very time of Pama's arrival.

I have seen my lord and my heart is at rest. I am deficient, my lord, in all that is good, but you have graciously acknowledged me as your humble servant. Now, sire, I have no request to make; I have accomplished my you, O ravioler of the soul of the fathful, to wait in especiation of the suppliant's friend thill saw you and then to discard my body. I have practised mediation, sertifice, prayers, peasons and Latting, and have received the gft of faith as a been of the lord. In this manner with his fourest pile all ready prepared, saint Sarabhanga has eat and waited, with a heart freed from every statediment.

Doká 5.

May the Lord, whose body is dark of time as a combre raincloud, incarnate in form as the divine Rims, dwell for ever in my soul together with Sits and his brother ! "

Chaupăi.

When he had thus said, the fire of his devotion consumed his body, and by Hāme's favour he accorded to Vaiknath. The saint was not absorbed into the divinity for this reason, that he had already resolved the mysterious gift of faith.² When the assembled Rishis new the great axint's iranslation, they were mightly rejoiced at heart and all broke orth his hymeso of praise. Glory to the champion of the numbe, the fountain of nercy. Then Ragbandath went on auther into the forest, and a great company of boly men with him. Seeing a heap of boors, he asked the saints about them and was moved with much compassion. "I now, but why ask, Master? You are all seeing and know ren our thoughts. These are all saints whom the d-mon oats have devoured." On hearing this, Raghubir's eyes illed with tears.

Doha 6.

He raised his arms and vowed to rid the earth of emons: then gladdened the saints by visiting them all in arm at their hermitages.

I According to Valmiki it was not Varkouth, but Brahma's sphere, to high he was translated $110, 36.

I The reward of faith (Abakto) is the admission to the actual presence

.

. 340

^{3.} The reward of faith (Abakiv) is the admission to the actual presence the dilutarity in the sphere where he specialty region. Absorption lies the ideal implies the estimation of individual existence and individual constructs, and therefore, though the average have of many filled sects, and the soft those who cheren's pre-main larve for any particular thousand in the contract of the contract

Chaupai.

Baint Agaetya had a learned disciple, by name Butikehna devoted to God ; in thought, word and deed one of Rims's faithful servants, who had never even dreamt of any other hope or divinity When he heard of the Lord's approach, he rushed out harriedly, full of longing desire : "O God, the compassionate Rignhrari will be gracious to even a wretch like me. The holy Rang and his brother will receive me as their own servant. I have no seared confidence of heart, no faith, nor command over self, nor wisdom of intellect; no communion with saints, no practice in meditation, prayer, or vigil, and no steadfast devotion to his lotus feet ; only the promise of the All-merciful : ' He is my friend who goeth to none other.' To-day my eyes will be blest with the sight of the lotus-faced, the deliverer from the bondage of existence." The saint. philosopher as he was, was so utterly overwhelmed with love that his state, Bhavani, was beyond all description. He could not see his way either in this direction or in that, nor remember who he was, or where he was going ; at one time he would turn and go back, at another would dance and sing song of praise. The mint's love and faith waxed vet more vehement as the Lord watched him stealthily from behind a tree. Then Raghubir, who removes all the troubles of the world, after witnessing his exceeding devotion, manifested himself his soul. The saint was struck motionless in the middle of the road, and his body bristled like the jack-fruit with every hair on end Then Raghanath drew near, rejoicing to witness the emotion of his servant, and tried many ways to rouse him ; but he neither awoke nor derived say happiness from the vision; till Rama doffed his kingly guise and mentally revealed himself as the four-armed god. The saint thereupon started up in alarm, like a poor snake that has been robbed of its jewel; but seeing before him the dark-hued Rams with Sits and his younger brother, the abode of delight, he fell like a dog at his feet, drowned in love and supremely happy. With his strong arms he took and lifted him and clasped him to his bosom with the ntmost affection. As he embraced the saint, the All-merciful showed forth like a tamd'a tree clasped by a tree of gold: and the saint as he gazed on Rama's face stood so still that you would take him for a figure painted in a picture.

Doha 7.

At last the saint growing bolder at heart, after again and again clasping his feet, conducted the Lord to his hermitage and did everything in his honour.

Chaupdi.

Said the saint : " Hearken, Lord, to my supplication : but how can I hymn thy praise? Thy greatness is immeasurable and my wit is scant, as meffectual as a fire-fly in the presence of the sun, I adore without ceasing the divine Raghobir, with body dark of hus as a string of lotuses, with his knotted hair for a crown and an anchorite's dress for his robe, with how and arrows in hand and quiver by his side. A fire to consume the dense forest of delusion, a sun to animate lotus growth of the saints, a lion against the elephant herd of demons, hawk to scatter the birds metempsychosis. may be ever protect us with eyes bright as the lotus; apparelled with glary ; the moon of Sita's partridge-like eyes; the swap to the lake of Siva's soul ; the broad-chested, strongarmed Rams, him I adore. A Garur to devour the sernent of doubt ; the queller of violence, wrangling and pain ; the conqueror of death ; the delight of the company of beaven ; the home of compassion, may be ever protect us. At once bodiless and embodied, like and unlike, endowed with form and formless; transcending all thought, speech and perception ; pure, all-pervading, faultless, illimitable, Rama, the loosener of earth's burdens, him I adore. A forest of trees of Paradise for his faithful people; the dispeller of passion, avarice, pride and lust; the All-beautiful; the bridge to cross the ocean of life, the champion of the Solarrace, may be ever protect us. With unlimited might of arm, the home of strength ; the true disperser of the manifold impurities of this iron are: the shield of righteonsness; the giver of delights, the assemblage of all good qualities; may be, my Rama, ever grant us prosperity. Though he be passionless, all-pervading, eternal, and ever dwelleth in the hearts of all ; yet in his character of the wood-roaming conqueror of Khura, with his brother and bride, may be abide in my thoughts They who understand know him to be the Lord, though embodied, the bodiless ruler of the soul, the lotus-eyed sorereign of Kosala; then make thy abode in my heart, O Rama. Never be this sentiment forgotten : I am his servant and Raghupati is my Lord." Hims was pleased at heart on hearing the saint's speech, and in his delight pressed him again to his become; "Know, O Sint, that I am highly gratified; ask any bone and I will grant it you." Said the wint: "I have never begard a bone, one can I discorn between tree and false. Whatever seems good to you, O Righorái, this bestow upon me, for you are your severant's benefactor." I give you steadfast faith, effecuted, and wisdom, and make you a storehouse of all virtue and knowledge." I have received, my lord, the boon that you have given, now grant me wown with.

Dala 8.

O my lord Itams, with your brother and Janaki, yourself equipt with how and arrows, for ever abide like the moon in the heaven of my soul."

Chaupdi.

'So be it,' eaid Lak-hm's lord, as he joyonsly started on his with to the Richi Agretya. "It is a long time since I last ew my garu, and since I came to live in this hermitage; now, my lord, I will go and see him with yon; I am not putting you under any obligation." The Fountsin of mercy saw through the saint's craftiness, and both brothers smiled as they took him with them. Discoursing on the excellence of faith in himself the king of the gods arrived at the saint's hermitage. Suitshon at once went to the gure and after prostrating himself thas addressed him: "My lord, the son of the sovereign of Kostal, the refige of "My lord, the son of the sovereign of Kostal, the refige."

^{1.} Tails Disks theory as the grancipal that should regulate man's prayer to Henrica is enforced by the example of the famous agest and secrits, which were the properties of the famous agest and secrits, which were the subject to sport the subject of the second secret parallel is afforded by the teaching of the great English moralist of the last century as inculcated in the following lunes:—

[&]quot;Yet when the scene of sacred presence fires, And strong devotion to the skire aspires. Four forth thy fervour for a healthful mind, Obedient passions and a will redigord. For love which scarce collective men can 61, For patience, avereign of er ransmuted ill, For faith, that -paning for a happier seat-counts dest kind nature's signal of retreat."

Detachment from the world, subjugation of the passions, lore for the dividity, patience under suffering, and, to crown all, an unbestuding fails are the highest bosons that man can secure; the last being followed after death by the beautife vision of the gotherd, a joy for all extently, an extend patient patients of the gotherd and will asset flushed; and all will have Got when the patients of the gother followed in the gother followed and will asset for the gother followed and will have followed the gother followed the gotter followed the gother followed the gotter followed the gother followed the

the world, has come to see you, even Risma, with his brother and Visidhi, to whom, sir you make your prayer night and day." As comes he heard thus, Agustya started up and ran, and at the sight of Hari, his eyes filled with tests. The two brothers fell at the saint's holy feet, but he took and clasped them to his become with the utmost affection. After courtecously enquiring of their welfare, the holy sage conducted them to a seat and then again did all homes, to his lord, saying: "There is no other man so blessed as I am." So long as the other hermits staved, their delight was to ayaz unou the root of isy.

D-140

As he sat in their midst with their eyes all fastened upon his person, they seemed like a bevy of partridges gazing on the autumosl moon.

Chaupai.

Then said Raghabir to the saint : "My lord, nothing is hid from you ; you know why I have come, and therefore, sire, there is no need to inform you. Give me now some charm by which I may destroy the persecutors of the saints." The sare smiled when he heard the lord's speech: " You ask me, but what do I know? By virtue of my devotion to you. O destroyer of sin. I understand a little of your greatness. Your delusive power is a vast fig! tree, its clustering fruit the countless multitude of worlds, while all things spimate and inspimate are like the insects that dwell inside, and think their own particular fig the only one in existence. This fruit is devoured by hareh and inexocable fate, but even be trembles in fear of you You, sire, are the sovereign of all the spheres, and you ask of me, as though you were only a man. O fountain of mercy, I beg this boon ; dwell in my beart Lakshmi and your brother, and grant me sleadfast faith, piety, fellowship with the saints and unbroken love for your lotus feet. Though you are supreme spirit, indivisible and enternal, beyond the reach of perception, the adoration of the saints, yet I declare and recognize your incarnation, and again and again adore the embodiment of Brahm and Rati. You always exalt your own servants, and

A The word in the text is down, which represents the familiar is defined glomerata. It bears large clusters of fruit, and every elugic fig in very cluster is atward full of insects.

1

my Lord." Rims was pleased at heard on hearing the saint's speech, and in his delight pressed him sight to become: "Know, O Sund, that I am highly gratified as any hoon and I will grant It you." Still the sint: "I have neare begged a hoon, or can I discern letters and false. Whatever werm good to you, O Rightarii, this testow upon me, for you are your severant's bendestor," "I give you steadfust faith, efficientful, and windom, and make you a storehome of all wirtne and knowledge." I have received, my lord, the boon that you have given, now you had, the boon that you have given, now you had.

Dohd 8.

O my lord flams, with your brother and Janski, yourself equipt with how and arrows, for ever abide like the moon in the heaven of my soul."

Chaupdi.

"So be it, said lakthmi's lord, as he joyously started we wish to the lithis Agartya. "It is a long time since I sat saw my gown, and since I came to live in this hermisage; now, my lord, I will go and see him with you! I am not putting you note any obligation." The Fountain of mercy saw through the saint's cratiness, and both brother sainled as they took tim with them. Discoursing on the excellence of faith in himself the king of the gods arrived at the saint's hermitage. Saitkhnas at once went to the guru and after prostrating himself that addressed him: "My lord, the son of the sovereign of Konsia, the refige of

... t. ... 4.4

I. Tulai Dav's theory as the principal that should regulate must prayer to Heaven it enforced by the example of the famous segre and sector, whom he to frequently brings where he reads and the same and the sectors are the property of the [&]quot;Yet when the scene of secred presence first. And strong devotion to the site applies. Pour forth thy ferrour for a beattful mind, Obellent passions and a will resigned. For love which scarce collective man can fit, Par patience, soweredge of extransmitted ill. For faith, that -panting for a happier seat-counts least kind nature's signal of retreat."

Detachment from the world, subjugation of the passions, for for the darking patience under suffering, and, to crown all, an unbeditating fails are the fighest bouns that man can secure; the last being olihored site death by the beatific vision of the gotherd, a juy for all contents of the patient paramony, in which God will now fluently, and it will know God lasting harmony, in which God will now fluently, and it will know God illusion is produced which has subjugated all classes of existence. The senses and the objects of the sames, as far as the mind can reach, are all a delasion, brother; understand that. Now learn its divisions: they are two, tin, knowledge and ignorance; the one utstay bad and calamiton, which forces the principle of life down into the pit of transmigration; the other, the power by virtue of which the world is created, being sent by God, and having no attempth of life. Moreologie, in which there is no particle of self-conditionness, sees the supreme spirit equally in all things; and he, brother, is to be reckoned chief of stoics, who shandoms fortune, and the three elements of which the universe, is composed as if of no more account than a blade of grass.

Dold 12.

That is to be called soul which, through the power of delusion, does not recognize itself as being really God!; God the giver of bondage and of deliverance, the head of all things, the sender forth of delusion, the one goal.

Chaupái.

After piety, asceticism; and after ascetic meditation knowledge; and knowledge, as the Vedas declare, is the giver of salvation. But that at which I melt more quickly, brother, is faith, which is the blossing of my votaries ; it stands by itself without other support, and is above all knowledge whether spiritual or profune. Faith, brother, is an incomparable source of happiness, and only to be acquired by the favour of a saint. But I will explain the means towards it, the easy path by which men may find me. In the first place, an exceeding devotion to Brahmans and in every action a close adherence to scriptural presoription. Secondly, the fruit of this will be detachment from the world, and then will spring up a delight in my worship. The nine kinds of faith as exercised by the ears. &c., will strengthen; there will be an exceeding love in the soul for my manifestations, a great affection for the lotus feet of the saints, a persistency in prayer-in deed and in heart as well as in tongue -and faithfulness in service done to one's guru, or father and mother, or family, or loads and masters, knowing it to be really done to me.

¹ Or it may be thus translated: 'That is to be called soul, which doubts regarding itself whether it be a delusive manifestation or really God' this, Ragharái, is the reason why you consult me. There is, my lord, a very oharming and holy spot called Pancharati, Sanctify the whole Dandaka Gorest, in which it is, and relieve it of the saint's grivous carse, I by taking up your abode there, Riams; and thus show mercy to all the saints. On receiving his permission, Rāma set out and quickly arrived at Panchavati.

'n

Dob4 10

After meeting the king of the vultures² and warmly renewing old friendship, Rúma stayed near the Godávari, where he made himself a thatched cottage.

Chaurdi.

From the time that Rama took up his abode there, its said lived happilly and without fear. The mountains, woods, rivers and lakes were sufficed with beauty and day by day grow yet more exceedingly lovely. The many birds and dere buzzing. Not even the seepent-king would be able to describe the forest, in which the glorious Rama had manifested himself. One day, as the Lord was sitting at many latester than the seepent with the se

Doha 11.

Instruct me, my lord, in all the difference between fied and the soul, that I may be entirely devoted to your feet and free from grief, ignorance and error."

Chaupdi.

"I will explain the whole matter in brief; hearken, brother, with attention of mind and soal. It is from egoism and distinctions between mine and thine, that the

I The curse had been pronounced by Bhárgura, whose durghter Ablibad been violated by Danda, so of Rubardau, who was then hing of courtry. His populous realm at once became a wild forest waste, inhabital only but wild beast and demond.

oy who wars and demons.

2 The interview with the rulture-king dafain, thus levely despatched in two larse, occupies the whole of the 20th canto in the canakint array-king. It was not this occasion that he made the promise to privet a/a which subsequently cost him his life, expects to take his case, a beggar who expects honour, a spendthrift who hopes for wealth, a predigate who hopes for beaven, or an avaridious case who expects renown, these are four decemens, men who would expect milk from milking the sir." Again she turned and came to Riams, but he sent her back once more to Lakthuman. Said Lakthuman, "The bridegroom for you must be a mus lest to all senses of shame." Then in a fary she went to Rams, revealing herself in a phape of terror Ragharái, seeing that Sita was frightness mades aign to his hvother;

Dohd 14.

And Lakshman with the greatest case struck off her nosel and ears: her hands he sent to Ravan in defiance.

Chaupdi.

Without nose and ears she was as hideous to look upon as a mountain flowing with torrents of red ochre. She went mosning to Khara and Dushan : " A curse, a curse, I say, on your manhood and strength, brother." They questioned and she told them all. When they heard, the demons gathered an army, and a swarming multitude of fiends rushed forth like so many winged mountains of darkness, on diverse vehicles, of diverse shapes, armed with diverse weapons, terrible and beyond number. At the head went Surpa-nakhá in hideous guise, without ears and nose. Many earful omens of ill occurred, but the host heeded them not. seing all death-doomed. They shouted, they defied the nemy, they leaped in the sir, their captains inspected the anks and rejoiced exceedingly. Said one, 'Capture the we brothers alive and then take and kill them and carry off he bride.' The vanit of heaven was filled with the dust of hem. Rama called his brother and said : "Take Janaki way to some mountain-cave; a terrible array of demons has ome; remain on your guard." Obedient to his lord's ommand he took his bow and arrows in hand and led Sita way. When Rama saw that the hostile force had drawn ear, he smiled as he strung his massive bow.

Chhand 3.

As he strong his massive bow and bound up his long air in a knot on his head, he seemed as it were a capphire

I The traditionary scene of this event is faid at Namk, which is supsed to derive its name from Kāsika, 'a nose' The suburb on the opposite ik of the river Goddvari is still called Funchavata.

While singing my pruises the body quivers, the voltrembles, the eyes flow with tears; and neither fust, prion nor deceit, finds a place in the soul; I am ever, brother, it the command of such a one as this.

Dohá 13.

I take up my abode for ever in the lotus heart of the who in thought, word and deed make their ferrent prayer to my incarnation.

Chaupdi.

On hearing the doctrine of faith and devotion, thus expounded, Lakshman was greatly rejoiced and bowed his head at his lords' feet. In this manner several days were spent in discourse on asceticism, wisdom, virtue and morality. One day Ravan's sister, Surpa-nakha, foulhearted and venomous as a serpent, came to Pauch and was excited by the sight of the two princes. A wor Garúr, must needs look after a handsome man, whether be brother father or son.2 In her excitement she c not contain herself, life the sun-stone that melts at sight of the sun. Having assumed a beautiful form. went to the Lord and with many smiles thus addres him: "There is not another man like you, nor a wor like me ; there is a match that God has taken some pains make. I have searched the three suberes, but have found envelore in the world a man with beauty to eqmine. And for this reason I have till now remained virgin, but now that I have seen you I am fairly satisfied The Lord looked at Sits and said in reply: " My young brother is a bachelor." The demon's sister took the hi and went to Lakshman. He looked to his lord and said gentle tones : Hearken, fair lady, I am his servant ; is not right that you should be in subjection to sny on My lord is the mighty king of Kosala, and whatever b does is all done at his own pleasure. A servant wh-

I year, the word here rendered develope, is one of the system of littled philosopy. He chief and no to teach the means by which is man out may a train complete union with the beginner man of the system of the word of the system of the system of the word of the system of the sys

I That is to say apparently, whatever his are may be, whether he be of the same age or old enough to be a father, or young esough to be a sec-

Doha 15.

When they had recovered themselves they made a rush, for they knew the strength of their for a not shifts and weapons of all kinds began to rain upon Ráms. But Raghubir cleft them in twain, making them of no more account than so many seamons seeds, and then drawing the bowstring to his ear he let fif his own arrows.

Chhand 5-6.

Then the terrible arrows sped forth, hissing like many supports. The holy Iliana waxed wrath in battle; his arrows flew of exceeding sharpers. When they saw his thatis so keen, the demon leader starred to flight; but the three brothers become forious; 'Whoever runs from the field I will alay with my own hand; let him stay then and make up his mind to die.' Wespons of diverse kinds best upon him from the front, and the ford perceiving that the toway sexcedingly furious fitted an arrow to his bow. He let fly the huge bolts; the hidsons demons were cut too ways exceedingly furious fitted an arrow to his bow. He let fly the huge bolts; the hidsons demons were cut to pieces; bodies, heads, arms, hands and feet were sealered shoat all over the ground. The shrill arrows struck; like monostics the bodier fall. The leaders had their frames out into a hundred pieces, yet they stood up again by power of angio. Many arms and head flew through the sir and headless tranks ran to and fro. Klite, crows and Jacksh made an awful sud borrible wrangling.

Chhand 7.

Jackals wrangled; ghosts, goblins and demons made caps of the skulls; more writike devils clashed skulls together for music, and witches chanced. Rundublir's mighty arrows smote off the leaders' bolies, are man and head; a they fell on every side, but stood up egain to fight with terrible crise of 'artiks, strike.' Vultures flav wawy with men's entrails in their claws, goblins exampered off with hands that they had seized; one might fancy all the children of Battle-town were flying kites. The mighty champions by dead and vranguished, with mangled bodies. Seeing their army routed, Khars and Dúshan, with Trisirs and the other champions, stood at bary, and all at once demons imparable harled furiously aguinst laghbuly arrow and sprear, cleb, are, juvelin and dagger. In the twinking of an aye the Lord had warded of all his esemise" minifes and sent forth his own arrows, slaying all the demon leader, and sent on the demon leading.

rook encircled with flushes of lightning and with two snakes entwining its summit. As the Lord girded op his quiver by his side and clasped the bow in his mighty arm and fitted the arrow to the string, he glared with the glanes of a lion on a herd of elephants.

Sorathá 6.

The warriors came on with a rush, shouting 'zeize him, seize him,' for they saw that he was alone: the demons closed round upon him, but he stood as the rising sun.

Chaupdi.

And at the sight of his majesty they could not discharge their arrows; the whole demon host became powerless. Khara and Dushan summoned their minister and said: "This ornament of the human race must be some king's son. Nagas, demons, gods, men and saints of all sorts I have seen, conquered and slain ; but in the whole of my life-mark me my brethren all-I have never seen such beauty. Though he has disfigured my sister, so incomparable a hero is not worthy of death. 'At once put away and surrender your bride and return home alive, you and your brother.' Declare to him this that I have said and quickly come back with his answer." The heralds went and told Rams. He smiled to hear them and said : " I am a warrior by caste and am hunting this wood ; wretches like you are the game that I am tracking. I am not dismayed at the sight of the enemy's strength, but am ready to do combat with death himself. Though a man, I am the exterminator of the race of demons; and though a mere child I am the protector of the saints and the destroyer of the wicked. If there is no strength in you, turn and go home ; I will never turn my back upon the battle. If you have come up to fight, show now your cunning and dexterity; mercy to an enemy is the height of weakness." The heralds immediately went and repeated all this : Khara and Dushan's heart was on fire when they beard it.

Chhand 4.

Their heart was on fire and they cried: "Ruth spon him and seize him, ye mightly demon warriors, with year hows and arrows, close, pites, perags, sogmatras, mace and axes." The lord gave his bow one twang; in a moment, at the swife and terrible sound the demons were deafered and dismayed, they had no sense left in them.

Doha 17.

In her distress she threw herself down in the midst of the assembly with many tears and cries, " O Ravan, to think that you should live and see me thus treated?" Chaurds.

When they heard this, the assembly rose in confusion and took her by the hand and lifted her up and consoled her. Said the king of lanka : "Why do you not tell me what has happened? who has cut off your nose and ears?" "The sons of Dasarath, the lord of Avadb, very lions of men, have come to hunt the forest I understood that they were about ; they would rid the earth of demons, Relying on the might of their arm, O Ravan, the saints roam the woods without any fear. They are children to look at, but in fact resistless as Death himself, the most intrepid of archers, with many strings to their bow.! Both brothers are glorious with incomparable might, and have devoted themselves to the extermination of the wicked and the sellet of gods and saints. It's ne -for such is his name -is the very perfection of beauty, and with him is a young girl, whom the Creator has made the loveliest of the sex ; a hundred million Ratis would be no match for her. It is his younger brother who cut off my ears and nove and made a mock of me, when he heard I was your sister. When Khara and Dushan were told of this, they gave him challenge; but in an instant be slew the whole of their acmy." When he heard of the defeat of Khara, Dushan and Trisirs, the Ten-headed was on fire all over.

Dold 18. After consoling Surpa-nakhá and forcing himself to my much to her, he went to his palace to a great state of anxiety and had no sleep all night.

Chaupdi,

" Among gois, men and demons, serpents and birds, there is none who can withstand tny servante; and Khara and Dushan were my own equals in strength; who can have killed them, urless is to God himself? If God bar recome invariate, in order to rejoine the mints and relieve earth of its hurden, then if I go and fight against him and

In the word game-eron game is introded to be poderwood to the top name of the a virtual 2nd y a before as with ten shalls planted in the bresst of each of them. Though they fell to the ground, they rose again in their valour and joined in the fray, and would not die, but made the strangest night. The god's faered, when they saw the demons four-tene thousand in number, and the king of Arath alone: till the Lord perceiving alarm of gods and saint and having power over all illusion, wrought a prodigy, and while they were yet looking at one another be finished the battle, and the army of the enemy all periphed fighting.

Doha 16.

Ctying ' Ráma, Ráma,' as their soul left their body; they thus attained bestitude. In a moment the Fountain of mercy slew all his enemies by magic. The gods in their joy rained down flowers instruments of music sounded in the air, and with cries of 'Glory, glory,' they all departed, each in his own aplendid carriage.

Chaupái.

When Raghunath had vanquished his foes in the battle, gods, men and saints were all relieved from fear. Inkahman then brought back Sits. As she fell at her lord's feet, he took and rapturously clasped her to his bosom, and she fixed her gaze upon his dark and delicate form, but so vehement was her love that her eyes could never be satisfied. Thus the blessed Rama stayed at Panchavati, delighting gods and exints by the deeds that he did. But Surpanakha, when she saw the death of Khara and Dashan, went and called Rayan. In tones full of fury 'she cried: "You have lost all thought of realm and treasure; you drink and sleep day and night and do not consider that the enemy is at your gate. A kingdom without policy, wealth without religion, good works without consecration to Ilari, knowledge without discretion, these all bring no fruits save trouble to the student, the doer, or the possessor. An ascetic is quickly undone by attachment, a king by ill-counsel, wisdom by conceit, modesty by drinking, friendship by want of consideration, and good sense by pride : so goes the saying,

Soratha 7.

An enemy, sickness, fire, sin, a master and a serpent are never to be accounted trifles." So saying and with much isomentation beside she set to weeping. I was driven a distance of a hundred leagues! it is not well to quarted with him. Wherever I look, I see these two brothers, and my senses are utterly bewildered like a fly fascinated by a spider. Even if he be only a man you, he is a tremendous here, and opposition to him will do no good.

Dol.6 21

But can he possibly be a man, who was strong enough to vanquish Taraka and Subahu, who broke Siva's bow and slow Khata, Dushan and Tristra?

Chaupdi

Consider the walter of your family and go home. "When he heard this, he was furnous and abused him soundly: "You fool, you take upon yourself to reach me, as if you will not have the most and warrior my equal." In white which the most have worked to be a surface of the surface of su

Chant 8

My eyes will be rewarded with the eight of my best belored, and I shall be happy. I shall imprint upon my soulthefest of the Altenerella with Site too and his besther, Hari, the ocean of beattride, whose very wrath conferce salvations, who gives hamelf up entirely to the will of his worshippers, will with his own hands ft an arrow to the string and alse me.

Del4 22.

As he cans after me to seize me with his howard arrows. I shall ever and again turn and get a night of my lord : there is none else so thessed as I am." lose my life by an arrow of the Lord's, I shall escape further transmigration; prayer will not do for one like me of demon form ; this is the plan upon which I am absolutely determined. If he is only some earthly king's son, I shall conquer them both in battle and carry off the bride." He mounted his chariot and went off alone to the spot where Maricha was living by the sea-shore. Hearken now, Uma, to the delectable account of the device that Rama invented.

Dold 19. When Lakshman had gone into the wood to gather roots fruits and herbs, the gentle and joyous god said with a smile to Janak's daughter :

" Hearken, most lovely and amiable of faithful wives, I Chaupdi. am going to act a fantastic human part. Be you absorbed into fire until I have completed the destruction of the demons." As soon as Rams had finished speaking she pressed her lord's feet to her heart and entered into the fire, leaving only an image of herself, of exactly the same appearance and the same amiable and gentle disposition Lakshman did not know this mystery or that the god had taken any action. The Ten-headed approached Maricha and bowed his head, the selfish and contemptible wretch. When a mean creature bends, it is only to give more pair, like an elephant-gord, a bow, a snake, or a cat; the friendly speech of a churl is as portentous, Bhavani, as flowers that blossom out of season.

After doing him homage, Maricha respectfully enquired of him his business: "What is the cause, my son, that you have come so disturbed in mind and all sione ?

Ravan put the whole matter before him and addepresumptuously -- the wretch -- Do you for the purpose o deception assumed the form of a deer, and by this means, shall be able to carry off the princess." He replied is a Hearken Rayan; though in form as a man, this is the lord of all solmate and losnimate greation; there is fighting against him, my son ; if he kills, you die; and you live, it is be who gives you life. He is the principle Raghapati, who when he went to protect the saint's sarr fice, smote me with a pointless arrow, and in an interI was driven a distance of a hundred leaguast; it is not well to quarred with him. Wherever I look, I see these two brothers, and my senses are unterly bewildered like a fly faccinated by a spider. Even if he be only a man my son, he is a tremendous here, and opposition to him will do no rood.

Dol4 21.

But can he possibly be a msn, who was strong enough to vanquish Táraka and Subáhu, she broke Siva's bow and slew Khars, Dúshau and Trisira?

Chaurdi

Chhand 8

My eyes will be rewarded with the sight of my best Lelevel, and I shall be hoppy. I shall imprise upon my soul the feet of the All-mercial with Sits too and Lis brother. Harl, the ocean of heatitist, whose very wrath confers substainen, who gives humer! Op suttley! to the will of his worshippers, will with his ewe hands fr an arrow to the string and slays.

Deld 22.

As he rune after me to seize me with his toward arrows. I shall ever and again turn and get a wight of my lord t there is none else so blessed as I am."

Chaundi.

When the Ten-headed drew near to the wood, Maricha took the form of a deer, so beautifully spotted as to defy description, with a body of gold, all begangled with jewels. When Sita saw the wonderously beautiful creature clothed with loveliness in its every limb, she cried : "O Raghabir, hearken, kind sir, this deer has a most charming skin; I pray you, shoot it, most amiable lord, and bring me the hide." Thereupon Rams, who understood the meaning of it all, arose with joy to execute the purpose of the gods, Having marked the deer, he girded up his waistbelt, took his bow in his hand and trimmed his shapely arrows. Then the lord cautioned Lakehman : " Many demone, brother, roam the forest; take care of Sita with all thought and consideration and with force too, if occasion require it. The deer seeing the Lord, took to flight: Rams pursue with ready bow : even he, to whom the Veda cannot attain por Siva is able to contemplate, hastend in pursuit of mimic deer. Now close at hand, now fleeing at a distance at one time in sight, at another hid, alternately showing and concealing itself and practising every kind of wile, in this manner it took the Lord far away. At last Rama simed and let fly the fatal shaft; the deer fell to the ground with a terrible cry, first calling aloud to Lakshman, but afterwards mentally invoking Rama. As life ebbed, he resumed his natural form and devoutly repeated the name of Rams, who ia his wisdom recognizing his laward love, gave him such a place in heaven as saints can scarcely attain to.

Doha 23.

The gods raised down abundant flowers and hymned the Lord's high virtue: "Raghunath, the suppliant's friend, raises to his own sphere even a demon!"

Chaupái,

As soon as he had alain the monster, Reghabir refurned; the bow gleaming in his hand and the quiree by his When Sits heard the agonizing cry, she called to Lakshman in the greatest alarm: "Go in haste, your bortles in some sad strait." Lakshman answere were because the world is amihilated, cannot be imagined as having falled into any difficulty." But when Sits urged him with saming words, Lakshman's recolution—for each was Hart's will

-was shaken; he made over charge of everything to the forest and its gods, and went after the Rabu of the moonlike Rayan. When the Ten-headed saw the ground vacant he drew near in the guise of an anchorite. He, for fear of whom gods and demons trembled and could neither sleep by night nor eat food by day, even that Ravan came looking this side and that, as furtively as a cur bent on thieving. After be had turned his steps. Garur, to this vile course, not a particle of his majesty, or intellect, or strength of body was left in him. After repeating a variety of legends and moral sentiments, he had recourse to threats and blandishments. Said Sita, "Hearken, reverend Father; what you say is hateful to me." Then Ravan showed himself in his proper form; and she was terror-stricken when he declared bis name. But plucking up all her courage she eaid: "Wretch, stay as you are; my lord is at hand. Like as a hare that would wed a linness, so have you woold your own destruction, O demon king," On hearing this speech the Ten-headed was furious, though in his heart he delighted to adore her feet.

Doh4 24.

Ravan angrily seized her and seated her in his chariot. As he took his way through the air, he was so agitated with fear that he could scarcely drive.

Chaupti.

" Ah I gallant Ragburai, sovereign of the universe, for what fault of mine have you forgotten mercy ? Ah I reliever of distress, health-giving sanctuary, sun of the lotuses of the Raghu race. Ah! Lakshman! this is no fault of yours: I have reaned the fruit of the temper I showed." Manifold were the lamentations that she uttered. " My affectionate and loving lord is far away ; who will tell him of my calamity; that an ass is devouring the oblation intended for the gods!" At the sound of Sita's worful lament every created being, whether animate or insnimate, was made sad. The vulture-king, too, heard her piteous cry and recognized the wife of the glory of Raghu's line, whom the vile demon was carrying away, as it were the ismons dun cow that had fallen into the hands of some savage, " Fear not, Sita my daughter, 1 will appibilate this monster." The bird darted forth in its fory, like a thurderholt isouched spainet a mountain. " Stop you villain, how dare you go on thus and

Chaupdi.

When the Ten-headed drew near to the wood, Marichatook the form of a deer, so heautifully spotted as to dely description, with a body of gold, all bespangled with jewels, When Sita saw the wonderously beautiful creature clothed with loveliness in its every limb, she cried : " O Raphubic, hearken, kind sir, this deer has a most charming skin; I pray you, shoot it, most amiable lord, and bring me the hide." Thereupon Rama, who understood the mesning of it all, arose with joy to execute the purpose of the gods, Having marked the deer, he girded up his waistbelt, took his bow in his hand and trimmed his shapely arrows. Then the lord cautioned Lakshman : " Many demons, brother, roam the forest; take care of Sita with all thought and consideration and with force too, if occasion require it." The deer seeing the Lord, took to flight : Rama pursued with ready bow : even he, to whom the Veda cannot attain. nor Siva is able to contemplate, hastend in pursuit of a mimic deer. Now close at hand, now fleeing at a distance at one time in sight, at another hid, alternately showing and concealing itself and practising every kind of wile, in this manner it took the Lord far away. At last Rama simed and let fly the fatal shaft; the deer fell to the ground with a terrible cry, first calling aloud to Lakshman, but afterwards mentally invoking Rama. As life obbed, he resumed his natural form and devoutly repeated the name of Rams, who in his wisdom recognizing his inward love, gave him such a place in heaven as saints can scarcely attain to.

Doha 23.

The gods rained down abundant flowers and hymned the Lord's high virtue: "Raghunáth, the suppliant's friend, raises to his own sphere even a demon!"

Chaupái.

As soon as he had slain the monster, Raghnbir returned:
the bow gleaming in his hand and the quiver by he side
When Sitt abeard the agonizing cry, she called to Lakbman in the greatest alarm: "Go in haste, your brother is some sad strait." Lakshman answered with month
"Hearken, mother i.he, by the play of whose eyebrace words world is annihilated, cannot be imagined as having faller into any difficulty." But when Sits naged him with tunniing words, Lakhman's resolution—for such was Hari's will

-was shaken; he made over charge of everything to the forest and its gods, and went after the Rahn of the moonlike Ravan. When the Ten-headed saw the ground vacant he drew near in the guise of an anchorite. He, for fear of whom gods and demons trembled and could neither sleep by night nor eat food by day, even that Ravan came looking this side and that as furtively as a our bent on thiswing. After he had turned his steps. Garur, to this vile course, not a particle of his majesty, or intellect, or strength of body was left in him. After repeating a variety of legends and moral sentiments, he had recourse to threats and blandishments. Said Sita, "Hearkey, reverend Father; what you say is bateful to me" Then llavan showed himself in his proper form; and she was terror-stricken when he declared his name. But plucking up all her courage she said : "Wretch, stay as you are; my lord is at hand. Like as a hare that would wed a honers, so have you woold your own destruction. O demon king " On hearing this speech the Tep-headed was fprious, though in his heart be delighted to adore her feet.

Dold 24.

Rayan angrily seized her and scated her in his charlot. As he took his way through the air, he was so agitated with fear that he could scarcely drive.

Chausdi.

" Ab I gallant Raghurai, sovereign of the universe. for what fault of mine have you forgotten mercy ? Ab ! reliever of distress, braith-giving sanctuary, sun of the lotones of the Ragbu race. Ab! Lakehman! this is no fault of yours: I have resped the fruit of the temper I showed." Manifold were the lamentations that she uttered. " My affectionate and foring lord is far away ; who will tell him of my calamitr : that an ass is derouring the oblation intended for the gode!" At the sound of Site's worful lament every created being, whether animate or than mate, was made sad. The vulture-king, too, heard her pricous cry and recognized the wife of the glory of Raghu's line, whom the vile demon was carrying away, as it were the famous don cow that had fallen into the hands of some ravage. "Fear rot, Fits my daughter, I will appihilate this moneter." The fird darted lorth in its fury, like a thurdertelt lenteled agairst a mountain. " Step yen villain, bem dare sen go en thes and take no heed of me." Seeing him bearing down upon him like the angel of death, Ravan paused and considered : "Is it mount Maináka? or the king of the birds! anyhow they both know my might, as also do their lords,"2 When he perceived that it was poor old Jatayn, he cried, "he shall leave his body at the shrine of my hands."3 At this, the vulture rushed on in a fury, crying : " Hearken, Rávan, to my advice; surrender Jánaki and go home in peace; if not, despite your many arms, it will turn out thus; Rama's wrath is like a fierce flame, and your whole house will be consumed in it like a moth." The warrior demon gave no answer. Then the vulture rushed wildly on and clutched him by the hair and dragged him from his chariot so that he fell to the ground. Again, having sheltered Sits, the vulture turned and with his beak tore and rent his body. For nearly half an hour the demon was in a swoon, then guashed his teeth with rage and drew his monstrons sword and out off Jatava's wings. The bird fell to the ground, calling upon Rama, and doing marvellous feats of courage. Then Ravan again seated Sita in the chariot and drove off in haste in no little alarm. Sita was borne through the air lamenting, like a frightened fawn in the power of a huntsman. Seeing the monkeys sitting on the rocks, she cried out Hari's name and dropt her scarf. In this manner he went off with Sits and put her down in the Asoka forest.

Dold 25.

Though he tried every kind of threat and blandishment, the monster could not succeed, and at last after exhausting all his devices he left her under the Asoka tree. With Rama's beauteous form impressed upon her heart, as he appeared when pursuing the mimio deer. Sits was incessantly invoking his name, "O Hari, Hari I"

Chaupdi.

When Raghapati saw his brother doming, he was reised with a new and greater fear : " O brother, have you left bila

there, so has be come to me to die by my band

I Mainaka is the only peak which is sail to have retained its wings when Indre elipped those of the other mountains.

² Mainaka's lord is the Orean, which Raran and the other demons as churned ; and Clarde, "the king of the birds," has Viebon for his hird, with whom fåran had always been at wat I That is to say, " as a man gree to a place of gi'grimage in order to d'a alone and come here against my order, though so many demons roam the forest? My mind misgives me that Sita is not at the hermitage." Lakshman clasped his lotus feet and cried with folded band: "Hearken, my lord, it is no fault of mine." When he found the hermitage bereft of Situ, he was as agitated as any common man, " Alas ! Janaki, my precious Sita, so beautiful and amirble, so divinely pious and devoted! " Lakshman did all he could to comfort him. As he went along, he questioned all the trees and flowers by the way: "O ye birds and deer, O ye swarms of bees, have you seen the fawn-eyed Sita? The wagtails, parrots, and pigeons ; the deer and fish ; swarming bees and clever cuckoos: the jasmine and pomegranate flowers; the lightning, the lotus, the autumn moon; the gliding serpent: the meshes of Varuna, how of Kamadeva; the awap, the elephant and the lion can now bear themselves praised; the cocoannt, the champs, and the plantain can now rejoice, without any doubt or misglying at heart.1 Hearken, Janaki, now that you are away, they are all us glad as if they had gotten a kingdom. How can I endure this cruelty at your hands; why do you not at once disclose yourself, my beloved ?" In this manner the lord searched and lamented, like a fond lover distressed by separation. Rama who has no wish ausatisfied, the perfection of bliss, the uncreated and the everlasting, acted the part of a man. Further on he saw the vulture-king lying, with his thoughts fixed on the prints of Rama's feet.

Doha 26.

The compassionate Raghubir laid his lotus bands upon his bead. At the sight of Rama's lovely face all his pain was forgotten,

Chaupdi.

And the vulture recovered himself and spoke as follows: "Henken Rams, remover of life's troubles. My lord, this is Ravan's doing; he is the wretch, who has carried off Janak's daughter. He took her away, sire, to the south, orying as I Tou different objects here mentioned from the Handa poor's stock in tried upon which be invariably downs for compartions when he withen to describe the chairm of a lovely woman a with clustering half like swarms of the chairment of the chairment of the chairment of the chairment of shakes of tights like, because the chairment of the chairment of like an clushast Asi, A.S. Now that this is gone, who received each of them the chairment of the chairment of the chairment of the chairment of the best themselves quoted as province.

pitesualy as an osprey. I have kept alive, my lord, only to see your now. O most merciful, I would depart." Said Rama : "Remain alive, father." He smiled and answered : "He, by the repetition of whose name at the hour of death the vilest sinner, as the scriptures declare, attains salvation, has come in bolily form before my eyes; what need is there, sire, for me to live any longer?" Ragharái's eyes filled with tears as he replied: "Father, it is your own good, deeds that have saved you. There is nothing in the world beyond the reach of those who devote their soul to the good of others. When you pass out of the body, father. ascend to my sphere in heaven. What more can I give you? your every wish is gratified." Dropping the form of a vulture, he appeared in all the beauty of Hari, bedecked with jewels and in gorgeous vellow attire, with dark-haed body and four mighty arms, and with his eyes full of tears he chanted that hymn of praise :

Chhand 9 "Glory to Rama of incomparably beauty; the bodiless, the embodied ; the veritable source of every bodily element; who with mightys arrows has broken the might of the arm of the ten-headed demon : the ornament of the earth. With his body dark as a rain-cloud, with his lotus face and his eyes large as the lotus flower, I uncessingly worship Rama the merciful, the mighty-armed, the dispeller of all life's terrors; of immeasurable strength; without beginning and unborn ; the indivisible ; the one ; beyond the reach of all the senses; the incarnate Govinda; the annihilator of duality; the profound in wisdom; the supporter of the earth; an everlasting delight to the soul of the saints, who practise the spell of Rama's name. I unceasingly worship Rama, the friend of the unsensual, the destroyer of lust and every other wickedness. He, whom the scriptures bymn under the name of the passionless Brahm, the all-pervading, the supreme spirit, the unbegotten; to whom the saints attain after infinite study and contemplation, pensace and abstraction; he the all-merciful, the all-radiant, the unapproachable, has now become manifest for the delight of the world. He who is at once inaccessible and accessible, like and unlike, the essentially pure, the unfailing comforter, whom ascetics behold only when they have laborious ly subdued their mind and senses; even Rams, the spouse of Lakshmi, who is ever at the command of his servants, though the lord of the three spheres, may be abide in my heart, the terminator of transmigration, whose praises make bure."

Daha 27.

After asking the boon of perfect faith, the vulture departed for Hari's sphere. Rama with his own bands performed his funeral rites with all due ceremony.

Chaupai.

The tender-hearted and compassionate Righmonkth, who shows mercy were on the undersering, between types with time, an unclean flash-sating bird, such a place in beavan as the greatest associate desire. Hearken, Uma; the most miserable of men are they who abandon Hari and become attached to objects of sense.

The two brother in their search for filts visited and examined many woods, tangled with creepers, dense with trees, and swarming with birds, deer, elephants and lions. As they went on their way they overthrew Kabandius, who declared the whole history of the carse. "Durvázat' cursed, me, but now that I have seen my tor'd feet, my sin has been blotted out." Harten, Gandharra; those two trouble Brahmans are dileptasing to me.

Dold 28.

They who without guile in thought, word and deed do service to the gods of earth, subdue unto themselves Brahma, Sira, myself and every other divinity.

Chaupái.

All Bahman, though he curse, best and aluxe you, is still an object of reverence; so declare the saints. All Ethman must be honoured, though devoid of every virtue and merit; but a Stidra never, though distinguished for all virtue and learning. No saying, he instructed him in his

I The reference to Durahas is observe. According to the legand as told by Valenth, Kabachia had been an executify youth by mane Doos, who had you have had been a second to the property of th doctrine and was pleased to see his devotion to his feet. When the beneficent Rama had given him beatitude, he passed on to the hermitage of Savari. When she saw that Rama had come to her abode, she remembered the saint's promise and was glad of heart. With lotus eyes, mighty arms, hair fastened up in a knot on their head, and a garland of wild flowers upon their breast, one dark of buc, the other fair, stood the two brothers. Savari fell and embraced their feet. She was so drowned in love that no speech came to her lips, but again and again she bowed her head at their lotus feet, then reverently brought water and laved their feet and finally conducted them to a seat of honour.

Dohd 29.

Then she brought and presented to Rama the most delicious fruits and herbs and roots, and the lord graciously ate of them, again and again thinking her.

Chaupái.

She stood before him with folded hands and as she gazed upon the Lord her love waxed yet more vehement. " How can I bymn thy praises, seeing that I am of meanest descen and of duliest wit : the lowest of the low and a woman to hoot; nay among the lowest of woman the one who is of all most ignorant, O sinless god," Said Raghupati : " Hearken, lady, to my words : I recognize no kinsmanship save that of faith ; neither lineage, family, religion, rank, wealth, power, connections, virtue, nor ability. A man without faith is of no more account than a cloud without water. I will explain to you the nine kinds of faith; hearken attentively and lay them up in your mind, The first step in faith is communion with the saints t the second a love for the legends relating to me;

Dold 30.

The third, -and incalculable step-devotion to the lotes feet of the guru; the fourth, singing my praises with a guileless purpose. Chaupdi.

- The fifth, as the Velas have expounded, prayer and the repetition, with an assered confidence, of mystic spells;

¹ Severa, in the feminine arrari, in strictly speaking, and the first tire name of any one particular param, but of a whole serses trian for work is probably encanted with seen, "a suspen," the eixth, self-governance, kindness, detachment from the world and in every action a loving and persevering piety ; the seventh, seeing the whole world full of me, and holding the saints in yet greater secount than myself ; the eighth, contentment with what one has, without ever a thought of spring out fault in others ; the ninth, a guileless simplicity towards all, and a hearty confidence in, me without either exultation or dejection. Verily, lady, whoever possesses any one of these, whether he be man or woman, rational or irrational, is my friend; and you have them all in the highest degree. The heavenly prize, which the greatest result of seeing me is something most marvellous; every creature at once attains its proper consummation. But lady, have you any tidings of Januki; tell me, fair dame, all that you know." "Go Ragbural, to the lake Pampa; there make friends with Sugrival; he will tell you all. You know it already my god Raghubir, yet have the patience to ask him." After again and again bowing her head at the Lord's feet, she lovingly repeated the whole story.

Chhand 10.

After epeating, the whole story, as she gazed on Haris face and imprinted bis lotus feet on her beart, she left ber body in the sacrificial fire and became absorbed in Hari's feet beyond return. O men, abandon all your religious observances, which are unrighteenmens, and your many sects, which yield only sorrow, and with all confidence (ays Tolsi Dás) lovingly embrace the feet of Risms.

Dohá 31.

He gave salvation to a woman of such low descent and so altogether born in sin as even this Savari was: feelish , indeed are they who desire peace of mind after forgetting such a lord.

Chaupái.

When they had left this wood, they went on their way Ráma and this brother, two lines among men, of immeasurable strength. The Lord, like a bereved lover, kept making lamentation and turning bis discourse to many lopies: "Observe, Latshman, the beauty of the forest;

I According to the Expektit Bámáyana it was not Savari, but Exhaudha, who directed Báma to apply to Sugriva whose heart is not moved to see it? The birds and dee all accompanied by their mates, seem to laugh and jee at me. When the deer see me and would accomper away the does cry: 'llave no fear, enjoy yourselves, for you are genuine deer, and it is only a golden deer that these poople have come to look for.' The female elephants at they take saide their lords, seem to be giving met caulien; 'The scriptures, however well studied, must be caulien; 'The scriptures, however well erred, is never to be depended upon; and a woman like the scriptures and the king, though you cherish her in your boson, is never thoroughly mastered.' See, brother, how besuiful the spring is; yet to me without my beloved it is frightful the spring is; yet to me without my beloved it is frightful.

Dold 32.

Love, finding me tortured by separation, powerless and absolutely alone, has made a raid upon me with the bees and birds of the forest. His spy has seen me with only my brother, and on his report the smorous god has, as it were, resolutely encamped agaist me with his army.

Chaupái.

The huge trees and tangled creepers are as it were il diverse pavilions that he has spread; the plantains an stately palms his pennons and standards, that none but it stoutest could see without amazement; the many kinds t different flowering shrubs are his warriors, arrayed in a their various kinds of panoply; the magnificent forest-tree that stand here and there, are the separate encampment of warrior chiefs; the murmaring cackoos are his infurist ed elephants, and the berons his bulls, camels and mules; the peacocks, chakors and parrots are his war horses; the pigeons and swans his Arab steeds; the partridges and quails his foot soldiers; but there is no describing the whole of Love's host. The mountains and rocks are his chariots, the waterfalls his kettle-drums, the chd:aks the bards that sing his praises, the garrulous bees are his trumpets and clarions, and the three kinds of wind his scouts. With an army complete in all its four branches, he goes about and exhorts every one. O Lakshman, they who can see Love's battle-array and stand firm, they are men of mark in the world. His greatest strength, lies in woman; any one who can escape her is a mighty champion indeed.

Daha 33.

Brother, there are three evils of surpassing strength, love, anger, and greed : in an instant they upset the souls of the wisest philosopher. The weapons of greed are desire and pride; of love, nothing but woman; while anger's weapon is harsh speech; so thoughtfu! sages have declared." Chaurdi.

O Umá! Ráma is without attributes, the lord of all animate and inanimate creation, and knows all secrets; yet be exhibited all the distress of a lover no less than the detachment and steadfastness of a philosopher. Anger, love, greed, pride, delusion, all are dissipated by the grace of Rama, and the only man superior to all this jugglery is he to whom the great conjuror has shown favour. I tell you, Uma, what is my conclusion ; the worship of Hari is real and

The Lord went on from there to the shore of the deep and beautiful lake called Pampa; its water as clear as the soul of the saints; with chirming flights of steps on each of its four sides ; where beasts of different kinds came as they listed, to drink of the flood, like crowds of beggars at a good man's gate. Dold 34.

Under its cover of dense leaves the water was as difficult to distinguish as is the unembodied supreme spirit under the weil of delusive phenomens. The bappy fish were all in placid repose at the bottom of the deep pool, like the days of the righteous that are passed in peace.

Chaupat.

Lotuses of many colours displayed their flowers; there was a buzzing of garrulous bees, both honey-makers and numble-bees; while swans and waterfowls were so noisy you would think they had recognized the Lord and were elling his praises. The geese and cranes and other birds were so numerous that only seeing would be believing, no vords could describe them. The delighted voice of so many centiful birds seemed as an invitation to the wayfarers, he saints had built themselves a house near the lake with agnificent forest-trees all round, the champa, the mdisari, be kadamb and tamdla, the pdiala, the kathal the didk

I That is to say, whom he has taken behind the scenes.

KISHKINDHA

Sanskrit Invocation.

BEAUTIFUL as the jamine or the lotus, of surpassing strength, store-houses of wisdom, all glorious and accomplished bowmen, hymned by the Yedas, benefactors of cows and Bráhmans, may they who appeared in the form of mortal men as the two noble sons of Raght, the champions of true religion, the wayfarers intent on their search for Sits, may they create us fairly Blessed are the pious scale, who ever imbile the occurs of half Rémar, name; nectar, the product of no ocean, but of Brahm himself, the utter exterminator of all the imparities of this sincial age, the imperitable, the quintessence of the beauty of blessed Sambha's moscille face, the ever ploticus, the remedy for all the diseases of life, the exquisitely week, the life of blessed Manki.

Soratha I.

How is it possible not to reverence Kévi, the home of Sambo and Bhaváni, knowing it to be the early birthplace of salvation, a treasory of knowledge and the destroper of sin. Dall indeed of soul is the man who worshipnot him, who when all the hosts of heaven were in distress, deank up the deadly poston; who is so mercified as Sankars?

Chaupte.

Rima again proceeded on his way and drew near to the monatein Richymutika. There Sugries dwelt with his ministers, who, seeing them approach in all their immeasurable attenties, was exceedingly alarmed and cried: "Herakeo, Hanomán: take the form of a young Brishman student sad go and see who these two herees are, of such remarkable strength and beauty, and when you have arcertained make some sign by which I may know also. If that wretch Balli has rent them, I must leave the hill and fire at once." The monkey aumed the form of a Brishmas and went to the place; there lowed his head and thus questioned them: "Who are you two knights of warrior train, who roum this wood, one dark of hus, the other fair? The ground is vought for you not first of threat. What is the version, my

I The mountain fliebyamuta derives its name from Riebpe, of autelone

KISHKINDHA

Sanskrit Invocation.

Brattifft, as the jamine or the lotes, of surpassing strength, store-houses of wisdom, all glorious and accomplished bowmen, hymned by the Yedas, benefactors of cows and Brâhmans, may they who appeared in the form of mortal men as the two noble soon of Ragha, the champions of true religion, the wayfarers intent on their search for Sits, may they great us faith.

Blessed are the pious souls, who erec imbibe the usclar of bry Riam's name; nectar, the product of no ocean, but of Brahm himself, the utter exterminator of all the impurities of this sinful age, the imperishable, the quintersease of the beauty of blessed Sambus's mosolike face, the strengthen of the direases of life, the exousitely west, the life of blessed Mankla.

Sorathá 1.

How it is possible not to reverence Kási, the home of Saraban and Bhaváni, knowing it to be the earthly birthplace of salvation, a treasury of knowledge and the destroper of sin. Dall indeed of soul is the man who worship. The salvation is the salvation of the salvate in distress, drank up the deadly poison; who is so mercifal as Sankara?

Chaupdi.

Ráma sguin proceeded on his way and drew near to; "monation lithlynwinks." There Sagriva Meut with I minister, who, seeing them approach in all their she strength, was encoefficigly alterned and oried; "ken, Ilsoumian; take the form of a young Bráhman and go and see who these two horoes see, of such. Mis strength and beauty, and when you have see all the makes some sign by which I may know also. If that Ball has sent them, I must leave the hill and flee at The monkry assumed the form of a Bráhman and the place; there howed his head and thus question, who roam wood, one dark of hue, the other fair? The grouph for your out fleets to tread. What is the reason, masters, that you visit this forest? Your body is too delicate and exquisitely beautiful to be exposed to the intoferable sun and wind of these wild regions. Who are you? A Person of the Trinity; or the two great gods Nara and Nárásyn ?!

¹ The mountain Risbyamuba derives its name from Risbya, a stantelage.

Dollat 1

Or has the lord of all the spheres become incarnate in your human form, for the good of the world to bridge the ocean of existence and relieve earth of its burdens?"

Chaurdi.

" We are the sons of Dasarath, the king of Kosala, and have come into the forest is obedience to our father's command : Rama, the name of one brother, and Lakshman of the other. With us was my young and beantiful bride, the daughter of the king of Videha. But some demon here has stolen her away : and it is she. O Brahman, whom we sre trying to find, We have told you our affairs, tell us now your own story." He recognized his lord and fell and clasped his feet with a joy, Uma, beyond all description. His hody thrilled with emotion and all world? failed his tongue, as he gazed upon the fashion of their ravishing disguise. At last he collected himself and burst forth into a hymn of praise, with great joy of heart, for he had found his lord. "I asked, sire, in my ignorance; but why should you ask, as though you were a mere man. Under the influence of your delusive power I wandered in error, and therefore I did not at once recognize my lord.

Dohá 2.

In the first place I was a bewildered dullard, ignorant and perverse of soul, and then my gracious Lord God himself led me astray.

Nam, the original or extrand Han, the divine Imperitable spirit than pertained the universe, in always associated with Naisyans, which, as a patronymic from Nam, means the Sone of the original Man. In Hans, In Alley, and the person of the control of the series of the collection of the series of Chaupái.

When the alliance had been concluded, nothing was kept in reserve; Rama and Lakshman told all their advantages. Sugriva's eyes were full of tears as he replied—"The daughter of the king of Mithilli will be recovered. One day when I was sitting here with my ministers depin thought, I saw some one flying through the sir, with a woman in his power, who was weeping piteously and crying 'Rama, Rama, O my Rama!' When she saw me, she dropped her scarf." Rama at oone saked for it; he gave it him he pressed the scarf to his bosom in the deepest distress. Said Sagriva: "Hearken, Righebut'; he not so distress' take courage. I will do in my power to serve you and recover Jamaki."

Doha 5.

The All-merciful and Almighty rejoiced to hear his friend's speech. "Tell me, Sugriva, the reason why you are living in this forest."

Chaupdi.

" My lord, Báli and I are two brothers ; our mutus! love was past all telling. The son of Maya. Mayari by name came to our town. In the middle of the night he at defiance and sallied forth. Seeing this he fled. Now I too accompanied my brother, and when he had gone into one of the caves of the mountain, Ball said to me : Wait for me a fortnight, and if I do not come then, conclude that I have been killed. I stayed there a whole month, Kharari ; a tremendons stream of blood then flowed out ; I made sure that Ball had been defeated and that the enemy would come and kill me too. I therefore closed the mouth of the cave with a rock and fled away. When the ministers of state saw the city without a master, they forced the government upon me, whether I would or no. When Bali, who had slain the foe, came home and saw me, he was greatly set against me and gave me a severe beating. as he would an enemy, and took from me everything that I had, together with my wife. For fear of him, O mercifal Raghubir, I wander forlorn all over the world. The curse!

i When Ball had alain the demon Dundubli, who had attacked him in the form of a ball, he builed the body away, and a drop of blowl fell is the hermitage of the Rubl Matage who thereapon personered a cure spon Eall, that if ever he came that way he should at once die.

prevents him from coming here, and yet I am ill at case in mind." When the friend of the suppliant heard of his servant's troubles, his two mighty arms were uplift with a convulsive motion. Doha 6.

" Hearken, Sugriva; I will slay Bali with a sing arrow ; though he take refuge with Brahma even, or Rudr be shall not escape with his life. Chaupdi.

They, who are not distressed at the sight of a friend distress, are guilty of grievous sin. They, who do no think it the most natural thing possible to regaras a mere grain of sand their own mountain-like troubles while a friend's trouble, though really no bigger than a grain of saud, seems to them as weighty as moun Meru; such men are churls, upon whom it is useless to press friendship. To restrain from evil paths and to direct in the path of virtue; to publish all good qualifier and conceal the bad; to give and take without any distrust of mind; to be always ready to assist with all one's power, and, in time of misfortune to be a hundred times more affectionate than ever ; such the scriptures declare to be the properties of a true friend. But one who speaks you fairly to your face, but behind your back is an enemy in the viciousness of his soul, whose mind, brother, is as tortuous as the movements of a snake, such a man is a bad friend, whom it is well to let alone. A dishonest servant, a miserly king, a false wife, and a treacherous friend, are four things as bad as the stake. Cease to distress yourself, friend; I will put forth all my strength to do your business for you." Said Sugriva : " Hearken, Raghabir ; Bali is very strong and most resolute in battle," and he showed him Dundebhi's bones and the palm-trees. Without an effort, Ragbubir tossed them away. At this exhibition of boundless strength the affection of the monkey king was increased

I This meation of 'palm-trees' would not be intelligible without a reference to the Sankirit kimikrana. There is to told how after Rima by a slight touch of his foot had good fright a bundred leagues through the arrival state of the state slight touch of his toot had seet mying a numerical tragues through the air the giant Dandobbi s enormous sheleton. Sugrirs still doubted whether he had to mandobbi s enormous sheleton. Sugrirs still doubted whether he were a match in strength for Ball, who had beried the body sopial dis-tance, while it was still clothed with firsh and therefore of sorth greater weight. To canvince bim, Rams shot an arlow from his, which cleft aeven paim-trees that stood in a line one after the other, pierced the bill behind them and speci downwards to the nethermost bell, whence again it returned and dropt into the quiver at Bama's side, from warch it bad been taken, and he made sure of killing Billi. Again and again he bowel his band at his feet, in the greatest delight, knowing him to be the Lord. Knowledge sprung up in his soul, and he spoke and said: " By my lord's favour my mind ir sat at rest : I will abandon pleasure, fortune, home, grandeur and all, to do you service; for all these things are hinfrances to faith in Itama, as the saints declare who are devoted to the worship! of your feet. All the friends and enemies, joys and sorrows of the world, effects of delution, and are not enternal realities. Ball is my greatest friend, by whom favour I have met you. O Rams, destroyer of all socrow ; as when a man dreams that he has been fighting some one, and on waking and coming to his senses is ashamed of his illusion. Now, my lord, do me this favour, that I may leave all and worship you, night and day." When Rams heard the monkey's devout speech, he smiled and said, with his bow in his hand; " Whatever I have said is all true ; my words, friend, cannot fail." O Garur, Rams. as the scriptures say, is the juggler who makes us all dance like so many monkeys. Sugriva then took Raghunath away with him, who went with how and arrows in hand. Afterwards he sent Sugrive on ahead, who went up close and coared with all his might. Ball on hearing him, sprang up in a fury, but his wife clasped his feet in her hands and warned him : " Hearken, my ford, Sugriva's allies are two brothers of unapproachable majesty and might, the sons of the king of Kosala, Lakshman and Rama, who would cononer los battle even Death himself."

Dohd 7.

Said Bail: "Hearken, timorous dame; Raghunath is kind and the same to all; even if he kill me, he will still be my lord."

Chaupdì.

So saying, he sallied forth in all his pride, thinking and combat; and Balli with a forious lesp struck bim a blow with his fist, which resounded like a clap of thander. Sugriva at cone field in dismay; the stroke of his fist had falled upon him as a boll from heaven. "What did say, the light less than the field Raphbulr; this is no bother of mine but Desth bimself."

I drariddat, a worshipper, is for arddat, from the root rddt, 'to propitiste,' with the intensive prefix a. In the findi glossary it is supplied by serak, 'a servant, as if connected with arone.

"You two brothers are so much alike that for fear of 417 mistake I did not shoot bim." He then stroked Sogriva's body with his hands and his frame became as of ademant, and all his pain was gone. Next he put on his neck a wreath of flowers and sent him back with a large increase of strength. Again they fought in every kind of way, while Rama watched them from behind a tree,

Doha 8.

When Sugriva had tried every trick and pot forth all his strength and had given up in despair, Rama drew an Chaupăi.

Struck by the shaft, he fell in dismay to the ground, Office oy suo saw the Lord standing before him, dark of hue, with his hair fastened up in a knot on his head, and his eyes inflamed as they were when he fitted tha arrow to bowstring Again and again as he gaze? him, he laid his soul at his feet and accounted his life ed : for he recognized his lord Though his heart of affection, the words of his month were harsh, as he ed towards Rama and said : " You have become i sire, for the advancement of religion, and yet you life as a huntsman would that of a wild beast. I, am an enemy and Sugriva a friend; yet for what have you killed me my lord?" "Hearken, wretch younger brother's wife, a sister, a daughter-in-law and nowedded maid are all ulike: whoever looks upon one them with an evil eye may be slain without any si Fool, in your extravagant pride you paid no beed to wife's warning. You knew that he had taken refuge up the might of my arm, and yet in your wicked pride you Dohd 9

" Hearken Rama ; I dealt craftily with my lord; to-day, goilty as I am, I obtain, sire, at my death a place in heaven." Chaupat

When Rama heard this most tender speech, he touched Ball's head with his hands: "I restore the soundness of your body; retain your life." Said Ball; " Hearken, Allmerciful; the saints are born again and again and labour broughout their life, and yet even to the last Rama never R-56 comes near them. But he, the everlasting, by the virt of whose name Sankara at Kasi bestows heaven upon a alike, has come in visible form before my very eyes; a I ever, my lord, bave such a chance again ?

Chhand 1.

He has become visible to my eyes, whose praises th scriptures are all unequal to declare, to whom scarcely the saints attain after profound contemplation accompanied b laborious suppression of the breath 1, abstraction of son and control of the senses. Seeing me the victim of exces sive pride, the Lord has told me to retain my body. who would be such a fool as to insist upon cutting dow the tree of paradise and watering a wild babul tree? Now my lord, look upon me with compassion and grant me th boon I beg ; whatever the womb, in which it be my fate t be born, may I ever cherish a special devotion to the feet o Rams. O my lord, take this my son Angad and grant him like descretion, power and prosperity; grasp him by the hand. Oking of gods and men, and make him you servant."

Dohá 10.

After making a fervent set of devotion to Rama's feet Bali's soul left the body; as placidly as when a wresth of flowers drops from an elephant's neck without his knowing it:

Chaupdı.

And Rama dismissed him to his own heavenly mansion. All the people of the city ran together in dismay and Tara with dishovelled hair and tottering frame broke out into When Raghural saw her distress, he imparted to her wisdom and dispersed her delusion. "The body, which is composed of the elements, earth, water, fire, air and ether, is of no value. The mortal frame, which you see before you, sleeps; but the soul is eternal; why

Z Akina "erber," is the addie and othered floid, supposed to fil and gions trance - Meater | Milliant pervale the universe and to be the peculiar relicie of life and of sound Honler Billiams.

I The eight means of mental concentration (according to Patanjall, the is no right means of mental concentration (avending to Paralyla, per founder of the Year, Paralyla (Manager, 1998), and the Conference of the Year, Paralyla (Manager, 1998), and the Paralyla (Manager, 1998), an then do you weep?" True understanding sprung up in her mind; she embraced his feet and received the boon that she asked, a perfect faith. O, Umá, the lord Ráma dances us all up and down like so many puppets. Then he gave orders to Sugrive and he performed all the funeral rites with due ceremony. Rama next directed his brother to go and celebrate Sugriva's installation. He bowed his head at Raghupati's feet and went forth, he and all whom Rama had commissioned to accompany him. Dohá 11.

Lakshman immediately summoned the citizens and the council of Brahmans, and invested Sugriva with the sovereignty and appointed Angad Prince Imperial. Chaupai.

O, Umá, there is no such friend as Ráma in the world, neither guru, nor father, nor mother, nor kinsman, nor lord. It is the way with all other gods, men and saints, to make friends for selfish purposes; but the generous Raghubir, from mere natural kindness, made Sugriva king of the monkeys, when he was trembling all the day and all night in such fear of Bali that there was no colour left in his face and his heart was burnt up with auxiety. I know this, that any man, who deserts such a lord, must needs be caught in the meshes of calamity. Rama then sent for Sugriva and instructed him in all the principles of statecraft, and added : "Hearken, Sugriva, lord of the monkey race: I may not enter a city for fourteen years. The hot weather is now over and the rains have set in. I will encamp on the hills close by. Do you with Angad reign in royal state; but remain ever mindful of my interests." Sugriva then returned to the palace, while Rama remained Doha 12.

The gods had beforehand made and kept for bim a the gous man better the mountain, knowing that the all-merciful Rama would come and stay there for some days. Chaupdi.

The magnificent forest was a most charming eight, with the frees all in flower and the swarms of buzzing bees à

I the Sanskrit Samdyana the bill is called Prastarnon; but the two words tear much the same meaning. The text might also be translated, remained on the bill during the early rains?

•

gathering honey. From the time that the Lord cam plant and fruit and avery kind of agreeable foli forthcoming in profession. Seeing the incomprable of the hill, the Lord and his brother rested there, form of here, hirds and deer, the gods, saists a came and did service to their lord. From the li Lakshmit's spose took as phis abode in it, the forest a picture of Irlicity. There the two brothers at at the bright and glistening crystal rock, and they was told many a sale inculcating faith, self-gore statecraft and windom. What with clouds that ever pied the hervens and the frequent thunder, the se the raint-yeared a most designation.

Dold 13.

"See, Lakshman, how the pencocks dance at the of the clouds, like a householder, enamoured of sece who rejoices when he finds a true believer in Vishna.

Chaupdi.

Clouds gather in the sky and thunders rear it darling is gone and my soul is in distress. The lig flashes filtulity amid the darkness, like the triendhip vile which never lasts. The pouring clouds cleave of the ground, as sages stoop beneath accumulated love, mountain endures the buffeting of the storm, as the tonus bear the shuse of the wicked. The flooded st lets rush proudly along, like mean men puffed up little wealth. The water by its contact with the becomes as maddy as the soul when environed by deit. The lakes swell gradually and imperceptibly, like as the quality of goodness developes in a good man; an vivers flow into the bosom of the coest, like as the that has found Hari, is at rest for ever.

Doha 14.

The green earth is so choked with grass that the can no longer be distinguished, like hely books obsc by the wrangling of beretics.

Chaurdi.

On all sides there is a lively crosking of leags lil

In England a cloudy sky is associated with gloomy ideas, so bright sumshine with everything that is thereful. But in Iedia it: reverse. When the clouds gather and thunder is beard, every one rej at the prospect of rain.

party of Brahman students repesting the Vedas. All the trees put forth their new leaves, like pious soule that have come to matured wisdom. The di and jaurden plants lose their leaves : as in a well-governed realm the echemes of the wicked come to nought. Search as you like, the dusty footpath is no longer to be traced : like as when religion is put out of eight by passion. The earth rich with crors makes as goodly a show at the prosperity of benevolent. The fire flies clitter in the darkness of the cloudy night, like a mustered band of hypocratical pretenders. The ridges of the fields are broken down by the heavy rains. like women rained by too much license. The diligent cultivators wend their lands, like philosophers who root up ignorance, rapity and pride. The charges and other birds are powhere to be seen, like virtue that fled at the coming of the iron age llowever much it may rain, no grass springs upon barren ground; so last takes no root in the beart of Hari's worshippers The earth gleams with swarms of living creatures of every kind : so the people multiply under good government. Here and there weary warfarers stay and rest, like a man's bodily senses after the attalament of wisdom.

Isold 15.

Al times a strong wind disperses the clouds in all directions, like the birth of a bad son, who destroys all the nions practices of his family.

Chaurdi

Now the rains are over and the season of antumn has returned ; see Labebman, how exquisitely beautiful every. thing is. The whole earth is covered with the flowering tens grace, as though the rains bad exposed its old are. The rising of Canopust has dried up the water on the roads. like as greel is dried up by contentment. The surface of every river and lake is as pure and bright as is the soul of the mints devoid of all ranity and delusion ; drop by drop their depths are diminished, like as the collightened gradually loss all notions of will The wagtails know actumn waren and come out come more, like wirt some deeds is an anspecious time There is neither and nor duct : the earth is as builtient as the alministration of a king who The betterni twing of the corner latina Aranga, i.e., Canig ta takes place the secrets day after the new drive of That're, in the rains many to well around in state palicy. The fish are distremed by the strinking of the mater like improvident men of lovely have a few money. The modelplied key shines as help as a marchinger of Hari, who has discreted every other patern. Here and three is a slight and men shower, like the fitth of now have in early stally presculed.

Dist 16

King and assertine, merchante and mendigants, heare the city on Egytheir way with juy, loke more in any of the force regard life! who case to fabour when they have once attimed to furth in Hari

Charpel

Where the water is deep, the fish are as glad as many his har taken refuge with Hars and have not a first from his The lakes, with these flowering lotuses, are a besaiffed as the immaterial Supreme Spirit when clost with a material form. The garandous beast make a wood fall bursing, and the hirds a charming concert of direct sounds; but the chated is as end of tool to see the night as a had muon at the sught of another's property. The first cries out from excess of thirst, like a rebell again Mahiley, who knows no rest. The moon by night subit the automost best of the seen, the as the night of a mis expole sin. Flocks of partriliges fix their gare upon the moon, as Harl's worthippers look only to Harl. Moughlis and gaillies are driven away by the terrors of wister, fix as family is destroyed by the sin of personning fiximms.

Dold 17

Under the influence of the autumn, earth is rid of it insect swarms, as a man, who has found a good teacher, i relieved from all doubt and error.

Chaur4i.

The rains are over and the clear season has come, ball have had no news, brother, of Sita. If I could only set anyhow get tidings of her, I would in an instant recover her out of the bands of even Death himself. Wherever his may be, if only she still lives, brother, I would make as effort to rescous her. Sogrira has forgotten all about me.

¹ The four stages of life, through which every Bribman should push are let, that of the Brahmachart, or student; 2nd, that of the Grahastha or bushlote; 3nd, taht of the Vanaprastha, or anchorite; and 4th, this of the Rhitsha, or mendicant.

ì

the palace and bathed his feet and seeted him on a The menkey king also bowed his head at his fet Laksbunan took him by the hand and embraced. "There is nothing, my lord, so intoxicating as pit in a single moment it inflatates even the scool of a On hearing this humble speech, Laksbunan was gla said everything to reassure him, while Hannanse to all that had been tione and how a multitude of spit already started.

Dold 20.

Then Sugriva with Angad and the other monkeys forth with joy, preceded by Lakshman, and arriv Ráma's presence.

Chaupái.

With folded bands he bowed his head at his feet cried: "My lord, it has been no fault of mine. delastive power, sire, is so strong that only Rimw's facan disperses it. Gods and men, saints and kings mastered by their senses; and I am hat a poor brute h a monkey, one of the most libidious of animals. A who is invaluerable by the arrow of a woman's eye, remains wakeful through the dark night of angry par and whose neck has never been bound by the balls covetosaness, is your equal, O Ragharái. It is a virtue attainable by any religious observances; it is only by grace that one here and one there can accomplish it." It Raghapati smiled and said: "You are as deart one my own brother Bharat. Now take thought and make effort to get things of Sita."

Dold 21

While they were yet thus speaking, the troops of mi keys arrived of all colours and from all parts of the world monkey host marvellous to behold.

Chaupdi.

1, Umá, saw this army of monkeys; only a fool wor try to count them. They came and bowed the bad Kame's feet and gazing upon his face found in him the true lord. In the whole host there was not a single monit to whom Ráma did not give separate greeting. This is great miracle for the lord Rightaris, who is omalpresed and all perrading. They all stood as they were told, rank after rank, while Sugriva thus spoke and instructed them: "In Risma's behoof and st my request, go forth ye monkey host in every direction. Make earth for Janak's daughter, my brethere, and reture within a month. Whoever comes back at the end of the time without any news shall die at my bands."

Dohá 22.

No sconer had they heard this speech than all the monkeys started at once in every direction. Sugriva then called Augad, Nila and Hanuman:

Chaupai.

" Hearken, Nila, Anged and Haumman, and you, O stannch and sagacious Jambavan : go ye together, all ye gallant warriors, to the south and ask every one for news of Sita. Strain every faculty to devise some way of accomplishing Rama's object. The sun is content with back service and the fire with front, but a master must be served back and front slike, without any subterfages. 1 Discard the unrealities of the world and consider the future ; so shall all the troubles connected with existence be destroyed. This is the end, brother, for which we were born, to worship Rams without any desire for self. He only is truly discriminative, he only is greatly blessed, who is ensuroused of the feet of Raghubir." After begging permission to depart and bowing the head at his feet they set out with joy. invoking Raghurái. The last to make obeisance was Hanumau. The lord, knowing that would happen, called him near and with his lotus hands touched his head and gave bim his ring off his finger for he knew his devotion : "Say everything to comfort Sita, telling her of my might and my constancy, and come quickly." Hanuman thought himself happy to have been born and set forth, with the image of the all-merciful impressed upon his heart. Although the Lord knows everything, he observes the rules of statecraft in his character as the champion of the gods.

I has have there us no intercept of earling in any of the MSS, but the precise manaling of the world between states. Candida interpret them has easing as 23 different ways. The translation of the world between states of the contract the preserve has apposented the conjunt. One of the electronic translation processes of the conjunt. One of the cluster way is the first beam no should concerve a master; it has been confused to the confused of th

Doka 23.

They went forth scarching every wood, river, lake, a mountain cave, with their soul so absorbed in Ráma's c cerns that they forgot all about their own bodily wants.

Chaupdi.

Wherever it might be that they came across a demcthey took his life with a single blow. They looked in every recess of forest and hill, and if they met any herm they all surrounded him. Overcome by thirst they we hreatfully distrest, and losing their way in the designed place, could find no water. Hanumain thought to himsel without water to drink we shall all dis. He climbed mountain peak and looking all round about, spied a strang opening in the ground; with geese, herons and swense the wing and all kinds of birds making their way into it. Then Hanuman came down from the mountain and took them all and showed them this cavern, and with him to lead the way they lost no time, but entered the chasm.

Dohd 24.

A grove and beautiful lake came in sight, with many flowering lotuses and a magnificent temple, where a holy woman! was sitting.

Chaupái.

From a distance they all bowed the head before her and made enquiry and explained their circumstances. She thre said: "Take water to drink and eat at will of this luctors and beautiful fruit" They bathed and ate of the sweet fruit and then all come and drew near to her, and told her all their adventures. "I will now go to Reghurái; closs your eyes and so leave the cave; you will recover Sits, do not fear." The warriors closed their eyes, and what they again opened them they were all standing on the shore of the ocean. But she went to Raghunáth and came and bowed her head at his lotus feet, and made much suppliestion. The lord bestured upon her Imperiabable faith.

Dohd 25.

In obedience to the Lord's commands she went to the Budri forest, cherishing in her heart Rama's feet, the adoration of the eternal Sign.

I in the Sanskrit Rámàyana her name is given as Swayamprabba, 'the self-shining.'

Chaupái.

Now the monkeys were thinking to themselves : "The appointed time has passed and nothing has been done." Sothey all came together and asked one another, " there is no news, brother ; what are we to do?" Angad's eres were full of tears as he replied : " It is death for us either way. Here we have failed to get tidings of Sits, and if we go home our king will slay as. After my father's death he would have killed, me, had not Rama protected me, no thinks to him" Again and again Angad told them all : "It is a cause of death without a doubt." When the monkey chiefs heard Angad's words, they could make no answer, tears streamed from their eyes For a moment they were overwhelmed with deanair, but at last they all spoke and said " unless we get news of Sita we will not return. O segucious prince." So saving the monkeys all went to the sesshore, where they spread bedrut lusa grass and set down. But Jambaran seeing Angad's distress, addressed him with a discourse of appropriate admonition : " My son, do not imagine Rama to be a man : know that he is the invisible god, propagarable and from everlasting. All we who are his servants are most highly blessed in our love for the eternal God than mude incarnate.

Dohá 26.

Of his own free will the Lord has manifested himsell on health of gods, Brahamas, cows and Earth, and remains in hodily form among his worshippers, having ahandened all the joysed beaven."

Chaupái.

He exhorted bin in this wise al great length, and Samphil from his care in the munitain heard him. When the came out and saw the multimode of monkeys, he was decame out and saw the multimode of monkeys are of the "God has provided now with a feast. I will sent them ally day at once; I am dying for ward of a multimous may day now. I have made to the contract of the contract God has supplied or for cose and all." The monkeys trendled to her the multimov's send, "see were right in saying lodge warm of the "All she girl of him they cover my and Jaharian was mightly distorted at heavy has a great of the same and the same and the same has a great of the same and the same and the same has a great of the same and the same and the same Jahria, three is nose like him, who gave up his like in Rilm's service stay, bleed begund measure, has been able to cross the vast and boundless occass of cristence, and you are his metwengers; have then no fear, but with Risma's image impressed upon your sool, consert your plans." So saying, Garer, the valuer, left them, and their soil was in the greatest amazement. Each one vanued bis own strength but doubted whether he could lesp across. Said the king of the bears, "I am now too do and and apparited of my former strength is left in my body; when Khurári took his three stickes, then I was young and full of vigour.

Dola 29.

As he fettered Ball, the lord increased in stature to an indescribable size, but in less than an hour I ran round him seven times."

Chaupdi.

Angad said: "I will leap across; but I am rather doubtful about getting back again." Then said Jambavan : You are quite competent; but why should we send our leader? Hearken, Ranuman," added the king of the bears, "why is our champion so silent? You are the son of the wind and strong as your sire. a storehouse of good sense. discretion and knowledge; in all the world what undertaking is there so difficult that you, my son, cannot accomplish it? and it is on Rama's account that you have come down upon earth." On hearing this he swelled to the size of a mountain, with a body, of golden hue and of dazzling spleudour, as though a very monarch of mountains, and roaring again and again as it were a lion, he cried "I can sasily spring across the salt abyes, and slay Rayan with all his army, and uproot Trikut and bring it here. But I . ask von, Jambavan, what I ought to do, give me proper instructions." "All that you have to do, my son, is to go and see Sita and come back with the news. Then the letureved. by the might of his own arm, taking with him merely for a show his bosts of monkeys.

Chhand 2.

With his hosts of monkeys Rams will destroy the demost and recover Sita; and gods and saints and Narad and sil will declare his glory, that cancifies the three spheres." Any man attains the highest heatitude who hears, sings, telis

I The allusion is to Vishnu's incarnation as a dwarf, which was the fifth in order, that as flams being the seconds.

BOOK V

THE BEAUTIFUL.

Sanskrit Incocation.

I Aport, under his name Rans, the passionless, the eternal, the immeasurable, the sinless ; the bestower of the peace of final emancipation; the lord, whom Brohms Sambhu, and the Serpent-king incessantly worship; the theme of the Vedanta; the sovereign of the universe; the preceptor of the gods ; Hari in the delusive form of man the All-merciful ; the princely son of Ragha : the jewel of kings.

O Raghupati, there is no other desire in my soul-I speak the truth and you know all my inmost thoughts-grant me. O Raghu king, a vehement faith, and make my heart clean of lust and every other sin.

I reverence the home of immeasurable strength, with his body resembling a mountain of gold ; the fire that consunged the demons as it were the trees of a forest; the first name in the list of the truly wise : the store-house of all good qualities; the monkey chief; Raghupati's noble messenger, the Son of the Wind.

Chaupái.

×

On hearing Jambavan speak so cheerfully, Hanuman was greatly rejoiced at heart. " Wait for me here, my friends, however great your discomfort, with only roots. herbs, and fruits for your food, till I return after seeing Sita ; the task is one I am most pleased to undertake." So saying he bowed his head to them all and went forth with joy, baving the image of Ragbunath impressed upon his heart. There was a majestic rock by the seashore; he lightly sprang on to the top of it; then, again and again invoking Raghubir, the Son of the Wind lesped with all his might. The mountain on which he had planted his foot sank down immediately into the depths of hell. Like Rama's own unerring shaft, so sped Ranuman on his way, Ocean had regard for Rama's envoy and told Mainaka to ease his toil.1

Doha 1.

But Hanuman merely touched him with his hand, then had.

bowed and said, 'I can stop nowhere till I have done Rama's business.'

Chaupdi.

The gods saw Hanuman on his way and wished to make special trial of his strength and engacity. So they sent the mother of the serpent-race, Sursea by name, who came and oried: "To-day the gods have provided me a meal." On hearing these words, the Son of the Wind replied : " When I have performed Rama's commission and have come back, and have given my lord the news about Sita, then I will put myself into your mouth : I tell you the truth, mother, only let me go now." But, however much he tried, she would not let him go, till at last he said : 'You cannot get me into your mouth.' She opened ber jaws a league wide ; the monkey made his body twice that size. she stretched her mouth sixteen leagues. Hanuman at once became thirty-two. However much Surses expanded her jaws, the monkey made his frame twice as large again. When she had made ber mouth a hundred leagues wide, he reduced himself to a very minute form and went into her mouth and came out again: then bowed and asked permission to proceed. "The purpose for which the gods sent me, namely, to make trial of your wisdom and strength, I have now accomplished.

Dohá 2.

Your wisdom and strength are perfect; you will do all that Rama requires of you? She then gave him her blessing and departed, and Hanuman went on his way rejoicing.

Chaupdi.

A female demon' dwelt, in the ceean, who by magic a caught the birds of the air. All living creatures that fly it the air as they look down upon the water cast a shadow upon it; and she was able to catch the shadow, so that they could not fly waw; and in this manner sho always had birds to eat. She played this same trick on Hasumán; but the monkey at once saw through her craft and sew her, here as he was, and all undismayed crossed over to the opposite ahore. Arriving there, he marked the beauty of the wood, with the bees buzzing in their search for honory, the diverses

I in the Saustrit Ramayana her name is given as Sinbita, the mother of Rahu.

435 trees all resplendent with simultaneous flower and fruit, and multitudes of birds and deer delightful to behold. Seeing a huge rock further on, he fearlessly sprang on the top of it. But, Uma, this was not at all the monkey's own strength, but the gift of the Lord, who devours even Death himself. Mounted on the height, he surveyed Lunká a magnificent fortress that defies description, with the deep sea on all four sides around its golden walls of dazzling splendour.

Chhand 1

Its golden walls studded with all kinds of jewels, a marvellously beautiful sight, with market-places, barárs, quays, and streets, and all the other accessories of a fine city. Who could count the multitude of elephants, horses and mules, the crowds of footmen and chartots, and the troops of demons of every shape, a formidable host beyond all description. The woods, gardens, groves, and pastores, the ponds, wells and tanks were all superb : and the soul of a saint would be ravished at the sight of the fair daughters, both of men and Nagas, of gods and Gandbaryas, Here wrestlers, of monstrous stature like mountains, were thundering with mighty voice and grappling with one another in the different courts, with shouts of mutual another in the difference country, while should be induced defiance. Thousands of warriors of bugs bulk were sedulously guarding the city on all four sides; elsewhere horrid demons were banqueting in the form of buffsloes, men, oxen, asses and goats. Tulsi Das for this reason gives them a few words of mention, because they lost their life by Rama's hallowed shafts and thus became assured Doha 3.

Seeing the number of the city guards the monkey thought to himself, 'I must make myself very small and slip into Chaupdi.

Thereupon he assumed the form of a gnati and entered I The word massk, which I translate ' goat, paver, so far as I am aware, I the word states, which i translate gine, never, so has at a me sware, so has a parties of the state of the colar passage, it is explained by star. 'a cat, only as it would seem because that is the animal menioned to the familiar Rummyrum. In both because that is the animal mentionen to the general Ramayana. In both cases the poet has no sooner stated the transformation than he forests, all cases the poet has no sooner stated to creaserormation than he forgets all the for all Hanoman's subsequent actions are described as if perform about it; for all Hannman; guaranteen actions are described as if performed by him the heat and always after may be supposed; these reasoned it as the performance of the state of the stat Lanká after invoking Vishnu. The female demon, by name Lankini, accosted him: "How dare you come here in contempt of me? Fool, do you not know my practice, that every thief in Lanká becomes my pre?" The monkey struck her one such a blow with his fist that she fell to ground vomiting blood. Recovering herself sgain, she stood up and with clasped hands made this confident pstition: "When Brahmá granted Rávan's prayer, the Creator gave me a sige hefore he left, 'When worsted by a monkey know then that it is all over with demons. My meit rious deeds, my son, must have been very many that I has been rewarded with the sight of Rámás messenger.

Dohá 4.

In one scale of the balance put the bliss of heaven set the final emancipation of the soul from the body, but it wil be altogether outweighed by a fraction of the joy that results from communion with the saints.

Chaupái.

Enter the city and accomplish your task, over mindfel at heart of the lord of Koula. Deadly poison becomes at ambrosia, foes turn friends, ocean sbrinks to a more puddle, five gives out cold, and have Sumeru is of an more account with favour." In the tiny form that he had assumed, flainman entered the city with a prayer to God. Carfolly impecting every separate palace, he found verywher warriors innumerable. When he had come to likaral court, its magnificance was past all telling. The monkey as whim in bed salesp, but no trace of Sits in the rown. He then noticed another splendid building, with a temple of Hari standing part, its walls brilliantly Illandiasie with Ráma's name, too beautiful to describe, it faccinated every bedolier.

Doh 5.

The beauty of the chamber embiazoned with Riams's insignia was indescribable. At the sight of some fresh springs of tulsi, the monkey chief was encaptured.

I Ners-hard stands for the mora common Ner sinks-hard and sade both menning's the "-and here denotes not that particular locarisation, but Funna generally.

Chaupdi.

"Lacks is the shode of a gang of demons, how can the plone have any bouns here?" While the monkey was the resoning within himself, Vibbishom awake and at one began to repeat Risma's name in prayer. The monkey we delighted to find a troe believer. "Shall I at once mak myself known to him? A good man will never spoll an undertaking." Assuring the form of a Bráhmon, he raise his voice in speech. As soon as Vibbishom beard him, he rose to mest him, and bowing low, asked after his welfars arying, "Tell me, revereed Sir, who you may be; if everant of Havi, you have my hearty affection; if a lovin follower of Risma your visit is a great hound for me."

Dohd 6.

Hanuman then told him Rama's whole history and hown name. At the recital and the recollection of hisfinite virtues, both quivered all over the boy, while the soul was drowned in joy.

Chaup i.

"Heaken, Son of the Wind; my condition here is lift that of the poor tongue between the teeth. Yet do not suy poss. Exhar, that I am friendings the Lord of the Suy reas will show me Iaroar. The sindul hody is of no arrai if the soul has no love for his forus feet. But now, Ham min, I have gained confidence for it is only by Harcarchaton comestex agod man, and it is the result his kindness that you have so readily revealed yourself the man." Lifeten, Vibbithan, on up experience of the Lord ha is ever affectionate to his servants. Say who am I am of what coble descent; a wantou monkey, of nomerit what ever, a creature the meablion of whose name in the earl morning makes a man go fasting for the whole day.

Doha 7.

So mean am I; yet hearken, friend; Raghubir has shown favour even to me." His eyes filled with tours as h recalled his perfection.

Chaupdi

"I know of a truth that any who turns aside in farget fulness of such a lord may well be miserable." As he thu discoursed on Ráma's excellences, he felt an unspeakable calm. Vibbishas then told him of all that had been going on and of Sita's mode of lift, till Hanuman cried "Hearken, brother I would fain ten the august Sita." Vibbishas explained to him the whole mode of procedure, and the Son of the Wind then took his leave and proceeded on his way. Assuming the same form as at first he went to the Another Grove, where Sits dwelt. As soon as he suw her, mostally protrated himself in her presence. She had spent the first watch of the night sitting op, haggard in appearance, her hair knotted in a single braid on her head,' repeating to berself the list of Raghynati's perfections.

ohd 8.

Her eyes fastend on her own feet, but with her soul absorbed in the contemplation of the feet of her lord-Hanumán was mightily distrest to see her so sad.

Chaupái.

Concessing himself behind the branches of a tree, be mused with himself; "Gome, sir, what ought I to de?" At that very moment favn drøm nenr, with a troop of women in various attire. The wretch tried in every way to talk Sits over, by blandishments, bribes, threats and misrepresentations. "Hearken, fair dame," he cried, "I will make Mandodati and all my other queets your handmaids, I swear it, if you only give me one look." Sits plucked a blade of grass, and with averted face, fooling remembering her own deer lord, replied: "Hearkee, Rávan: will the lotus expand at the light of a glow-worm? Ponder this at heart," cried Jánski: "Wretch, have you no fear of Ráma's shafts? Even though ubsent. Hari will regene mo. Shameless monster, have you no shame?

Doha 9.

I tell you, you are but a glow-worm, while the very sun is only an image of Rama." On hearing this hold speech he drew his sword and cried in the utmost fury:

Chaupdi.

"Sits, you have outraged me; I will cut off your head with this biting blade. If you do not at once obey words, you will lose your-life, my lady." "My lord's arm, Ravan, are beautiful sea string of dark lotues and mighty

I To tweet the bair to a single braid is a sign of mourning for an absect husband.

-1

as an elephant's trunk; either they shall have my neck, or if not, then your cruel sword. Hearken, wretch, to this my selema vow. With your gleaming scinning put an end to my distress, and let the flery scinning put an end to my distress, and let the flery to be of Dourier to the selection of the control of the of Dourier these words be again rushed forward to kill her; but the daughter of Mayar cestained him with words of admostition. He then summoned all the female demons and ordered them to go and strimblate Sita: "if she does not under what her the summer and the selection of the preceded and the selection of the selection of the preceded and the selection of the property of the selection of the property of property of

Dala 10

Ravan then returned to the palace, while the demonesses, assuming every kind of hideans form, proceeded to terrify Sits.

Chaupdi.

One of them, by name Trijati, was devoted to Kāma's service, profilest and wise. She declared to them all a dream, how that they for their own eske ought to show Sita reverence. 'I ne my dream a monkey set firs to Lanks, and put to death the whole demon srmy, and set Rávan on an ass, naked, with his bead shore and his twenty arms backed off. In this lesion in west away towards the south; while 'Ubhishan successed to the throne of Lanks. The oily resonated with cries for mercy in Ráma's name, till the Lord sent Sita among them. I deliberately wirn you that four days hence this dream will be accomplished." Upon hearing her words they were sell dismayed and went and threw themselves at Sita's feet.

Doha 11.

After which they dispersed in every direction. But Sita was troubled at heart: 'At the end of a month? this vile monster will slay me,'

3 As appears from what follows, it is not death that she dreads, but the long interval of a month, which has to elapse before her death taken place.

I the word translated "giessting scientar" is chandre-lde, which means literally develop the moon, by reason, that it, of its own greater brilliancy, literally develop the moon of the control of the co

Chaupdi.

With clasped hands she cried to Trijits: " Mother, you are my helper in distress ; quickly devise some plan that I may be rid of life, for this intolerable bereavement is no longer to be endured. Bring wood and erect my funeral pyre and then set fire to it. My affection, reverend dame, will thus be attested." Who could bear to listen to such an agonizing cry? When she heard her speech she clasped her feet and would fain comfort her by reciting the majesty and might and glory of her lord. "Hearken, fair lady; there is no fire to be had at night ;" and so saying she went away home. Sita exclaimed: " Heaven is unkind; without fire my pain cannot be cured I see the heaven all bright with sparks, but not a single star drops to the earth. The moon is all ablaze, but no fire comes from it, as if it know what a poor wretch I am Ye Asoka trees, ! that hear my prayer, answer to your name and rid me of my pain; and you flame-coloured opening buds, supply me with fire to consome my body." A single moment seemed like an age to the monkey, as he beheld Sita thus piteously lamenting her bareavament

Dold 12.

After taking thought within himself he threw down the signet ring, as though a spark had fallen from the Asoka. She started up with joy and clasped it in her hand.

Chaupdi.

When she had looked at the lovely ring, beautifully engraved with Rama's name, she was all astonishment, for she recognized it, and her heart fluttered with mlogled joy and sorrow. "Who can conquer the unconquerable Rights rai? This cannot be any trick of Mays." All sorts of fancies passed through her mind, till Hanuman spoke in boneyed accents and began to recount Ramchandra's proless As Sita listened, her grief took flight. Intently she bearkened with all her soul as well as her ears, while he related the whole story from the very beginning "The tale you tell is so grateful to my cars; why do you not show yourself, friend? Then Hanoman selvanoni and drew near. She turned and sunk to the ground in bewilderment, " Noble Janaki, I am Hama's messenger; the Fountain of mercy himself I The name Anda in derival from a 'eithing' and ada 'pain' The evacest chance be preserved in sa English translation.

attests my truth I have brought this ring, lady, which Rama gave me for you as a token." "Tell me how can monkeys consort with man?" He then explained how

Doha 13.

On hearing the monkey's affectionate speech, her soul trusted him, and she recognized him as a faithful follower of the All-merciful.

Chaupdi.

On perceiving him to be one of Hari's worshippers, she felt an intense affection for him; ber eyes filled with tears, her body quivered with emotion. "O Hanomán, I was sinking in the ocean of bereavement, but in you, my friend, I have found a ship. Tell me now of their welfare, I adjure you; how is the blessed Kharari and how is his brother? Raghnrái is tender-hearted and merciful, why, O monkey, should her affect such cruelty? The mere sound of his voice is a delight to his servant. Does he ever deign to remember me? Will my eyes, friend, be ever gladdened by the sight of his dark and delicate body?" Words failed, her eyes swam with tears. " Alas! my lord has entirely forgotten me " Seeing Sita thus distracted by the bereavement, ten me beening below the monkey replied in gentle and respectful tones: "Lady. your lord and his brother are both well, save that the Allmerciful sorrows for your sorrow. Do not imagine, madam, that Rama's affection is a whit less than your own. Dohá 14 Take courage now and listen to Rama's message." So saying, the monkey's voice failed him and his eyes filled Chaupdi.

Then he proceeded to tell her of Itama's forlorn condition "Every thing—says be—is changed into its opposite. The fresh bads upon the trees barn like fire; night seems as the night of death, and the moon scorches like the sun. A bed of lotuses seems a prickly brake, and the rain-clouds A new or sources seems a privary orane, and the family boiling oil. The trees only add to my pain, and the softest and most fragrant breeze is like the breath of a serpent. Nothing relieves my torture, and to whom can I declare it? for there is no one who will understand. The essence of each love as yours and mine, my beloved, only my own soul can comprehend, and this my soul is alway with you. Know such to be the prefundity of my lore. 'At the Videban princess listened to Râma's message, she became so absorbed in love as to have no thought for berself. Said the monkey: "Lady, compose yourself, remembering that Râma is a bonefactor to all who serve him. Ramet upon fit might and, as you listen to my speech, discar anxiety.

, H.

Dohá 15.

The demon crew are like moths and Righu arrows as a flame; be stout of heart, madam, and assured that they will be consumed.

Chaupái.

If, Raghubir only knew, he would make no d Rāmaš shafts, like the rays of the rising son, will se the darkling demon host. I would have carried you; at once myself, but, I swart to you by Rāma, that I not received his order to do so. Wait patiently, mudam a few days, and he will arrive with his monkys, slaughter the demons, and take yon away, so that N and the other seers will glorify him in all the three sph of creation." "Are all the monkeys, my son, like you? demon warriors are very powerful, and my son! is a dispatient." On hearing this, the monkey aboved him in his natural form, his body in tolk like a monatain in his natural form, his body in tolk like a monatain gold, terrible in hattle, and of vast strength; then 1 took comfort at heart, and he again resumed a diminar superaprace.

. Doha 16.

"Hearken, lady; the monkeys have no great afree, or wit of their own, but by the Lord's favour even a son small as it is, might swallow Garúr."

Chaupái.

As she hearkened to the monkey's speech, so foll glorious faith and noble confidence, her mind became as the recognized his loves for Risms and gave him her he ing: "May you shound, my son, in all strength a virtue; may neither age nor death affect your good qualities and may you be eare constant in your described him and may you be eare constant in your described him and may the Lord be gracious to you." Hearing the words. Hanuman became utterly overwhelmed with emotion; again and again he bowed his head at her feet, and with clasped hands spoke thus : " Now, lidy, I am fally rewarded ; for your blessing is known to be effectual. But hearken, madam, I am frightfully hungry and I see the trees laden with delicious fruit." " Know, my son, that this grove is goarded by most valuant and formidable demons." " I am not afraid of them, mother, if only you will keep your mind easy.

Doh 17.

Seeing the monkey so strong and sagacious, Janak said : " Go, my son, and eat of this pleavant fruit, wit your heart fixed on Hari's feet,

Chaupdi.

He howed his head and went and entered the garde and having eaten of the fruit began breaking down th trees. A number of stalwart watchmen were posted there some he killed, the others went and called for help : " M lord, an enormous monkey has come and rooted up th Asoka grove ; he has eaten the fruit and broken down the trees, and with many a blow laid the watchmen on the ground." On hearing this, Ravan despatched a number his champions. At the night of them Hannman roars like thunder and overthrew the whole demon host : a few more dead than alive, ran off shricking He then sent the young prince Aksha, who took with him an immense nun her of his best warriors. Seeing them approach he ecize a tree, which he brandished and with an awful roar swer them down with it.

Doha 18.

Some he hacked, some he crushed, some he laid low the dust ; some got back and cried " My lord, this monke is too strong for us."

Chaupái,

When he heard of his son's death, the king of Lanka w. forious and he sent the valiant Megbnad. " Do not kill him my son, but bind him ; I would fain see this monkey ar where he has come from." Indrajit! sallied forth, a peerle chempion, full of fury at the tidings of his brother's deat

¹ Meghnad's name was changed by Brahma to Indrajit, after his a tore ages lades

When the monkey saw this formidable warrior draws ground his teeth, and with a ror rushed forward as up a tree of enormous size, with which he swept the of lanká from his cer. As for the mighty men of we accompanied his, he seized them one by one and of them by his weight. Having finished them off, he with their leader. It was like the encounter of two elephants. After striking him a hlow with his fist, he and climbed a tree, while for a moment a swoon came his antagonist. But again he arose and practised enchantment; still the Wiod god's son was not it ranguished.

Doha 19.

On his making ready Barhma's magical weapon, monkey thought within himself, "If I do not submi-Brahma's shaft, its infinite virtue will have failed."

Chaupái.

He launched the magic dart against the monkey, overthrew a host as he fell. When he saw that he swooned, he bound him with a running noose and cart him off. Observe, Blarafin the mertenger of the god, the repetition of whose name wise men cut the bonds existence, himself came under bondage, or rather in lord's service submitted to be bound. When the dear heard that the monkey had been bound, they all roabed the palace to see the sight. The majesty of Riarra's core on the monkey's arrival there street him as being beyon all description. The gods and regents of the air, stanking humbly with clasped heads, were all in dismay, if the saw him frown. But the monkey's soil wes no mei distarbed at the eight of his majesty than Garúr would terightened by any number of saskes.

Dohá 20.

When Ravan saw the monkey, he laughed aloud and mocked him; then again he remembered his son's death and his soul grew sad.

Chaupdi.

Said the King of Lanka: "Who are you, monkey, and by whose might have you wrought the destruction of the

I The weapon had been given to Heghnad by Brabma with a premise that it should never fail. Handman therefore submits to it in order that lithing a pro mire might not be faisified grove? What, do not you hear me? I see you are an uncommonly hold variet. For what offence did you 'put the demons to death ? Speak, wretch ; as you value your life." " Hearken, Havan ; He by whose might Maya creates this universal sphere; by whose might Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva produce, maintain and destroy the world ; by whose might the thousand-headed serpent supports on his pate the mundane egg with its mountains and forests; who assumes various forms in order to befriend the gods and to give a lesson to wretches like you; who broke Siva's stubborn bow and crushed your pride and that of the assembled kings : who slew Khera and Dusban and Trisira and Bali, in spite of their matchless strength :

Dohd 21

By the slightest exercise of whose might the entire mass of creation, animate and inanimute, exists; he it is whose messenger I am, and it is his beloved spones whom you have stolen away. 200

Chaupái.

I know your power; you had a fight with Sahasra-bhpi. and also gained renown in your conflict with Billi," He heard what the monkey said, but smiled as though be heard not. " I ste the fruit, my lord, because I was hongry, and then like a monkey began breaking the boughs. Every one, master, loves his life more than aught else : those good-for-nothing fellows fell upon me, and I gave them blow for blow. Thereupon your son put me in bonds-bonds that I am in no way asbamed of for my only object is to accomplish my master's business. Ravan, I implore you with folded hands, abandon your pride and attend to my sorice. Have some consideration for your own family; cease to go astray and adore him, who relieves his worshippers from every anxiety. Never fight against him, for fear of whom Death trembles exceedingly : even Death, who devours all else, gods and demons, animate and inanimate creation alike. Give up Sita, as 1 tell vou.

Dol4 22

Rame is the protector of suppliants ; Kharári is a very ocean of compassion; turn to him for protection, and the Land will lorget your offences and will shelter you,

Chaupdi.

Taka Rāma's lotus feet to your heart and reign for evat Lankā. The glory of saint Palrstya's is stainless as it moon; he not make yourself a spot on its brightness. Uleve Rāmā's name he in it, no speech has any charm Think and see for yourself, spart from pride and vanit; Without her clothes, Rāvan, a modest woman, howere richly adorned with jewels, is a shameful sight; and so i wealth, or dominion, without Rāma, goos at once, gotte at all. Those rivers, that have no pecanial source, flow only after rain and then soon dry up again. Hearken, Rāvan; I tell you on my oath, if Rāma is against you, there is none who can save you. Siva, Seebnig, Vichnu and Brahmā cannot protect you, if you are Rāma's memy.

Dohá 23.

Arrogance is a root fruitful of many thorns; abandon violence and pride, and worship Rama, the prince of the Raghu race, the Ocean of Compassion, the Lord God."

Chaupái.

Though the monkey be spoke him in such friendly wise, in words full of faith and discretion, piety and sound judgment, he laughed and replied with the highest disdsin: "What a sage adviser I have found, and in a monkey too! Wretch, you have come within an inch of death for daring to give me such vile counsel." " It will be contrariwise said Hannman; " you will acknowledge the error of your soul. I know well." On hearing the monkey's words, he ground his teeth in a fury. "Quick, some of you, and pot an end to this fool's life." The demons obeyed and rushed forward to slay him, but Vibhishan and his ministers advanced and bowing the head made humble petition : " It is agains" all statecraft; an ambassador must not be killed. Punish him in some other way, Sire." All exclaimed to one another, ' this is sound counsel, friend,' Ravan on hearing it, replied with a lengh : ' Let the monkey go then, but multilate first.

Dohá 24.

A monkey is proud of his tail " (so he went on to .ms) to hind it with rags steeped in oil and then set fire to them.

ø.,

Chaupdi.

The poor tailless wretch can then go back and fatch his master, and I shall have an opportunity of weing his might, whom be hat so extravagually exalted." The monkey smiled to himself to hear this. "Sated, I know, will help mon." Obedient to Rivan's command the demone began making their foolish preparations. Not a rag was left in the city nor a drop of shi or oil, to such a length the tail had grown. Then they made sport of him. The citizens crowded to see the sight, and struck him with their feet and jeered him greatly, and with besting of drums and clapping of head steps took him through the city and set fire to his tail. When I lanumés aw the fire hair took it was the fire to his tail. When I lanumés aw the fire blating, he, at once redood himself to a very diminutive size, and slipping out of his bonds agrang on to the upper story of the ridded value, on the dimen of the giant's wires.

Doha 25.

That instant the forty-nine winds, whom like had sent, began to blow; the monkey abouted with roars of laughter and swelled so big that he touched the sky.

Chaupdi.

Of enermous stature and yet marrellocativity, he lesped and ran from pales to paleso. As the city was thus set on fire, the people were at their with each of the testible fames boxes feet in conculers millions of the testible fames boxes feet in conculers millions which was a most of a lead that is no monetary, but we will immostly form. This is the result of not taking a good in monkly form. This is the result of not taking a good man's edition; one city it burnt down as therefore, the concept of the concepts of the con

I he the Value for Koren, or which, we had to be stryches in term, but forming the Classes of toward, of the Classes of the Classes in the Classes of the Cl turned upside down and given over to the fismes, he threw himself into the middle of the sea.

Dohá 26.

After extinguishing his tail and recovering from t fatigue, he assumed his old diminutive form and went a stood before Jánaki, with hands clasped in prayer.

Chaupái.

"Be pleased, madum, to give me some token, such: Riams gave me." She unfastened the jewel in her fair as gave it him.' The Son of the Wind received it gladly "Sainte him respectfully for me, my som, with these word way lord, you areve fail to talfit desire and are renowned as the suppliant's friend; relieve me then from my grierossdiress." Repeat to him, friend, the story of Indra's son; and remind my jurd of the might of his arrows. If he deen not come within a month, he will never find me gline from the thin me, monkey, how can I keep myself alive: for you now, my son, speak of going, and it is only the sight of you that has given me any comfort: henceforth day and night will seem to me both alike."

Dohd 27.

He did everything he could to console Sita and in pire her with confidence, and then bowed his head at her lotus feet and set forth to rejoin Rama.

Chaupdi.

As he went, he reared sloud with such a terrible noise that the wives of the demons, who heard it, were oversites by premature childbirth. Crossing the sea with a board, he arrived on this side and attered a cry of joy for the monkeys to bear. At the sight of Hanumán, they were delighted as if they have been given a new spell of life. Your face is so gled and your whole body so redinat the you cannot but have accomplished. Itam's commission. All greeted him with as much delight as an expiring fish feel when it gets back into the water; and they set out his joy to rejoin tiam, a thing as they wast of all that

I for both revenue me of the Manskell Hamsquiss, with glood Handwall the pewel before he donte justing groves and safe the city out fits I seemed the city out fits. I seemed the city of the I seemed the city of the I seemed to the city of the city of the I seemed to the city of the I seemed to the city of the city of had lately occurred. When they bed reached the Medha-THE SELUTION han, with Angad's consent they began eating the luctions fruit; the walchmen tried to stop them, but were besten off with fisticalls. They then fiel, Crying out that the prince had laid waste the garden Crying out man the prince and the makey must have oughtre rejoices as two ocess. Are amount with are successfully completing his master's business.

The one of India, his wisin alterdamina unparable in Lagueta, who had attacked Site in the firm of a crow. New page 180, Vol. 3.

If they had not got news of Sits, they would never have It they use not got over to cite, hery would corer care calen the fruit of the Madha ban." While the king was thus resoning within himself. Haromen and his party arrived. resoning within almost, theorems and the policy accross the best of the feet, and he received the best of the feet, and he received the best of the feet of the received the feet of the received the feet of the aney as once our our view of a sect, and we receive them with all possible cordislity and asked of their welfare. them with all possible coronality son sakes or itself weakers, and it is nell with an ever that we bern some four feet. By Rights favore the horizon has broad out excellently. Hanne (avour the nonners as three our excellent, the hands has accomplished his lord, propose and has as the hand of walk. On besting this forgets, and had been as the hand of walk and hand had been as the hand of walk as the hand walk earth the life of us mi. On meaning this congress again the wast on with the monkeys to where embraced ofto and used weak out made the incomercy of whose them seem to be them and the incomercy of whose them coming to was greatly Ham was. It has its answer soung, he was greatly delighted at the completion of the business. The two delighted at the completion of the brothers were seated on a completion of the brothers were seated on a cryptal rock and all the monkeys Regionati in his infinite tenderness stretced them ell with much affection and attend of their reflare, them all with ma, my lord, now that we have a second of their reflare. All it walls with mach effection and alsed or their sentage. All is with us, my lord, now that we lare seen your folus feet.

Stid J imercal; "Hearks, Righteriffs; tayon, my shore from all shores to Edd Jamerani; "Histor, Mignoraja; bayon, my oshor processis and single all bery ba properties and single all bery based to be properties." for erry 1 gods, map are made was to gracious to himself reading will for gracious to himself, and stands models and amining Hough victorious as war run remain modest and aniable, and he glory will first fast all the three process of creation. and his given with transmiss at the three Fouries or Cristian.

By any local favour the tool, has been decomplished, and If my loved a taxonic case as been accomplished, and taxonic so call the above of the bas been worth 1976. feeday we may wan wy man our me das feed worth invoca-lar lard, to tall the whole of Hampshop delight would be a thousand to the state of the state Mf for 1, 10 to 1, the very or Margine's charge to the model for a thought confidence of the model to the model of the mod too much tor a thousand torgete, visuating them proof as a charged by the control to proof as a charged by the control to proof as a charged by the charged as placed. ed to inform them of themson principal exploits. The manufacture of the principal exploits. All moretian was constroned by the rectial and again in the order to his boson. "Tell me in the host base before the host of t is Your name is sentinel over her by night and day ; contemptation of you is as a prison-gate ; her eyes are fetters for her feet ; how then is it possible for her life fit sear?

D-44 30.

Charpdi.

When I was leaving, the gave me this jewel from bair." Raghagati took and clasped it to his heart, w his eyes overflowed with tears, "And did Sits sen! meserge also ?" "Embrace the feet of my lord and brother, crying, U friend of the poor, reliever of suppliant's distress; in heart, word and deed, I am der to your service ; far what offence, my lord, have you dese m=? Of one fault I am myself conscious, in that I continue to live, though separated from you. But this, lord, is the fault of my eyes, which prevent my soul f taking flight. In this furnace of bereavement which facuted by my sight, my body is at it were a heap of co and would be consumed in a moment, but my eyes (such a flood in self-commiseration that it cannot catch Sita's distress is so utterly everwhelming and you are pitiful that it is better not to discribe it.

Dolld 31.

O fountain of mercy, each single moment seems an ere it passes. Set out at once, my lord, and with ; mighty arm vanquish the mi-creant crew and deliver he

Chaupdi.

On hearing of Sita's distress, the lotus eyes of the L the abode of bliss, overflowed with tears. "When thought, word and deed, a believer follows in my si what ought he to know of misfortune?" Said Hanum "There is no misfortane, my lord, except to forget you your worship. Of what account are the demons to lord, who can rout them at once and recover Sits." "H ken, O monkey ; neither god, nor man, nor saint that ever been born into this world, has been such a benefa to me as you. What return can I make you? Then none that occurs to my mind. Mark me, my son ; I not free from my obligation to you; I will think and what I can do." Again and again as the deliverer of gods gazed upon the monkey, his eyes filled with tests his whole body quivered with emotion.

Doha 32.

As he listened to his lord's words and looked upon his face, Hanuman was corspiured, and in an cortest of love fell at his feet, crying, "save me, save me, O my Lord Gc"

Chaupdi.

Again and again his lord sought to raise him up, but he was so absorbed in devotion that he would not rise. he called to mind the Lord with his lotus hands thus placed on the monkey's head, Bira himself was overcome with emotion : but again, restraining his feelings, he proceeded with the charming narrative). After raising the monker, the Lord embraced him and took him by the hand and seated him close by his side : " Tell me. O monkey, about Rayan's stronghold of lanks, and how you were able in such an off-hand way to burn down his fort." Beeing his lard so gracious, Hanuman replied in terms of combemodesty : "A monkey forsooth is a creature of singular prowers to skip about as he does from bough to bear's. When I leaped across the sea, burnt down the golden city, routed the demon host and laid waste the grove, it was all done through your power, Reghural ; it was no attenuth of mine, my lord.

Dol4 33.

Nothing is difficult for him to whom you are profiles: a mere shred of cotton, were it your pleasure, could have up the whole submarine fre."

Chaupdi.

The Lord smiled much to her these words, and recognised himse indeed a boring sevent. "And does a lower may son, some choice blessing body I will make you happy for seven." "Fish, my beet, is the greater of blessings; of your favour hand, but the description boom." On heaving the much of princespont, the Lord Dharkal, responded; "Not better for the best heavy threat years that the wording has the wording that the wording that the wording that the wording that the the wording that the the wording that the wording that the the wording that the Lord heavy the lo

I declarate the attention to a symmetric marriage as a being with a sorty of tames not the last discover marriage shock spring from the last of a new last of which spring from the last last of wars.

glory to the All merciful, the All-blessed. Raghupsi summoned the monkey chief and told him to make pritions for the march: "What need now for any delay once issue orders to the monkeys." The gods, who witnessed the spectacle, rained down many flower returned, with joy from the lower air to their own celephores.

Doha 34.

In obedience to Sugriva's summons all his hosts of tains came in, differing in colour, but all unequalle strength, a vast multitude of monkeys and bears.

Chaupái.

They bowed the head at the Lord's lotus feet, t roaring bears and gigantic monkeys. Rams beheld all monkey host, and turned upon them the gracious glance his lotus eyes. Each monkey chief was as much embold ed by his favour as Sumeru would be by the recovery his wings.1 Rama then sallied forth exulting, and me were the glad and auspicious omens that befell him. was only befitting that his march should be attended favourable omens, since in him abide all glory and a piciousness. Jánaki knew of his departure, for her l side throbbed as if to tell her. Every good emen th befell her was converted into an omen of ill for Rays Who could adequately describe the army on the road, wi the terrible roaring of the monkeys and the hears, how the marched, brandishing rocks and trees and with their talor for weapons, now in the heaven and now on earth, as th fancy moved them. They belowed as if with the voice of a tiger ; earth shook and the elephants of the eight quarter trembled.

Chhand 1-2.

The elephants of the eight quarters trembled, the earth reeled, the mountains tottered, and the cosen was agitted; the sun and the monos, god, saints, Nagas, and Kinnars, all rejoiced to know that their troubles were over. Myrisde upon myrisds of enormous fighting monkeys pressed wards, snapping, and snarling, singing glory to Riams'

¹ This conceil has a very unmeaning sound when expressed in Enrish The alimino is to the legand which represents all the monathins a core having had singer, till they were clipped by Indra; while the work which which primarily means 'a wing' has also the accordary against on of favour.

conquering might and hymning the praises of Konola's lord. The huge seepent king could not support the burden; he staggered again and sgain, but each time saved timself by clutching in his jaws the hard shell of the tortoise; as though he had mastered the stopendous theme of Raghubit's glorious expedition, and were inscribing in on the tortoise's back as the most imperishable majorals to be had.

Dold 35.

In such wise the All-merciful marched onwards, till he arrived at the seashore, where the host of bears and fighting monkeys began to devour all the frait they found.

Chaupdi.

On the other hand, the demons had been living in great fear, ever since the time the monkey had left, after burning down the city. Every one kept at home, thinking to himself : " There is no hope of safety for the demon race : if his messenger was so up-peakably powerful, how can the city escape when he comes himself?" When Mandodari was informed of what the people were saying, she was still more distrest, and with clasped hands fell at her lord's feet and thus besought him, in words full of sound judgment : "O my husband, cease to contend against Hari : take my words to your heart as most wholesome advice. His mere messenger did such deeds that our matrons, on hearing them, were overtaken by premature labour; if then you desire your own welfare, call your ministers and send him back his wife. As a frosty night comes upon a bed of lotuses, so has Sita come for the rain of your race. Hearken, my lord ; unless you give up Sita, neither Sambha nor Brahmá can help you.

Doha 36.

Rama's arrows are like serpents, and the demon host so many frogs; delay not, but do the best you can before they have snapped you up."

Chaupai.

The monster heard her prayer and laughed aloud; his strongage is known throughout the world. "A women is naturally cast in a limorous montl, and even in prosperity has a mind ill at ease. If the monkey army comes, the pour wetches will all be eaten, up by the demons. The very goardians of the spheres trembled for fear of me; its squite me; its fagule.

about the my wife to be afraid." So easing he laughed an fembraced her, an I then full of Inordinate conceit p esseled to the conneilschumber. But Mandolpti was s troubled at heart, eaying, . Heaven le against my for While he was sitting in court, he received intelligence the the whole army had censed the sea. Then he enquired his ministers, ' Fell me what you think best to be don' They all lengthed and replied, " Remain quiet. You be conquered gods and demons without any trouble; of wh account can man and monkays be? "

Dala 37.

When these three, a minister, a physician and a spirite advisor, use fair words, either from fear or hope of reward dominion, religion and health are all three quickly destroys

Chaujdi.

This was all the help that Havan got ; they did nothin but sound his praises. Perceiving his opportunity, Vibb shan came and bowed his head at his brother's feet, the again howing took his seat on his throne and after obtains permission spoke thus : "As you graciously ask of me m opinion, I declare it, Sire, to the best of my ability. If ye desire your own welfare and glory, with a reputation for wisdom, a prosperous issue and every other happiness, turaway from the face of another man's wife as from the moo on its fourth day. Though a man were lord of the fourtee spheres, he cannol set himself to appose the Universa However amiable and accomplished a person may be, a one will speak well of him if he shows even the slighter covetousness.

Dohá 38.

Lust, passion, vanity, and covetousness are all paths the lead to hell : adjure them and worship Raghubir, whom a the saints worship.

Chaupdi.

Rama, my brother, is no mortal king but the sovereign of the universe, the Fate of Fate itself, the Supreme Spirit the imperishable and uncreated God, the benefactor of comand of Brahmans, of the earth and of the gods; who is bit

I It is a Hindu superatition that it is unlucky to see the moon on the fourth day. Hence the provers :- Ja dekh chauthe ka chands, Bat chaiat, lige pharphand,"

....

I infinite mercy has assumed the form of humanity, to rejoice .. his votaries and to break the ranks of the impious ; the champion of the Veda and true religion, the saviour of the immortals. Cease to fight against him and humbly bow the head. Raghunath relieves the distress of every surpliant. O my lord, give him back Sits and worship him with disinterested affection. The lord has never abandoned any one who has fled to him for protection, though he were guilty of having raised the whole world. Know of a trath. Ravan, that it is the lord, he who has for name ' the saviour from ever calamity,' who has now appeared among us.

Dold 39

Arain and again I lay my head at your feet and utter this my prayers : bave dose with pride, arrogance and conceit, and worship Rama. These are the words which Saint Pulastva sent in a message to me, and I have at once taken this conortunity of repeating them to you, Sire."

Chaupdi

One of his wisest connections Malyavan, was greatly rejoiced to hear this speech. "Take to heart, my son, this admirable counsel which your brother Vibhishan has given you." These two villains who thus magnify my enemies, is there no one here who will rid me of them?" Malyayan thereupon returned home, but Vibhishan with classed hands spoke yet again : " In every one's breast, my lord, so the Vedas and Paranas declare, either wisdom or unwisdom finds a dwelling. Where wisdom dwells, there too is every kind of prosperity : and where nawisdom, there is final destruction. In your breast malignant unwisdom has established herself ; you take your friends for enemies and your greatest enemy for a friend, being thus extravagantly enamoured of this Sits, who is the very night of Death for

Dohá 40.

My brother, I clasp your feet and implore you to take my words in good part : restore Sita to Rama ; it will be Changdi.

Though the words that Vibbishan spoke were wise and prodent, and supported by the authority of the Vedas and prodent, and support and rose in a forg at hearing them:

"Wretch, you are within an inch of your death. It is all owing to me, you villain, that you have been able to live at all; and yet, fool as you are, you take the side of my enemies. Can you tell me, wretch, of any one in the whole world, whom I have not conquered by the might of my arm. You live in my capital, but are in love with hermits; you had better go to them, if you want to preach." So saying, he spurned him with a kick; but he still continued to clasp bim by the feet. "You are as it were my father; kill me, if you think proper ; but, O my lord, to worship Rams would be far better for you." This is the virtue of the saints, Uma, that they return good for evil. Taking his ministers with him, he went his way through the air, proclaiming aloud to them all:

Dohá 41.

"Rama is the very soul of truth ; your countries, my lord, are overpowered by fate; I will now take refuge with, Regulatir; lay no blame to me."

Chaupdi. After Vibbishan had left with these words, it was all over with everyone of them. Disrespect to a saint, Bhavani, brings speedy ruin on the most prosperous undertaking. As soon as Vibbisban had left, Ravan lost all his glory and good fortune. But he rejoiced as he went to meet Rams, and revolved in his mind many agreeable anticipation : "I am about to behold his lotus feet, so roseate, so soft, so beneficent to all who wait upon them; at whose touch the Rishi's wife was delivered from the cure, and the Dandska forest was sanctified ; feet that Sita cherished in her bosom, even while they ran to seize the delusive deer; lotus feet in Siva's lake-like heart ; how blest am I who am now about to see them !

Dohá 42.

"With these very eyes shall I this day behold the feet, whose shoes even Bharat clasped to his heart."

Chaundi.

With such loving faucies to occupy his mind, he quickly arrived on this side the ocean. When the monkeys se" Vibhishan coming, they took him to be some special envoy-So they stopt him and went to their chief and told him all the circumstances. Bald Bugelva : "Hearken, Ragbural !

River's brother has come to see you." The lord replied "What do you advise, friend?" The monkey king rejoined "Mark my world, Sire; the craft of these demons is yas all telling. Why should be come thus of his own accord The rillan's object is to apy out our secrets. My idea that we ought to keep him prisoner." Friend, you hav reasoned with much worldy wisdom; but I have a vow befrieed all suppliants. "Hannuma was delighted to he these words from the Lord, the God who shows compassion all who fies to him.

Dohá 43.

"The men who absadon a suppleast, from suppleid that he may be an enemy, are vib and criminal, sud m fortone will keep her eye upon them.

Chaupdi.

I would not abandon any one who had field to me protection, even though be had been guilty of the murder a million Bridmans. Directly any creature appears before a million Bridmans. Directly any creature appears before a sensitially wicked can delight in any service; if he really bod at, beart, how can be come into any present only a man of pure soul can find me; I take no pleasure, hypeorizy, deceit and vice. Ilivan may have sent him a say; but vere, so, 0 king, we need not fear any loss. the demons, my friend, that the whole world contain Lakshman could cont in a single moment. If he has co out of fear, to san for marcy, I will protect him as I wo my own tife.

Dold 44.

In either case bring him here." Thus spake the A merciful with a smile. "Glory to the lord of mercy" or the monkey as he weat, taking with him Angad Hanuman.

Chaupai.

The monkeys respectfully secoried him into the press of the allowerfull, Ram. He beheld from a distance two breakers, the delight of all men's syes, the givers of avidence, then looking sgain 'upon likama's perfect bear has stood stock still, with all his grain intently fixed upon one are the stood took still, with all his grain intently fixed upon one are the still with all his grain intently fixed upon the plant's friend, his finosities and dark hand body of the applicate friend, his finosities and chest and his charming face, that would ravish the soul of Kamadova himself. With streaming eyes and trembling limbs he at last made bold to speak in accents mild. My lord, I am Rávan's brother; Champion of heaven, I have been born of demon race, with a savage temperament, as naturally prome to evil as an owl is partial to the night.

Dohd 45.

I have heard with my ears of your glory and have come; O my lord, save me, save me; you who are the deliverer from all life's troubles, the remover of distress, the friend of the suppliant, Raghubir.

Chaupdi.

So saying he prostrated himself; but at the sight the Lord arose in haste with much delight, being pleased to hear his homble address, and took him in his mighty arms and clasped him to his breast; then with his brother seath time by his side, and to calm his votary's fears spake than: "Tell me, prince of Lanka, is it all well with you and your "Tell me, prince of Lanka, is it all well with you and your lamily? Your home is in an ill place. How, my friend, can one practise the duties of religion, when encompared day and night by wicked men? I know all your class and any wind with a wind and the search of the continuous control of the control o

Doha 46.

No creature can be happy, or even dream of rest to his soul, till he worship Rama, after forswearing last, that fountain of remorse.

Chaupsi.

"So long as the heart is peopled by that rillainous grew, avarious sensuality, selfshees; a regumes and prick here is no room there for Raghanath, with his bow and arrows and quiver by his side. The intensely dark night of slich mess, so agreeable to the owl-like paudions of lore and hair, abides in the soul only until the rising of the sun like led. Now I am well, and all my fears are over, in that have beheld your lotus feet. None of the threshold torments of lift has any effect upon him, to whom you in your mess them favour. I am a demon, utterly ville of nature, who to six still and pray facture to help him." Raphabic laughed to hear this and said: "I shall do it all the same; thu there you mind." So saying he went to the shore of the sale sand there took his seat on gress that he had strewn. Now after Vibhishan had joined Rams, Rawan sent spies of his

Doha 51.

Who disguised themselves as munkers, and so saw all that was going on. In their profound admiration of the Lord's generosity and his tenderness to supplicants.

Chausels.

They loadly extelled his magnasimity and in the intensity of their devation forgot their diagotise. When the makers perceived there to be spice from the engang, they seized them and took them to their chief. Sair Signifies. "Heatken, all you monkeys: just mutilate them and left them go." On receiving this command, the monkeys in an and paraded them in bonds all through the camp, ill-treating them in every possible way and relouing to let them go for all their prayers for mercy, till they cried: 'We adjace you by Ráma not to robe to of our nose and ears.' When Lakthman heard this, he called them all to him, and, being mored with compassion, while dand had them at once set free: "Gire this missive into Rásva's hands " and say! Raad, distorper of your case, what Lakthman asys.

Dold 52.

Tell the fool also by word of mouth my emphatic command - Surrender Sits and submit yourself, or it will be your d-ath'

Chaupdi.

The spire bowed the head at Lakhma's feet and set out at one, praising his generosity. Still repending Ráma's 'praises, they arrived at Lashá and prostrated themselves before liven. The Tembeded with a amilicated them the news: "Tell me, Rotha, I pray, of your own willise, and then let me, beer about Vibbinham, to whom death has drawn very nigh. The fool lett Lashá where he was a king; but now the wretched wearil must be crushed with the wheat. Tell me next what force these berst and monkeys muster, who have comes hear, by command of their erid destiny though the poor old sea has been ever gladdene Birs's soal." 'So be it.' said the Lord, valiant in light, and then at once called for water it the ser. "It was not pict of your wish, friend, toot the of me bitlage ceward with it all over the world." So say It was marked his lanchead with the royal tidet: an infi shower of flowers rained from hevren.

Dold 49.

Thus did Reglumath protect the humble Vibbis from Ravan's fery weath faund by the strong blast of breath, and gave him secure dominion and all the gr fortune which Siva had formerly hestowed upon the te headed Ravan

Chaupdi

Men who for sake upon a ford to worship any offmere basts without the tails and horse. All the m were charmed with the Lord's amisbility, who had nized a servant and claimed him for his own. Then i wise, who dwelleth in the hearts of all, assuming an at will, though himself formless and presionless, the plan of refligion, the friend of men, and the destroper the demon race, 'spoke and sail'. 'Hearken monkey valint monarch of Loaks', how are we to cross the coman, full of alligators, serpents and different of ska monster, of fathomless profundity and aboinpassible." Vibhithan replied: 'Hearken, Raham' your arrows could bern up a thoustand seas, but is would be better policy to go and make petition to the of ocean.

Dold 50.

Fr being your family priest, my lord, he will thought and auguest some scheme, by which the whole of bears and monkeys may cross the deep without trouble."

Chaupdi.

"Friend, you have suggested a good idea; let us tr and may fortune be with us." This invectation did not pl Lakshman; he was much banoayed at Rama's words. "I trust fortune, my lord? give vent to your indignation dry up the ocean. It is the one resource of a coward la to sit still and pray fortune to help him." Raghubir laughed to here this and said "I shall do it all the same; but never you mind." So soying he went to the shore of the sale sand there took his seat on grass that he had attreen. No after Yübbishan had joined Rams, Rawan sent spices of his own.

.1 King Sagara, by whose some the bed of the ocean was dag, whichence called cagar, was one of himm's ancestors.

Doha 51.

Who disguised themselves as munkeys, and so leav all that was going on. In their profound admiration of the Lord's generosity and his tenderness to suppliants.

Chaurdi.

They loadly extelled his maganaimity and in the intensity of their devation forgot their diaguies. When the monkers perceived them to be spice from the enemy, they select them not book they select them and took them to their chief. Sait Signifies. "Healten, all you monkeys: just mutilate them and left them ga." Or receiving this enomined, the monkeys run and paraded them in bonds all through the camp, ill-trasting them in every possible way and reloaing to let them go for all their prayers for mercy, till they cried: 'Wa adjuste you by Håmn not to rob to of our now said ears.' When Lakthanen heard this, he called them all to him, and, being moved with compassion, emil-d and had them at once sat free: "Give this missive into Risvan's hands" and say! Rad, distroyer of your race, what Lakthanes asys.

Doha 52.

Tell the fool wise by word of mouth my emphatic command - Surrender Sita and submit yourself or it will be your death

Choupdi.

The spire bowed the head at Lakhma's feet and set ont at one, praising hit generouty. Still repeating Risma's praises, they arrived, at Lanks and protitated themselves before Risma. The Ten-headed with a smile asked them the news: "Tell me, Soks, I pray, of your own welfare, and then let me beer about Vibhishan, to whom death has drawn very nigh. The fool let! Lanks where he was a king; but now the wretched weeril must-be crushed with the wheat. The me rate what from these bars and monkeys moster, who have come hear. By command of their evil deating hough the poor old sea has been soft-hearted enough to spare their lives. Tell me finally about the hermits, whose soul trembles for fear of me.

Doha 53.

"Did he meet you as a supplisht, or did he take toflight on hearing the report of my renown? Will you tell me nothing about the enemy's might and magnificence? Your wits seem utterly duzed."

Chaupdi.

"Of your grace, my lord, be not wroth, but take a blant reply to a blust question. As soon as your younger brother joined him. It is a subsequent of the mark of sovereignty. The monkeys, who had heard thit we were your spies, pot us in bonds and abased us shousefully. They were about to cut off our ears and nose, who we invoked the name of Rima and they let us go. You ask, my lord, of It is a subsequent of the same of Rima and they let us go. You ask my lord, of It is a best of bears and monkeys of diverse has ead graces one visege, lungs and terrible—the one who set fire to the city and slew your son is the very weakest of them all—thampions with innumerable cames, fire one and unjedding monators of vast bulk, with the strength of unnumbreed elephants.

Doha 54.

"Dwivid and Mayand, Nils and Nals, Angad and Gads of the mighty sword, Dadhi-mukha and Kehari, the malignant Nisatha and the powerful Jambayan.

Chaupdi.

"Each of these monkeys is equal to Sugrira, and who could count all the myriads like them? By Rama's favour their strength is unbounded; they recken the three sphere of creation as of no more account than a blade of gras. I have beard say, O Rakan, that the monkey chiefs number eighteen thousand billions; and in the whole of the army, my lord, there is not a single innokey who would not conquer you in battle. "They are all wringing their hands access of passion: Why does not Rams give us one order, either to swallow the cocan with all its fin and enter the start of Bit it my with place of trees and righty mountains; and then reah Rayan and lay him now in the data." This is the Insirange that all the monkeys held.

Utterly devoid of fear, they shout and leap about as if they would make Lanks a mere monthful. Dold 55

4 All the bears and monkeys are born warriors, and, moreover, they have the lord Rama at their head. O Ravan, they could conquer in battle even Death himself, a myriad

Chaupdi.

" All hundred thousand Sheshnags would fail to declare all Rama's glory and power and wisdom. With a single shalt he could burn up a hundred seas, yet so prodent is be that he took advice of your brother and, on hearing his reply, went to the sea and humbly asked the favour of a passage," On bearing this, the Ten-headed smiled: "Truly he showed as rough sense then as when he took monkeys for bis allies. He has put faith in the words of that arrant coward, my brother, and, like a speiled child, begs of ocean what he will never get. Fool, you have been extolling a what no will have sounded the depth of my enemy's strength and skill. Where in the world could any one achieve the glory of a triumph, who had such a country one achieve the group of a creming, and use such a countrily counsellor as Vibbishen. The envoy wared wroth at the wretch's speech, and thought it a good time to produce the wreten a sperous and thousand to good the letter the freed letter. Itama's brother gave me this letter there it read, my lord, and mach good may it do you." Ravas smiled my toru, and and told his minister, the

Dold 56.

"Fool, submit your soul to advice, and do not bring destruction upon all your race; you cannot except from destruction of the state of the Hama a wire course of the course, was and our or the your protectors. Abandon your pride, and, like your be your protectors assented your prior, and, nee your younger brother, fly like a bee to the lotts feet of the lord, younger will be consend in Joer wickedness, Jou and all your family, by Rama's arrows of fire."

The Ten-healed, as be listened was terror-stricken at and account of the second of t hear; all a spo stratched out his profe to clutch the sky bear ; ... configuration was a neutratio crater the any configuration of the first of small configuration of the c only tain Arreace, a personne a time tain is or sman account. Said Sola : "My lord, every word is true; be wise and abandon your natural arrogance. Cease from wrath and hearken to my advice; make an end, Sire, of your fend with Rama. Ragbubir is exceedingly mild in disposition, though he is the sovereign of all the world. The Lord will be gracious to you directly you approach him, and will not remember even one of your offences. Restore to him Janak's daughter : this, Sire, is all I ask of you; do it." When he spoke to him of giving up Sits, the wretch spurned him with his foot; but he bowed his bead to the ground before him and then went to join the allmerciful Rama, and after due obeisance told him All that had happened. By Rama's grace, he recovered his proper rank ; for it was by the Rishi Agastyas curse, Bhavani, that he had become a demon, though still retaining th intelligence of a saint. Now, once more in the form of saint, after again and again prostrating himself at Rams feet, he went his way to his own hermitage.

Dolot 57

Dullard Ocean made no answer to prayer, though three days had been epent; then cried Ráms in a fury: "It will do me no kindness, unless be frightened.

Chaupdi.

"Lakshman bring me my bow and arrows with my forry darfs I will dry up the deep. To use entreaties to churl, to havis affection upon a regue, to deal liberally with a born miser, to discourse of divine wisdom with a man devoted to red, to speak of detachment from the world to the covetous, to tell of Hari to a man ender the loffsence of passion or law, in all the same as sowing the sand in hope of a barrest." So sysing, Riam strong his bow, a proceeding that pleased Lakshman mightly. The lord let fly the terrible shalt; a borning pain essend in the bosom of ocean; the crocodiles, expents and fish were sore distrest. When Ocean perceived that these creatures were barriors, be filled a golden did with all kinds of jewic and bumbly presented himself in the form of a lifeth was.

Dold 58.

Though you may take infinite trouble in watering it, a plantain will not been fruit, until it has been well trimmed i similarly, mark me, flatur, a mean spetars been enither payers nor complement, but requires rougher treatment.

Chaupai.

Terrified Ocean clasped the Lord's feet; Perdon me, Site, all my offences. Air, wind, fire, water and earth are sell, my lord, naturally dail and low to change. They have been predozed by the delawire power that you saw that the with a rive to creation—so all the acriptores declare—and as each has been fixed by the Lord's command, so it must causil, to secure it an own happiness. My lord has done well in giring me this lesson; but still it was you who first fixed my bounds. A drum, a clown, a chard, a beast, and a contain are all fit subjects for besting. By my lord's favor, I shall be dried up, the army will creas over, and my glory will be at an end; the scriptores declare the word of the Lord to be unchargeable to them a tomo what peembly you good."

Dold 59.

The Lord smiled to hear this exceedingly humble speech, and said, "Tell me, father, some device, how the monkey host may cross over?

Chaurdi.

"My lord, there are two monkey brothers, Nils and Mals, who from childhood have been instructed by a sage. The mightiest mountains touched by them will by your laror float upon the waves. I too, remembering your majority, will saint to the best of any power. In this manner, my lord, you will bridge the sea and the glorious deed will be song in earth, heaven and hell. With this arrow, Sire, slay the dwellers on my northern shore, who are vite estimated. The Althorefild, be hearing Ocean's grievance, might y clear the things of the childhood of the will be song the state of the sight of his might y clear the things him like the thep here, bowed at his fret and took this law.

Chhand 8.

Ocean returned home and Rama approved his counsel. There his acts, which remove all the impurities of this ciaful

In the function handches the ratio delivered to tribute rather more interliging. Once upon size that the sold law and a ser and a improvement that he reaches have to moving view that he reaches have to moving view the contract of the cont age, has Tulsi Das sung to the best of his abilitexcellences of Ragbupati are a treasure of delight, a for all doubt, a purge for every sorrow, and they we wise of heart will abandon all other hope and corand be ever singing them or bearing them sung.

Dold 60.

The virtues of Raghu-nayak are the source of blessing, and those who reverently hear their recita the ocean of existence without any need for a boat.

[[]Thus endeth the book entitled 'the Beautiful,' co by Tulsi Das, being the fifth descent into 'the hole h Rama's deeds.'] now dried up the depths of the sea, but it was filled again by the floods of tears shed by the widows of his foes, and that is what makes it salt. On hearing Hanamán singenious speech, the wonkeys gazed with rapture on Riama's person. Then Jámbaván spake to the two brothers Nals and Nila and explained to them all the circumstances; "Keep your thoughts fixed on Riama's power and begin and bridge the bridge is you will find no difficulty." Again he addressed himself to the whole monkey host: "Hearken all of you; I have one request to make; only impress upon your soul Riama's lotus feet; and then you bears and monkeys will find the task a mere pastime. Away with you, my stordy monkey troops, and bring hither heaps of trees my stordy monkey troops, and bring hither heaps of trees forth hurrhing. 'Glory to Riama and all his might!'

BOOK VI

Dola 2.

They placked up and carried off in sport the biggest mountains and trees and brought them to Nala and Nila, who set to build the bridge.

Chaupdi.

The enormous rocks, which the monkeys brought and gave them, were handled by Nais and Nila like mere pellets. When the All-merciful saw the obarming construction of the bridge, he smiled and said: "This is a most exceedingity of the property of the same succeedingity. I will set up here an image of Sambhu: I have a great desiry. I will set up here an image of Sambhu: I have a great desire at heart to do so." On hearing this, the monkey king set at number of messengers to summon and fetch all the great an unmber of messengers to summon and fetch all the great and worshipping it, "there is none other," he cried, "to dear to me as Siva. No man, though he call binned a voice of mine, if he offend Siva, can ever deam of really floding me. If he desire to serve me, in antagonism to Siva, his doom is hell; he is a fool of no understanding.

Doha 3.

They who either out of attachment to Siva dishonor me, or who serve me but dishonor Siva, shall have their abode in the deepest hell till the end of the world.

Chaupdi.

All who make a pilgrimage to Ramesvar will, on quitting the body, go direct to my sphere in heaven. Any one who takes and offers Ganges water there will be absorbed into the divine essence. To all who serve me unselfishly and without guile Siva will grant the been of faith. Whoever makes a pilgrimage to the bridge that I have built will without any trouble cross the ocean of existence." Rama's words gladdened the hearts of all, and the saints thereupon returned to their hermitages. This, Parvati, is Rama's way; he is always gracious to the humble. Nila and Nala bailt the bridge so cleverly that by Rama's favour they acquired brilliant renown. The rocks, which naturally sink themselves and cause other things to sink also, were like so many rafts; nor is this to be, ascribed to the power of the sea, or the virtue of the stone, or the action of the monkeys;

Dold 4

It was by the might of the blessed Rama that the rocks made a way across the sea. How dull of soul then are they who leave Rama to worship any other lord.

Chaupdi.

When they had completed the bridge and made it thotoughly secure, the All-merciful was glad of heart at the roughly secure, the secure of the host was beyond all telling, with agon. The passage with the clamour of the multitude of warlike monkeys. The the clamour or the mainted a spot near the bridge and gazed gracious stama mounted e epoc toes the utinge and gazed apon the mighty deep. Then all the creatures of the sea apon the migury over. showed themselves, it is a considered the form of compassion; every kind of crocodile, alligator, fish, and compassion; every nine of the control of the contro serpent, with owner others, such that a single one mous bulk. Actor the first swarm ; while they again frembled could devour an the first swarm that followed them, They no less betore one or the same and the Lord, and in the general could not take tour eyes on the same and the general gladness of heart all were happy together. You could not gladness of neart an area on the vocation. Ion could not see the water, so thickly they covered it, as they gazed in At their than they gazed in see the water, so thuming they see they gazed in delight on the vision of Hari. At their lord's command the delight on the vision or take... arms form a command the army marched on ; who can describe the magnitude of the Doha 5

The bridge was so througed with the crowd that some thought to five through the state of the some through the state of the The bridge was so through the crowd the free monkeys took to flying through the air, while crossed over on the backs of sea monsters,

æ

Chaupai.

When the two brothers had gazed awhile at the spectacle, the gracious Rams smilingly advanced and crossed over with the host. The throng of monkey chiefs was more than I can describe. On the opposite shore the Lord pitched his tent, and told all the monkeys that they might go and feast on the goodly fruit and roots. On hearing this the bears and monkeys can off in all directions. To please Rama every tree was laden with fruit, whether it was in soason or out of season, without any regard to the time of year. They devour the sweet fruit and shake the trees, and harl masses of rock at the city of Lanka. If ever they found a straggling demon, they all becamed him in and led him a pretty dance, and finally bit off his nose and ears with their teeth and so let him go, after making him hear of their lord's great deeds.' Those who had lost their nose and ears went and told all to Ravan. When he hes of the bridging of the sea, the Ten-headed started up as oried in consternation :

Doha 6.

"What I he has bridged the sen, with all the spring and streams' that fall therein, the great deep with all it waters. Can it be true that ocean trembles, the lord c rivers, the store-house of the waters, the receptacle of the floods 1"

Chaurái.

Then becoming convoious of the agitation he had dispieced he turned with a smile to the palace, full of frantic imaginations. When Mandodari heard that the Lord had arrived and had made nothing of bridging the sea, she took her spouse by the hand and led him to her own apartment, and besought him in these humble and winning words, howing her head at his freet and holding up the hem of the mantle? — "Bo not angry, my beloved, but hearken to my speech. You should fight, my lord, with one whom yea may be able to subdue either by wit or strength. But the difference between you and Rama is like this between a poor little firefly and the sun. He who slew the monsters

I Fans, which ordinarily means 'a force,' must be taken here in its sery unusual again action of a stream.

² This with women is a sign of the greatest hamility. The corresponding action amongst men is to tie a cloth round their neck.

Madbu and Kaitabba, who worsted Dit's valinat son, Hiranyāksha, who pat Báli in bonds and slew Sahanrabāha, he it sa who has now become incarnate to relieva earth of its burdens. O my lord, do not fight sgainst! in whose hands are Death and fate and our very life.

Doká 7.

Bow your head at Rama's lotus feet and give bim ! Sits; then resign your throne to your son and retire the woods and there worship Raghunath.

Chaupái.

He is pillful to the hamble, like s tiger, who will devour a man who couse to meet him. All that you had do you have done long ago; you have wanquished gold demons and all creation. The saints, O liken, have down this rule, that a king in his old age should retire the forest. There, O my sponse, make your papers to! who is the accator, preserver and destroyer, even Re were gracious to the humble; put away your self-love pride, my lord, and worship him. He for whom the gressints perform all their labour, for whom king leave it throne to become hermith, is this very king of Kosia, Risan, who has come here to show mercy upon you. I sabuit to my advice, and the glory of your renown served through the three scheres."

Doha 8.

So saying she clasped him by the feet, her eyes ful tears and trembling in every limb. "O my lord, wor Rama, and your prosperity shall never be shaken."

Chaupdi.

Hiran raised the daughter of Maya from the age and begun, the fool, to boat of his own night. "Hari my beloved, you are disturbed by idle fear; is three warrior in the world my eagl? Yearna, Kurer, the W god, Yanna, and Fate, and all the regents of the equatures, have been subdeed by the might of my a Goda, demons and kinoars are all in my power to cause can have arisen for these fears of your?" Har thus add everything that he could be comfort her, he as weel and took his sast in the council. Bet Mando knew at beart that his arrogence was doomed to deat him: I not so council he enquired of his ministers; what may shall we fight the enemy?" They ex-"Hearkiet, temini king; what presting an these again agains? Consider now on tour what there is to be a of come, monkeys as hears are now natural foods."

B-63

11:54 2.

Ret Francets, often intoning to all they mill, the hinde and existing less, not, my lowf, and confrasonant fragment; your convenies have mighty little so filtered.

They have all spakes simply to please their master good feather do not come in that way. A single we larged the occurs only each hither; what he did yet know by heart. What' were none of you hangy then, you did not write and identical hither his hard heart him when he set first eith? I fleasant to have heart fraught with fatter trouble the after what he was not resulted to the strength of the set with the street when he we to he make men that we decour, who have heart of the set without any trouble, he crossed over to Squal, with all his army? What way is all ellie hearting, Hearken, sire, with due respensy payer, and do not in your arrogance account a many payer, and do not no your arrogance account a manual. There are pionts of people in the world who ready to make her laten to pleasant speeches, but few, best to make friends with him.

Dold 10.

If he withdraws after recovering his wife, there will no need of any further dispute; if otherwise, then, sire, to face in the battle prepare for resolute encounter.

ford, who care either to held or to give wholesome adif it sounds unpleasent. Hearken now to wise courfirst send an ensey and, when you have restored Sita, do;

Chaurdi.

In either case, my lord, if you accept my advice, will have glory in the world." The Ten-headed any his son in a farty: "Wretch who has target you to a such advice as this? From this time. I have a doubt in mind; can a bamboo root have produced work amers een former, saying these bitter words: "Good advice is as in thrown away upon him as tredicine on a man doome die." Soeing that it was now evening, Rayan proceed the palace glanning with pride at his twenty arms. On top of the Lanka rock was a hall with handsome court-yard; where he went and took his seat. A number of kinners began to sing to the accompaniment of cymbal, drum and late, while besutecon ymphs danced before him.

Doha 11.

The delights that he here enjoyed exceeded a bundredfold those of Indra: the most powerful enemy might threaten, but no fear nor anxiety could disturb his repose.

Chaupdi.

Now the valiant Ráma had crossed over with his army to mount Sevela. There having noted one specially lofty prek, beautifol and bright shows all others, Lakshman with bis own hands spread a couch of lovely flowers and fresh twigs, which he covered with a fine soft deer's skin; and here the All-merciful took his seat. The Lord's head rested in the lap of the monkey-king; to right and left of him were his bow and quiver; with his lotus hands he trimmed his arrows, while the prices of Lrukk withspread texts of scriptors in his sex. The highly favoured Angad and Hanumán caresed his lotus, feet, while behind him Luk-hanc kept watch as a sentinel, with quiver by his side and how and arrows in his kacds.

Dold 12.

Thus sat Rāma, a very store-house of hentgnity, heatly and all perfection. Blessed are they who with profund devotion ever contemplate him under this form. An hot looked towards the east, the Lord objected the rises most and oried to them all: "See the .moon, like some dannies lian.

Chaundi.

That has its dwelling in a cave of the eastern range, preeminent in might, majetys and strongth. Freeda sunder the darkness as it were the head of a wild elephont, and pace the plain of heaven, a line-like moon. The stars scattering about the sky like postel are the pewels of heantsoon night "But," said the Lord, "sell one, my friends, exch one of you your opinion as to the spate on the moon." Said Sugriss

I This scene affords a very farmente subject for film to painters; partly as doubt, as account of the blessing which falst this nore promises to the who contemplate it.

Hearkee, Râms, it is only the shadow the of earth that is seen in the moon." Another said: 'When Râha attacke' the moon, its bosom become that discolured." A this argested: "When Brâhman Isshioned Ratir face, he stel from the moon a part of its essence, and this is the hold that you see in the moon's surface showing the shadow of the sky." Said the Lord: "The moon has a great like of proison, and has given it a home in its very heart; thene darting abroad innumerable empoisoned rays, it tortures parted lowers."

Dohá 13.

But Hanuman cried: "Pear me, my Lord; the moon is your devoted shave, and it is your image embrined in the moon's bosom that causes the darkness." The again All-wise Rama smiled to hear the speech of the Son of the Wind; then turning towards the south, the All-merciful spoke again

Chaupdi.

"Look Vibhishan, to the southern quarier—to the gathering clouds and the flashes of lightning. A pleasant sound of distant thander is heard smidst the gloom; there will be some rain, think you, or a storm of bail? Vibhishan, replied: "Mark me, Sire, there is neither lightning by gathered cloud. On the top of the Lanks bill there is a palace, where flavon witnessee the sports of the area: the royal umbrella held above his head presents the appearance of a mighty mass of cloud: the jewelled consames in Mandodari's ears emits the flashes, my lord, that you take for lightning; while the incomparable music of the yombals and drums is the pleasant sound that you hear, U king of the gods." The Lord smiled and, perceiving his arrogance, strong his bow and fitted an arrow to the string.

Dohd 14.

A single shaft struck umbrella, crown and ear-drop; in the sight of all they fell to the ground, and none could eaplain the mystery. Having performed this startling [est, Râma's arrows returned and dropt into the quiver. But Râvan and the whole assembly were much disturbed when they saw this interruption to their treel.

Chaupdi.

"There was no earthquake, nor wind to speak of, nor did we see a missile of any kind," thus they pondered each to himself. "It is certainly a most alarming ill omen." When Risma precived that the assembly had taken fright, but multed and invented in ingenious answer: "Even when I tout my heads, I came to no harm; now, only my crows have dropt off; whas ill-hack is there in that? Go home ell of yon and go to aleep." They howed and took their levere. But anxisty had settled in Mandedaris bosom the moment the jewes had dropt from her ear to the ground. With streaming eyes and hands clarped in prayer, she cried: "O lord of my list, hearken to my petition. O my busband, give over fighting against Rism, and do not indolge your oride with the idea that he is more mo.

Dold 15

The jewel of the line of Rughu believe what I ray, is the omnipresent God, in whose every himb, as the Vedus declare, is the fabric of a world.

Chaupdi.

His feet are the infernal regions, his head the abode of Brahma, and in every limb aubeists some separate sphere: the play of his brows is the doom of fate, his even ure the sun, his hair the dark thunder-cloud, his nostrils are the twin sons of Asvini, and the constant winking of his eyes the cause of day and night. His ears, as the Vedas declare. are the ten quarters of the heaven, his breath is the wind. and his articulate voice the scripture. His iips are greed and his teeth the terrors of death; his smile is Maya; his arms the regents of the quarters; his face is the element of fire; his tongue, water ; and his movements the creation. preservation and destruction of the universe. The hairs on his body are the trees and bushes that grow on the earth; his bones the mountains, and the net-work of his veins the rivers; his belly the sea, and his hinder parts hell. Everything may be called a manifestation of the omnipresent Lord.

Dold 16.

Who has Sive for his self-consciousness, Brahma for his intelligence, the moon for his mind, and the great First Principle for his soul; who not only indwells in mon, hat also assumes the form of any animate or innaimate creature, the Look Bul: Hearken, my belaved, ponder upon this ard cease to contend against the Lord schools a devotion to Rima's feet, and then my happy entite shall never fail."

Charge!

He laughed when he heard his wife's speech. "We defal, in laed, is the power of infatastion. The postable and the second of the latest of the second of the latest of the second of the latest lampradence, it is not second of the latest lampradence, in fatastion, simility, want of jodgme imparity, and tillibracity. You have declared all the majority and tillibracity. You have declared all the majority and the enemy and told me a most alarming storphit, my deer I see through it at once and perfectly a derstand your kindness. I recognize your elevances, and also, for in this may you have existed my power. You word, fair dams, are oleaners but they are applied.

? The term and ay here employed in that of the Sankhya philosoph arened ag he which acceptaing is accious or produced from an origin primorf at tattra, r starnally existing emenes, ralled Prakriti. From: procond seven productions, which are also producers, and theore exten other principles, which are preferations inly, not president. Soil puriets the sweety fifth resence, is neither a president nor a producer. The first profession of Prakriti to Had Iti, emmanly called intellers or intellectual perception, and extendely termed Water form its being the Great source of the two other internet faculties, thereter, 'self consciousness,' and Massacrat mind Third in order comes this Akashira, the Limiting faculty, that is, mil concre uness, or the sense of individuality [sometimes contenunt'y termet experes, which produces the next fire principles, called Taumateus, it entale elementary particles, out of which the groser elements [Nold-Shata, are evolved. These are aking other; areys, sir; tout or fyels, fire or light, open mater, and prublin or shami, earth. In additional properties of the control of the contro tion to the fire fee malries, the third pristater, Abankara, produces also the eleven utgabe, rer the five organs of sease, budhandrigani, the car, skin, eye, n se and tongue , the fire organs of action, directivities, the largest, hand, foot and the excretory and generative organs; and an eleventh organ standing between these two sets, called masse 'the mind,' which is an internal organ of perception, volition, and action. Thus the eight produces, ere, Frakreti, fluddbi, Abankara, and the fire tan-matras, with the fire grouser elements and the eleven organs, constitute the true elements of the phenomenal world; the most important after the more unintelligent original germ, Prakrits-being Alaskara (See Monier Williams' Indian Wisdom) It is tolerably clear that these categories were in the mind of Tuls! Die at the time of writing, but he has employed them in a loose and popular way. Thus maken, which is strictly a synonym for Aleakers seems in the text to stand rather for Prakrit. In Edma Jasan's edition of the text the words are wrongly divided. As is frequently the case with native Sanskrit scholars when commenting on Hindt literature, the editor would seem to have read the passage too exclusively by the light of Sanskrit authorities. Pratriti may be explained as non-extended energy ; anconscions life moving on towards consciousness; a latent ego destined to put forth conseions thought when the conditions of the environment allow of it. With increase of power there comes an increased Akanther, self-consciousness, or development of the ego into a personage, individual, self-balanced, master of its resources, characteristic, sui generis, bimself.

100

480

image of his majesty on his soul, Augud bowed to the assem bly and went forth, the delighter in battle, the gallant ton of Ball, dauntless by nature and his heart all a glow with the might of his lord. As he entered the city, he came across Ravan's son, who was playing there. From words they proceeded to a struggle; both of unequalled strength and in the prime of their youth to boot. He raised his foot to kick Angad, who at once seized him by it and swung him round and dashed him to the ground. All the demons, even the stontest warriors among them, who saw the deed, dispersed hither and thither, but dared not give the slarm; they did not even whisper to one another, but remained silent, when they saw his death. A rumour, however, was noised through the city: "The monkey who set Lanka on fire has co again; what has God in store for us now?" Thus they pondered in excessive dismay. Without being asked th showed him the road : if he but looked at any one !

118há 18.

Then with his thoughts fixed on Rama's lotus feet b entered the Council Hall, with the gait of a lion, glaceing on this side and that, a bold and stalwart hero.

withered away.

Chaupái.

One of the demons was immediately despatched to report the news to Ravan. On hearing it, the Ten-headed cried with a laugh : "Go and bring this strange monkey here." On receiving this order, a number of his messengers ran and fetched the monkey-chief. In Angad's eyes 'the Ten-headed appeared like the Black mountain ended with life; his arms like trees, his head a rocky peak, the hair on his body us it were all kinds of creepers, and his mouth, nose, eyes and ears like caves and chasms in the rock. Without the slightest trepidation of heart he entered the Court, the son of Bali ; most dauntless of herces. The assembly rose at the sight of the monkey; but in Raven's heart was pogovernable forv.

Dold 19.

As when alion enters among a herd of mad elephants, so after bowing to the assembly he took his seat, his thoughts ever fixed on Rama's power.

Chanzái.

Rivan asked: "Monkey, who are you?" "I am a ambasador from Rism. Rivan. There was friendship between you and my father; and on that account, brother, I have come to you to do you a service. Of high descent, the grandson of Palastyn, you duly worshipped Sira and Brahmis, obtained your prayer of them accomplished all you undertook and conquered the grandsans of the eight quarters and every earthly sovereign. Now onder the inflaence of royal arrogaces or some delusion you have carried off. Sits, the mother of the world. Yet hearken to my friendly advice and the Lord will still packen you. Put a stew between your teeth and an ana to your throat, and with all your family and your one will can with the Mank's despiter placed respectfully at your head, go all of you in this wise without any alarm.

Doha 20.

Crying, 'O jawel of the race of Raghu, defender of the soppliant, says now me, even me, and when he hears your piteous cry the Lord will set your mind at rest."

Chautdi.

"Ab, you wretched monkey, take care what you are soying. Fool, do you not know that I am the declared onemy of the gods? Tell me your own name and your father's friend, and through what relation you claim alliance." "My name is Augud ; I am the son of Ball, with whom you once were on terms of friendship. On hearing Angad's realy, he was confused. "I admit, monkey, that it was so with Ball ; but if Augud is that Ball's son, he has been born as a fire-brand for the destruction of his race, Thewomb that bare you, forsooth, was not pregnant for nothing ; who with your own mouth confess yourself a hermit's envoy. Tell me now, is all well with Ball ?" Anged laughed and replied : "Ten days benne go to Ball and embrace your old friend and ask him yourself of his welfare. He will tell you the kind of welfare that results from fighting against Hama, Hearken, fool ; he is a man dieided against himself . whose heart is closed to the divine Raghubir.

Doka 21.

I, forsooth, am the destroyer of my race, while you. Haven, are the preserver of yours. Who can say that you are blied or deal while you have twenty eyes and twenty ears?

R-64

What I disgrare my family by awhose fast flivs and fleshing and all t sice to corve a your heart chooled burst ing each an time." When he heard the Joindar, Illiam glarmi as him and crimi all your at non because I understand the erate an I raligion." Said the monkey : the platy and virtue you showed in stee. man's wife ; and how you were so good you did not drown yourself at the sight of and wetchmen, and from plone motives fo. when you saw your sister with her nose a Your plety and virtue are renowed through I am most fortunate in being able to see ye is Prate no more, you stapled beate, but h Dold 22.

you impudent monkey, very Rahus as they eclipse the full-moon-like might of the I Sambhu and Kailas to the palm of my lotus hi as the stately swan in the heavenly lake.

Hearken, Angad; tell me what champion th Chaus di. your army who is a match for me. Your lo strength through pining for his bride; young loo is all and and forlorn ; you and Sugrive are curse of your family; while my brother is an ut Your counseller, Jambavan, is so stricken in year. can no longer enter the field of battle. Nala and good architects, and there is one monkey, no c exceptional strength, he who came first and set fin city." On hearing this Augad replied: " Tell me now, O demon king ; is it a fact that a monkey burn Your city? A poor little monkey set Raran's cap fire? Who, on hearing this said, could believe i He, Ravan, whom you extol as so distinguished a pion, is only one of Sugriva's inferior runners. He is one to go, but no fighter : we only sent him to get a Dold 23.

Is it true that a monkey set fire to the city without order from his lord? This is why he did not me back Sugriva, but kent himself and you have said, Rávan, is quite true, and I am not in the least angry at hearing it; there is not any one in our army who would be a fair match for you. Take your friends and enemies from among your equals is a good sound marine; if allow kills a frog, who thinks it a fine deal? Though if is no glory to Ráma to kill you, however great your oftence, still, mark me, Rávan, the furry of the Kshatriya called is hard to withstand." The monkey fees set his heart on fire with the arrows of speech shot forth from the low of arreatted sologeneos, and it was, so to speak, only with a pair of pincers that the dampless Rávan could get out it epiginder. At last he laughed and cried: "A monkey has at all events, one good quality; he will do anything to serve the man who feeds him.

LANKA '

483

Chaupdi.

Brave for a menkey who, regardless of shame, skips to and down in his master's service : dancing and jumping about to amuse the people, he does his duty by his employe right well. All of your race, Augad, are devoted to their lord; it is quite natural for you to speak of your master' good qualities in the way you do. But I am too sagagion in appreciating merit to pay any attention to your insolen tirade." Baid the monkey ; " Hanuman gave me a very true account of your generosity. Though he had laid waste your garden, killed your son and set fire to your city. still von would not do him any harm. It was in reliance mon your magnanimity, Ravan, that I have been thus outspoker Now that I am here, I see that whatever a monkey may sa will neither put you to shame nor excite you to anger o resentment." Your cleverness, monkey, is so great that i might well be the death of your father.". So cried th Ten-headed and burst into a laugh. " After being th death of my father, I would now be the death of you too had I not just thought of something. I look upon you as monument of Bahrs honour and renown, and that is why do not slay you, you wretched braggart. Come, Ravan tell me how many Rayans there are in the world, or lister while I tell you how many I have heard of. One went down into bell to conquer Ball, where the children tied him up in the stable and made sport of him and buffeted him, til Bali took pity on him and let him go. Another sgain wa discovered by Sahasra-babu, who ran and secured him as ٠,٠ curiosity and took him home for a show, till Saint Pulsatys came and rescued him.

Dohá 24.

Another, as I am ashamed to say, was held tight under Ball's arm. Do not be angry,! Ravan, but tell me the truth, which of all there are your?"

Chaupai.

"Hearken, fool; I am that mighty Rávan, the action of whose arms is well-known by Kailás and his valour by Siva; for him I worthipped not with flowers but with my own heads, which I took off with my own lotus hands times cit the eight quarters know the might of my arms; in the heart you fool, is sore diviress to-day. The elephants who support the world learnt also the hardness of my chet whenever I closed with them in conflict; their mighty thanks, though never broken before, soup off like radiable when they struck against my front. As I moved, earth quivered like a small book when a wild elephant steps into it. I am that glorious and renowned Rávan; have you no ears to hear, you lying chattere?

Doh4 25.

This is the Ravan of whom you make light, while you exalt a mere man. Ah vile monkey, infamous wretch, are you at last beginning to understand?"

Chaupsi.

On hearing this, Angad replied indignantly if Gire ore talking, you pitiful hoaster. He, whose ax was like a fire to consume Sahara-háln's mighty forest of arms; whose sword was like the tide of the sait zea, in which king incumerable have been drowned time after time; and at the sight of whose majesty verty not took to flight, how he be accounted a man, you wretched Ravan? How can Rams be a more man, you wretched Ravan? How can Rams be a mere man, you artognat fool? In Kinderser of plenty only a cow; the tree of Paradice only a tree; its of plenty only a cow; the tree of Paradice only a tree; its of the sainbroid any liquid; Gardia mere bird; Seshings a serpent, and the philosopher's atten, Rávan, ohly a stone? Barken, O dell of onderstanding; is Vaikuath an ordinary world, or absolute faith in Rama a common blessing.

¹ Manth bere at and for mach, which occurs elsewhere in the posts with the sense of anger.

.

Doha 26.

Fool, how was it that the mankey Hanuman escaped, after trampling on the pride of you and your army, laying watte your garden, setting fire to your city and slaying your son?

Chaupái,

Hearken, Råvan; have done with conceit and worship Rama, the sill-mercifal. If you are foolish enough to provoke Rama, other Brahma from Radra has the power to protect you. Do not pull yourself out with with educations; if you fight against Rama, this will be your fate: mitten by Râma's arrows, your many heads will full to the ground, in front of the monkeys, and they and the bears will; Lipy polo with them, as if they were so many talls. When Râma waxes words in battle, his arrows if quick and terrible. Will you then perelat in your vain boasting and to trather be wise and adore his clements? "On hearing these words Råvan flared up alreth, like a blaring fire upon which butter has been cut.

Dold 27.

"Have you never heard of my brother Kumbha-karan and my renowned son Indrajit and my own relour, by which I have conquered the whole universe?"

Chauses.

Fool, with the belp of his mankey friend he has bridged the see, has what is that to be proud of P. Brids in summable textures the scene as these are no heroes. Now mark now, mostly in my sare are like a see. Billed with a flood of strength, bosenth which many gold, mea and flood of strength, bosenth which many gold, mea and flood the strength to the strength of the scene and the same that and boundies occasin? I seem made the Discipled draw water for me. You have told me, now weeks, of your king's recome, had if you led to the way in which you harp on his self-termone; then will done he send an ambumake? I sake not ashmed to make terms without seems? I sake a me saw, which could treat mount Kulla as a more clarificated, and then, foolish mother, sing, if you will, the remark system foolish mother, sing, if you will, the remark system could be seen as the same and the same and

Dohd 28. . .

What here is there equal to Ravan, who, with his own hands, cut off his own heads, and delighted to cast them into the fire, time after time, as Siva is witness.

Chaupdi.

When I saw the skull burning with the letters traced on my forehead by the Creator, and read that my death was to be at the hands of a man, I laughed, for I knew the divine prophecy to be untrue. When I remember, this, I have no fear : Brahma must have written when he was old and stupid. Are you not then ashamed, you fool, to keep boasting of any warrior's strength as compared with mine?" Angad replied : "There is no one in the whole world, Rávan, so shamefaced as you. Your modesty is so innate that you never speak of your own merits You are always thinking of the old story of your heads and the mountain, and that is the reason why you tell it me twenty times over. Bury deep in your heart the remembrance of that strength of arm by which you overcame Sabasra-babu and Bali and Ball : but hearken, O dull of soul make the business complete; if a man who cuts off his head is a hero, what a hero a juggler must be, who with his own hands cuts his whole body to pieces.

Doha 29.

A moth is infatuated enough to burn itself to death, and an ass bears any burden, but they are not called heroes: look, stupid, and understand.

Chaupdi.

Boast no more in arrogant speech, but listen modestly advice. I have not come, Ravan, as a servey to propose terms, but Raghubir has sent me from another motive. In his mercy he has said again and again, 'It is no honer for a lion to kill a jookal.' Fondering at heart on my lord's words, I have submitted, wretch, to your injurious speech otherwise, I would have broken your head and carried. Sits, the fair bride. I know all about your strength, rile enemy of heaven, how in Har's absence you robbed his of his wife. Your pride, demon king, is great, but I am the messenger of Rame's servants, and if I were not afrail at

I That is to say, of how you cut off your ten heads as a meridos to him and how you uproved mount Kalika displeasing him, I would as soon as look at you make you a perfect spectacle.

Dold 30.

After dashing you to the ground and routing your army and destroying your city, I would have carried off Sita with all the ladies of your bousehold.

Chaupai.

If I had done so, it would still be no great matter; there is no radors shown in slying the skin. Now so octoset, so man early and with last, a mise, a destinute beggar, a man in disgrace, a man is extreme old age, one who is always ill or always in a pession, a rebel against Yishma, a hater of religion and the saints, a man who thinks only of his own body, a seand-h-mogner and a man thoroughly viclous, these twelve even while they live are no better than corpses. On this account, weeks, I do not alsy you, but do not provoke me further." On hearing this, the demon king cried in a farty:—"Though small of stature, you have spoken big words. O foolish monkey, he of whose might you want so faceely, has no might, or tease, or gleny at all.

Dold 31.

Seeing him to be of no worth or dignify, his father banished him, and this is a zorow to him, as also is the loss of his wife; while his terror of me represses him night and day. Proud as you are of his night, there are thousand of men like him, whom my demons derror every day, and night. Cease your perverseness, fool, and come to your senses.

Chaupai.

Wherehe thus abused Išima, the monkey prince waved wroth. Those who open their ears to statchs upon Hari and Hara are as guilty as if they had killed a cov. The hard monkey gnashed his test no dating him in his two hurled him forlowsy to the ground. The earth shook, the assembly quaked out took to flight an if driver by a herricane of terror. His are raised himself from his fall and sat up, but his magnificent disclosurable from his fall and sat up, but his magnificent disclosurable from his fall and sat up, but his magnificent disclosurable from his fall and sat up, but his magnificent disclosurable from his fall and sat up, but his magnificent disclosurable disclo fore than ferbolte that come with rushing speed." The Lord smiled and said to." Four not at heart; here is constannor sword, nor either Ketn or Bahn; those are Rarm's crowns, which come as despatched by the son of Ball."

Nota 32.

The son of the Wind sprang forward and caught them to his hand and brought and laid them at his lord's feet; the bears and monkeys gazed in attonishment at the sight, for their brilliancy was like that of the sun. On the other hand, Ikfam in his weath cried furnishy to one and laid. "Saise the monkey, seize him and kill him." 'Angad beard and milled.

Chaupdi.

"In like manner selly forth in hast-, all ye mighty mea, and derour every bear and monkey wherever ye find one. On and leave not a single monkey in the whole world, but take alive the two hermit brothers." The prince replied indignantly:—"Are you not a shamed to blatter like this Cut your throat and die, you reckless destroyer of your own family; does not your heart crack at the sight of his power. Ah! Villainous woman-stealer, compound of all that is mean and impure, sensual dollard, though at death's door, you sell babble abuse; Fate has you in his toils, wretched canniba Hereafter you shill resp the fruit of this, when the bear and monkeys belabour you; but when you thus speak and monkeys belabour you; but when you thus speak and monkeys belabour you; or you report tongue does not dro; off; and beyond a doubt it will drop off to the ground, best and all, in the battle.

Sorathd 4.

How can be be a more man, Ravan, who sieve Rill with a curse on your birth, you are blind with all your twenty eyes; a curse on your birth, you base born loot. Rams's arrows are all athirst to drink your blood; for fear of him I spare you, insclost bossier, contemptible demon

Chaupdi.

"I am quite able to smash your jaws, but Râma has given me ho order; otherwise I am so enraged that I would clears aunder your ten heads and take up Lanká and drop it in the sea." Your Lanká is like a fig on a gallar tree, and you the unsuspecting insect that lives in it. I, like a monky, would lose no time in eating the fruit, but the gracious Rama has given me no order." On bearing this simile, Ravan smiled :- " Fool, where did you learn to tell such lies; Bali never blustered like this; intercourse with the hermits has made you such a boaster." If I do not tear out your ten tongues, Twenty arms, of a truth, I am a mere boaster." As he thought on Rama's power, the monkey waxed wroth; he planted his foot firm and offered the assembly this wager :-- " If you can stir my foot, you wretch, Rama will take to flight and I lose Sita." " Hearken, champions all," cried Ravan, " seize this monkey by the leg and throw him to the ground." Indrajit and the other men of valour in their different ranks all rose with joy, but. though they fell upon him with their full strength and with many a trick, his foot did not stir, and they bowed their head and sat down again Again the enemy of the gods rose to the contest; but the monkey's foot moved no more, Garur, than the standard of selfishness planted in the soul of a hypocrite, which there is no shaking.

Doha 33.

Millions of warriors, Meghnad's peers, arose with joy and estayed the wrestle ; but the monkey's foot did not stir, and they bowed the head and sat down again. The pride of the enemy was broken when they saw that the monkey's foot was moved from the ground as little as the soul of a saint abandons the maxims of morality, though assailed by a

Chaurái.

When they saw the monkey's strength, they were all discomforted at heart, till be himself arose to try the test, On his grasping his foot, Bali's son cried :- There is no safety in clinging to my feet ! why, fool, do you not go and clasp Rama's feet?" On hearing this, he turned away full sorry at heart, robbed of all his dignity, and his majesty clean gone from him, as when the moon shows faintly in the day-time. With bowed head he took his seat on his throne, like one despoiled of all his possessions. How can there be any rest for an enemy of Rama, the soul of the world, the lord of life ? O Uma, the play of Rama's eyebrows now creates a universe and now again destroys it. He makes a blade of grass into a thouserbolt and again a thunderbolt into a blade of grass; how could his messenger fall in his challenge? Again the monkey urged upon him R-65 cound deficie to aware promitte way; but he would not hiter; his time hat desawn neve. Who he had or Vicinity templation the profes of the second and excellent his many and excellent his many characteristic time, the sen of king. Date left, saying a Way about! I travition my aid any more short you now ! I shill have the pleasure of this long you not the field." Haden was despondent from the ways first when he heard that the monthy all this was characteristic to the large state when he heard that the monthy all the his was church the demand, when they witnessed Angled hallows we will still more distinguished.

Dold 31.

Having ergelind the power of the enemy, the mighty mankey, the son of Ball, his holdy quirsefing with emotion and he ayes fall of tears, clerked in delight Hamilton feet. When he saw it was aroung, Havin returned sailly to the policy, where Mandoliti again spoke and advised him:

Chauple

" Heffert, my husband, and abundon ill counsel; it is not well for you to fight against Iliams His younger brother drew a little line, and even this you could not cross: each is your strongth? My beloved, you will never conquer bim in battle, whose simple messanger has done suc great acre. Having lightly leaped across the sea, th monkey like a denatiese lion entered your Lanks, kille your watchmen, laid waste your garden, slew Achba a soon as he looked at him, and then set fire to the whole of the city and reduced it to ashes. What place is now left you for prile of power? Cease, my spouse, from idle vaunts and take my words a little to heart. Do not suppose that Rama is a mere earthly king, but recognize in him the lord of all animate and inanimate creation, of infinite power. Maricha confessed the force of his arrows; you, miserable wretch, regard not his voice. Janak's court was crowded with kings, you too were there in all your valour; but it was he who broke the bow and wedded Sits? why did you not conquer him in battle then ? The son of Indes felt a little of his might when he had his life spared but lost one of his eyes; and you have yourself seen provided them with one, without their going abroad to seek in. Sally forth in every direction, my surriors all, and series these bears and monkeys and devour them." O Ilmā. Răvana'c onceit was as great as that of the anadpiese, when it goes to sleep with its legs in the sir 1 On receiving when it goes to sleep with the legs in the sir 1 On receiving and mighty javalina, clobs, maces and treechant area, pikes, swords, bludgeons and masses of rook. Life foul currilvorous Nick that swoop down upon a bary of rables which they have espiel, and after breaking their beats upon them find out their mistake, so these man-eating monesters roughed forth in their folly.

¹ This line was drawn round Sits, as a barrier against the demons. The curcumstance is told in the Sanstrit himdynes, and Table 144, who refers to it here, forgets that be had omitted to mention it in his own poem.

Dohn 39.

Taking how and arrows and weapons of every description, myrisds upon myriads of the stoutest and most valuant demona climbed up to the battlements of the fort.

ChaupAi.

The battlements of the fort looked like the peaks of Mera smidst dense clouds. Drams and other instrements of music sounded for the fray, and the soul of the warriors was stirred by their crash. The trumpets and clarican brayed so fercely that even a coward on hearing them would forget his fear. The throng of monkeys could not be seen for the mighty etature of the warrior beers. They rush on, mixing no account of the meat precipitous passey, but traving down the rocks and so clearing a way for themselves. Grieding their test and bitting their lips in their excess of fary, myrides of warriors shout sleed, there calling upon likewa and here upon liftan. "Glory and likewa had here upon liftan. "Glory and they may be the seen." If the demons can down the montain creat the monkeys with a boand woold acte is and hard it and hard its cat the monkeys with a boand woold acte is and hard its and hard its.

Chhand 1.

The ferious monkeys and bears hy hold of the mountain crags and hust them against the fort. They join follows struggle, seiling an aniagonist by one leg and dashing him to the ground, and if he takes to flight challenging him again to the combat. With a bold desh and a vignous spring they bound up the beights of the fort; and every palace, into which the bears and monkeys penetrated, recomba with songs in likims's praise.

protector of the humble, they were not crowns, but th four prerogatives of a king—conciliation, concession, subjugation, and division, which, as the Vedss say, abide in king a soul. Having recognized the gracious feet of the polity and religion, they came of themselves to their suvereign.

Dohd 37.

Leaving the impious Rávao, the rebel against his lord, the death-doomed, his kingly prerogatives—mark me, mourch of Kosala—have come to you." On hearing this most ingenious fancy, the gracious Ráms smiled, and the son of Bail then proceeded to give bim all the news from the fort.

Chaupdi.

When Rams had heard his report of the enemy, he called all his ministers to him "Take counsel as to how we should attack the four great gates of Lanka." Then the king of the monkeys and the king of the bears and Vibbishan, with their hearts fixed on the Glory of the Solar race, took counsel and settled a plan and divided the monkey army into four companies. After exalting their lord's power, they issued their orders; and the monkeys no somer heard them than they rushed forward, roaring like lions. First they bowed their head with joy at Rama's feet and then the heroes sallied forth, with peaks of mountains in their hands, rearing and leaping, bears and monkeys slike, and shouting 'Glory to Ragbubir, the sovereign of Kosals !' Though they knew that Lanka was a most formidable stronghold, they went on undismayed, in the strength of their lord, spreading like a cloud over the whole horizon, and with trumpets at their mouth making loud music.

Dohá 38.

"Glory to Ráma, glory to Lakshman, glory to the monkey chief, Sugriva!" such was the lion-roar of the great and valiant monkeys and bears,

Chaupdi.

Lanká was full of the ulmost confusion; but Riéran heard the news with his wonted arrogance. "See the impudence of these monkeys," he said with a mile and summoned his demon host. "These monkeys have come by the decree of fate; my demon wanted a neat!"—so saying the wretch burst into a loud laugh—said God his provided them with one, without their going abroad to seek it. Sally forth in every direction, my werriors all, and serice these bears and monkeys and devour them." Of Unak Rivenia concets was as great as that of the analysis of the control of th their inity.

Dold 39.

Taking how and arrows and weapons of every description, myriads upon myriads of the stoutest and most valuant demons of imbed up to the battlements of the fort.

- Chaup4i

The battlements of the fart looked like the peaks of Mera smidst dense clouds. Drums and other instruments of musics consider for the ray, and the soul of the warriors was effired by their crash. The trumpets and clarious brayed so feccely that even a coward on hearing, them would forget his fear. The throng of monkeys could not be seen for the mighty stature of the warrior bears. They rash on, making no account of the most precipitous passes but teating down the rooks and so clearing a way for them, selves. Grinding their teeth and biting their lips in their excess of lary, myrinds of warriors shout sloud, there calling upon Rávas and here upon Ráma. 'Glory and victory, the battle has began.' If the demons cast dawn any mountain crag, the monkeys with a bound would seiz, it and bury it back.

Chhand 1.

The ferious monkeys and bears lay hold of the mountain crags and burd them against the fort. They join, it closes struggle, seizing an antagonist by one leg and dashing him to the ground, and if he takes to flight challenging him spain to the combat. With a bold dash and a vigorous spring they bound up the heights of the fort; and every palace, into which the bears and monkey penetrated, resonds with sough in Mania's praise.

I And thinks that they belo to support the sky.

Dold 40.

Again, taking each a demon in his clutch, the monkey ran off and then dropt to the ground with the enembeneath and themselves on the top.

Chaupsi.

Strong in the power of Rama, the monkey host overcame the throng of demon warriors, and having climbed the fort, made it ring all over with shouts of glory to Raghubir, the sun of majesty! The demons fled headlong, like thunder-clouds driven by a strong wind. There was a grievous wailing throughout the city, children crying and women in dire distress. All agreed in abusing Ravan the king, who had thus invited ruin. When he heard that his forces had been routed, the Lord of Lanks indiguantly rallied his captains: "If I hear of any one turning his back in battle, I will slay him myself with my terrible sword. After devouring all my substance and feasting as you pleased, you now on the field of battle think of nothing but your own safety." On hearing these stern words, the chiefs were all frightened and ashamed. Working them. selves into a fury they sallied forth again crying : 'It is the glory of a warrior to die with his face to the foe, and all desire to live entirely left them.

Doha 41.

Arming themselves with weapons of every description, the gallant chiefs pressed forward to the fray, challeging the enemy one after the other, and so wielding mace and javelin that they sorely discomfited the bears and monkeys.

Chaupdi.

Overcome with terror, the monkeys began to fly, sithough, Umá, they had already won the victory. Stid one:
"Where are Angad and Hanumán ? Where Nals and Nils and the stalwart Dwivid?" "Hanuman heard that his tropd were in distress, but the hero was kept at the western gate. There Meghnád led the defence, nor was it possible to force the gate, so great was its strength. Then the Son of the Wind waved exceeding wroth of onl; with a terrible rors at though the end of the world had come, the hero made a bound and sprang npon the top of Lanks; then selling a rock he rushed upon Meghnád, shattered his chariot, hadd its driver to the ground, and struck the pricos himself with bis foot in the chest. Another charioteer, seeing him senseless, threw him on to his car and brought him home with speed.

Dobd 42.

When Angad heard that Hanuman had made his way into the fort alone, he too, the adventurous warrior, bounded forward to join in his monkey sports.

Choup4i.

Maddened by the battle and full of fury, the two monkeys, mindful at heart of Rama's glory, rushed upon Ravan's palace, and shouting, 'The king of Kosala to the rescue! overthrew the whole building, so that not a pinnacle was left standing. When the demon chief my this, he was dismayed; while the women all struck their breasts crying, 'Now two of these pestilent mockeys have come.' After terrifying them with their monker tricks, and proclaiming the praises of Ramchandra, they grasped each s golden pillar in their hand and cried, Let ns now make a beginning of destruction.' With a roar, they rushed into the midst of the enemy's army, and began laying them low with mighty strength of arm, here a kick and there a blow; crying 'Worship Rams or take the consequences."

Dahd 43.

Overthrowing one after another they strike edities heads and hurl them away, so that they fell at Eirn's Se smashed in pieces like so many earlies pois Chaupdi.

Whenever they enught any great chief the same and by the leg and threw him to their lord Taxon and tioned their names and Rams swiged the key sphere in heaven. Thus, manning reason was devoured even the Seeb of a Bribary First a Transport such as even devoters desire. O Ums Rena y and full of compassion and bestoned at home for this reason, that the demons hid him in some when in a spirit of enmity. Tell me, Blavis, who else week so mercifol. Dall of heart indeed and attende areas are the men who, on hearing of such a keel, do not a saiding their errors and worship bim, Asyst and Hearning thus cried the lord of Aradh-bars forced their way into the fort and Lanka with the two monkeys makes a sight like the sea churned by two Mount Merus.

Doha 44

After crushing the bost of the enemy with the might of their arm, they perceived that it was now the close of day, and forgetting all their fatigue they both came bounding into the presence of their lord.

Chaupái.

They bowed the head at their lord's lotus feet, and he was glad at heart to see his champions again. Graciously he looked upon them both, and af once their fatigue passed away and they were completely refreshed. On learning that Angad and Hanuman had gone, many warriors among the bears and monkeys turned from the field; while the demons, recovering their strength at nightfall, made a fresh onset, crying ' Ravan to the rescue ! At the sight of the demon army, the monkeys turbed again; there was everywhere gusshing of teeth as the heroes closed in the fray. In both gallant armies, the leaders impatiently challenged the foe, and fought as those who will not hear of defeat. The valiant demons were all black of hue; the huge monkeys of many different colours. Both armies were equal in strength, with equally matched champions, the passion with which they fought was a sight to see ; as when in the rains, or the autumn, masses of cloud are driven spainst one another by the force of the wind. When the line began to break, the chiefs Akampan and Atikaya had recourse to jugglery, and all in a minute it became pitch dark, and there was a shower of blood, stones and dust.

Dohá 45.

Seeing the dense darkness all round, the menkey host became perplexed; it was impossible to see one another; there was everywhere a great shouting.

Chaupdi.

Ráma understood the secret of it all and called to Augual and Hanumán and explained to them what was golor on. The mighty monkeys had no sooner heard than they rushed forth in a fury; but the All-meroifal with a uniform his bow and at once let fly a fery a grow. Light shows forth, and there was no darkness anywhere; as when at had dawn of intelligence all doubts disappear. Having recovered the light, the bears and monkeys forgot all their

411

the first and I and i with the two mankage makes a light like the me eliteral by two Moral Merre.

DIAL SE

After exacting the host of the enemy, with the might of that arm, they precident that it was now the close of day. and forgotting all their fulgra thay both came bounding into the premnen of their for !

Chargeli.

They howest the head at their for i's little feet, and he was glad at heart to see his champions again. Gencionde he lanked upon them both, and of once their fatigue pass away and they were completely refreshed. On learning that Angel and Hannnian had gone, many warriors amon; the hears and mankage turned from the field; while the damme, recovering their errougth at nightfall, made a fresh onest, crying ' lisvan to the resone?' At the sight of the demon army the monkeys turbed again ; there was everywhere guashing of teath as the bernes closed in the frag-In both gallant armies, the leaders impatiently challenged the foe, and fought so those who will not hear of defeat. The veliant demone were all black of hue; the huge monkeys of many different colunes. Both armies were equal in strength, with equally matched champions, the passion with which they fought was a sight to see ; as when in the rains, or the autumn, masses of cloud are driven against one another by the force of the wind. When the line began to break, the chiefs Akampan and Atikaya had recourse to jugglery, and all in a minute it became pitch dark, and there was a shower of blood, stones and dust.

Dold 45.

Seeing the dense darkness all round, the monkey host became perplexed; it was impossible to see one another; there was everywhere a great shouting.

Chaup di.

Rama understood the secret of it all and called to Angad and Hanuman and explained to them what was going on. The mighty monkeys had no sooner heard than they rushed forth in a fury ; but the All-merciful with a smile drew his bow and at once let fly a fiery arrow. Light shone forth, and there was no darkness anywhere; as when at the dawn of intelligence all doubts disappear. Having recovered the light, the bears and monkeys forgot all their fatigue and alarm and pressed on exultingly. Hanoman and Angad thundered aloud on the field of buttle, and at the sound of their rozzing the demons fied; but the bears and monkeys, seizing them in their flight, dashed them to the ground, performing prodigies of valour, or catching them by the leg harled them into the see, where alligators, serpents, and fish snapped them up and devoured them.

13.

Dalá 46.

Some were killed outright, some were wounded, some fled back to the fort; the bears and monkeys shouted for . joy over the rout of the enemy's strong force.

Chaupái

Seeing that it was now night, the four divisions of the mankey host returned to the lord of Kosala. As soon as Rama cast his gracious glance spos them. all their fatigue was at once forgotten. On the other hand, Rayan summoned his ministers and told them all how his champions had been killed ; " the monkeys have destroyed half my army ; tell me at once what counsel should be adopted." Therenpon Malyavan a very aged demon, who had been the sausclous adviser of Bavan's father and mother, delivered himself of a speech of the soundest policy : Hearken, my son, to a few words of instruction from me. Ever since you carried off Sits and brought her here there have been omens of ill, more than I can tell. No advantage can be gamed by opposing him, whose glory is the theme both of Ve ia and Pprana.

Dohd 47.

He is the incarnation of the compassionate Lord God, who slow Hiranyaksha, with his brother Hiranya-kasing, and Madbu and the monster Kaitsbha. Who can fight against bim whom Sira and Brahma adore, full of all grace and wiedom, but like the nogel of death, a very fire to consume the forest of wickedness?

Claupái.

liave done with querrelling; give tack Sits and worship the All-merciful with loving devotion." His words stung like serows : " Away, wretch, with your abominable suggestions; if it were not for your age, I would have killed you ; but do not appear in my sight again." He thought within himself, ' He wishes to be killed by the All-martiful, the fort and Lanká with the two monkeys makes a sight like the sea churned by two Mount Merus.

۱

496

LANKA

Doha 44.

After crushing the host of the enemy with the might of their arm, they perceived that it was now the close of day, and forgetting all their fatigue they both came bounding into the presence of their lord.

Chaupái. They bowed the head at their lord's lotus feet, and Lwas glad at heart to see his champions again. Gracio he looked apon them both, and af once their fatigue par away and they were completely refreshed. On learn that Angad and Hanuman had gone, many warriors amo the bears and monkeys turned from the field; while demons, recovering their strength at nightfall, made fresh onset, crying 'Raván to the rescue!' At the sight the demon army, the monkeys turked again; there was ever where gnashing of teeth as the heroes closed in the fra In both gallant armies, the leaders impatiently challenge the foe, and fought as those who will not hear of defea The valiant demons were all black of hue; the huge monkey of many different colours. Both armies were equal i strength, with equally matched champions, the passio with which they fought was a sight to see; as when in the rains, or the autumn, masses of cloud are driven against one another by the force of the wind. When the line began to break, the chiefs Akampan and Atikaya had recourse to jugglery, and all in a minute it became pitch dark, and there was a shower of blood, stones and dust.

Dolld 45

Seeing the dense darkness all round, the monkey host became perplexed; it was impossible to see one another; there was everywhere a great shouting.

Chaupái.

Rama understood the secret of it all and called to Augad and Hanuman and explained to them what was going on. The mighty monkeys had no sooner heard than they rushed forth in a fury ; but the All-merciful with a smile drew his bow and at once let fly a flery arrow. Light shone forth, and there was no darkness anywhere ; as when at the dawn of intelligence all doubts disappear. Having recovered the light, the bears and monkeys forgot all their

Chaupdi

When Hannuman saw the distress of the army, he rushed forth terrible as death and quickly terring up an enormous rock, harded it as Meghada with the atmost fary. Seeing it come, he meanted up into the air; chariot, driver, and horse were all lest to sight. Agus and signal Hannuman and effect when the series of the series were all lest to sight. Agus and signal Hannuman and after asswilling him with every kind of about, almed at him wasper and matrice are very description and the series of the series of the series of the series of the series and series are series of the series and the series of the series are very description and the series of the series of the series are very description and the series of the series are very description. On even general series are very description and the series are series and the series are very description.

Doha 50.

The demon in the foolishness of his soul displayed his supernatural powers before him whose mighty magic subdues Siva and Brahma and all both great and small.

Chaurdi.

Mounting up into the sir, he rained down a shower of firebrands while floods of water broke out from the earth. Goblins and witches of diverse form danced with approachous shoots of "kill bim, tear bim in pieces" Now a shower of excrement, size, blood hair and bones, and now an overwhelming downfall of stones and ashes. The duststorm made it so dark that if you held out your own band rou could not ere it. The mankers were dismoved at the sight of these apparitions and thought at this rate we must all of us perish. But Rams smiled at the idle show seeing however, that all the monkeys were alsome t, he with a single arrow cieft asunder the delusion, as when the san disperses the thick darkness. With a glance of compression, he looked upon the bears and monkeys; at once they wexed so strong that there was no holding them back from the field of battle.

22:24 31

Having obtained Ram's permission. Lakehmen, taking with him Angad and the other monkeys, murched forth in forr, with how and arrows in band - and so rose and departed, uttering words of reproof. Meghada cried in fury: "See what a sight I will at to-morrow; though I do not say much, I do a gree On hearing his son's speech Itävan's confidence r and he took him lovingly into his lap. While the, still consulting, the day broke, the monkeys again the four gates and firecely encompased the precitadel. There was a confused noise in every part town, as the demons snatched up their weapons of description and hurried forward and began hurling masses of rock from the ramparts.

Chhand 2.

Thousands of them hurl down masses of rock: n of very kind are vent flying; the shock is as when falls from heaven and the thonderous noise like that clouds on the last day. The monstrous monkers close combat; their bodies are backed in pieces, though mangled they faint not; they series the reciber; the series that the series of the received hurl them against the fort wherever the demons are. Date 48.

When Meghusid heard that they had again comseized the fort, he gallantly left his stronghold and a forth with heat of drum to meet the enemy face to fee Changai.

"Where are the two brother princes of Kosala, archers so famous throughout the univers? Were Nala and Nila, Desirid and Sugriva, Angad and Hann most powerful of all? Where is Vibblishen, his brothers that I may shy the wretch at once, this every 40% So asping, he made ready his terrible arrows, and in a merce of passion drew the string to his ear. The multiple mous shafts that he left fly sped forth like so many win serpents. Everywhere you might see mankey falling the ground it at that time there was not one that durid face him. Everywhere bears and monkeys were tabling face him. Every wish to fight was clean forgotten. No bear or a monkey was to be seen on the field but those it had left their life there.

Dal.4 19.

At each flight he sent forth ten arrows; the warriors hit the dost s with the rose as of a lion, Meghand shad aloud in the strength of his might.

Chaundi

When Hanuman saw the distress of the army, he reached forth terrible as death and quickly tearing up an anormous rock, harded for a Meghada with the utmost fory. Seeing it corns, he mounted up into tha sair polarios, driver, and hopers were all lost to sight. Again as one gain the training of the control of the control

Doha 50.

The demon in the foolishness of his soul displayed his supernatural powers before him whose mighty magic subdees five and Brahma and all both great and small.

Chaupdi.

Mounting up into the air, he rained down a shower of firebrands while floods of water broke aut from the earth. Goblins and witches of diverse form danced with aproarious shouts of "kill him, tesr him in pieces" Now . shower of excrement, pus, blood hair and bones, and now an overwhelming downfull of stones and sehes. The doststorm made it so dark that if you held out your own hand you could not see it. The mankers were disnayed at the sight of these apparitions and thought at this rate we must all of us perish ' But Rams smiled at the idle show : seeing however, that all the monkeys were alarmed, he with a single arrow cieft amoter the delucion, as when the age disperses the thick darkness With a glenos of compassion, he looked upon the bears and mankers ; at once ther wered so strong that there was no holding them back from the field of battle.

12:24 51.

Having obtained Rama's permission. Lakshman, taking with him August and the other mankers, marched forth in fary, with how and arrows in hand-and so rose and departed, intering words of reproof. Meghada civid in fary: "See what a sight I will show to-morrow: though I do not say much, I do a great do On hearing his sonis speech Hávan's confidence reto and he took him lovingly into his lap. While they still consulting, the day broke, the monkeys again are the four gates and fercily encompassed the precipicitadel. There was a confeared noise in every part of town, as the demons ranched up their wespons of a description and harried forward and began burling d masses of rock from the ramparts

Chhand 2.

Thousands of them hard down masses of rock: mis of every kind are sent flying; the shock is as when a falls from heaven and the thenderour noise like that of clouds on the last day. The monatrous monkry for closes combat; their houles are backed in pieces, though mangled they faint not; they seize the rocks hard them against the fort wherever the demons are.

Dohá 48.

When Meghnad heard that they had again come seized the fort, he gallantly left his stronghold and sal lorth with heat of drum to meet the enemy face, to face. Chauteli.

"Where are the two brother princes of Kosla, i' archers so famous throughout the universe? Where Naha and Nila, Dwirid and Sogriva, Angad and Hantmost powerful of all? Where is 'Vibbishne, his broth carse that I may slay the wretch at once, this every day So saying, he made ready his terrible arrows, and to wence of passion draw the string to his ear. The multit nous shafts that he left fly sped forth like so many win serpents. Everywhere you might see monkeys falling the ground; at that time there was not one that face him. Everywhere bears and monkey were taking flight, and every with to fight was clean forgotten. No bear or a monkey was to be seen on the field but those 't had left their life there.

Dollá 49.

. At each flight he sent forth ten arrows; the warriors bit the dust: with the roar as of a lion, Meghand shot aloud in the strength of his might.

Chaupdi

When Hannman saw the distress of the army, he rushed forth terrible as death and quickly tearing up an enormous rock, harled it at Meghnad with the utmost fury. Seeing it come, he mounted up into the air ; chariot, driver, and horses were all lost to sight. Again and again Hanuman defied him to combat; but he came no nearer and he then anderstood the mystery. Meghoad had approached Rama, and after asselling him with every kind of abuse, aimed at him weapens and missiles of every description; but the Lord with the nimost ease snaffed them, asunder and on seeing this display of power the fool was sors wered and began to put in practice all kinds of magic; as if a poor little enakeling were to mack Garur and frighten

Dohá 50.

The demon in the foolishness of his soul displayed his appennatural powers before him whose mighty magic subdues Siva and Brahma and all both great and small.

Chaupdi.

Mounting up into the air, he rained down a shower of frebrands while floods of water broke out from the earth. Goblins and witches of diverse form danced with aproarion shorts of a kill him, tear him in pieces " Now a shower of excrement, pus, blood, hair and bones, and now an exerwhelming downfall of stones and sales. The duststorm mate it so dark that if you held out your own hand yes early not see it. The mankeys were disnayed at the agit of them apparitions and thought at this rate we mare at of me perith. But Rama smiled at the idle show; seers however, that all the monkeys were alarmed, he with a ray's serve c'eft amoder the delation, as when the sun description thick darkness. With a gisnos of compression, he baker ayer the bears and monkeys; at once they wexed so promy but there was no holding them back from the Dold 51.

Beauty of a red Ridman permission, Lakehman, taking with La fife and the other monkeys, murchel forth in

£3 +9- 1

With bland that west on finishes short and bis buils of sail in him like Minne Himilies ather who Riere mat ant his of employe, who tink appears and their measured and bestened fred m tantine en f hage trane fie miesilie, the manker to most them stranging statuty to Illing They to the feet signally musched and with quother, a mitable emerica if enounce. After builling the reminenteres of the fire the monters past fell por with blows of the fiet and bicks, and rendings teneb . " emiga, carea, anrea, bill, bill, bill, etrika aff ! rend all his sem, such were the reme which filled to confinents of the world, while has l'ace badies still firy bert ranning to end fen from the horsen she gods bahall the spectagle now in dismay and i riptaes

Dolla 52.

Every bollow in the ground was filled full of block cloud to of that overhead, like as when the unoke of a ing corpes agreed a over the ashee of a pyre:

Chaufdi.

While the wounded betwee re-embled so many disk in flavor. The two champions Lakshman and Meg respiled with one another in excess of fary. Neither singly compare the other, it had done by force and by showing himself so wicked. At last the incursation of the control of the control of the control of the control of the champing the control of the cont

I in Rim Jasan's relation, the one I habitually use, the results classify sayer, which may be translated with blood-shet gent, an epichal which appears appropriate to the context. In other elutions is smooth the more common expression judgle sayers, with lover yet.

2 Here the realing that I translate is giri-sile, the rocts and me tains' mentioned above as the monkey missiles. Bam Jaun rowle je sife, which would mean 'triumphant'.

1

Dolla 57.

Bharat saw him, and thinking him to be some most monstrous demon, drew his bow to his ear and shot him with a headless arrow.

Chaupái.

Strock by the dark he fell in a sroom to the earth, cry ing 'O Riam. Riam, prince of Reghu's line! "On hearing this grateful cound, Bharst started up and ran, an in the atmost hasted whateful was been and tried in ever way to review him, but without racetas. What a discound late face and core griff at bear he made this prayer while seven the cound of the Sorathd 5.

With quivering limbs and eyes full of tears, he too and clasped the monkey to his bosom, invoking Rama, the crown of the time of Ragha, in a transport of affection which was more than his soul could contain.

Chaurás.

"Tell me friend, is all well with the Fountain of jos with this treather and the reward Jinnki." The most key told him in brief all that had taken place. He became and of heart and began to fament: Alax, my fate, why we love low world, if in solting I can bely my lord But seeing the endithers of the time be mastered he feelings the gallant prione, and sgain addressed if wonkey: "Sir, you will be delayed to your top your take will some to neight, for the day in now breakin Monat my arrow, mountain and all, and I will send your take will some to neight, for the day in now breakin Monat my arrow, mountain and all, and I will send your take will some to neight, for the day in one breaking the presence of the all-mercifal. On he ing this, the monkey's pride was account: "How can it arrow if y with my weight?" But again reflecting it Rimais power, he bowed at his less and cried with clarp hands:

LANKA

better for me to die at the hands of Itami's messenger, and

Chaupdi.

So earling he went and by the power of magic construted on the mayside a lake, temple and fine garden. Hant man espied the charming spot and thought to himself 'After asking the boly man's leave, I will drink of the water and rest.' For the demon showed himself in a false attire, and sought to deluie the messenger even of the king of delusion. So the son of the wind went and bowed the head before him; and he began to recite Rama's praises, , saying-" A great battle is raging between Ravia and Rama, but Rama will win the day; of this there is no doubt. Though I have not moved from here, I have seen it all, my friend; my intelligence is remarkably clearsighted." On his asking for water, he gave him some in a cup; the monkey said -"That is not enough to satisfy me." "Go then and bathe in the tank and quickly come back, and I will then bestow upon you a gift, by which you may attain to understanding."

Dohá 56.

As he stepped into the tank, a fish seized the manker by the foot. In his alarm he killed it. Whereupon it assumed a divine form, and mounting a chariot ascended into the heaven.

Chaupai.

" By the sight of you, O monkey, I have become free! from guilt, and the curse of the great saint has been removed. This is no hermit, but a fierce demon; doubt not the truth of my words." So saying, the heavenly nymph went her way, and the monkey at once returned to the demon. Said the monkey-"Holy sir, first receive my offering and after that tell me the charm." He then twisted his tail round his head and threw him down. At the moment of his Death he appeared in his proper form, and with a cry of Rama, Rama!" breathed his last. On hearing this Hanuman went on his way, glad of heart. He found the mountain, but could not recognize the herbs; so without any hesitation he tore up the hill by the root and went off with it. As he rushed through the night ale with the mountain in his grasp, he passed over the city of Avadh.

Doha 57.

Bharat saw him, and thinking him to be some most monstrons demon, drew his bow to his ear and shot him with a headless arrow.

Chaupan

Strack by the dark be fell in a swoon to the earth, crying 'O Riom, Lifena, prince of Raghu's line! 'O bearing this grateful sound, Bharts started up and ran, and in the timost hasted draw night to the monkey. Seeing him wounded, he chaped him to his hosem and tired in every way to revive him, but without seccess. What a disconsists face and sore grief at beart he made this prayer while his syestification with the range of the secretary. He had not been allowed to thought, word and deed, I have a sincers affection for Riam's lottes feet, and if Riam is kindly disported to me, may your pain and failings. O monkey, all pas ways," at the sound of these words, the monkey chief arose and sat un, crying, "slowy glory to the king of Koraks."

Sorutha 5.

With quivering limbs and eyes full of tears, he took and disped the monkey to his bosom, invoking Rama, the crown of the lime of Raghu, in a transport of affection, which was more than his soul conditional.

Chaupdi.

"Tall me friend, it all well with the fountain of joy and with his brother and the reverted Jainski." The moreky told him in brief all that had taken place. He became as of heart and began to learnent: Ala, my fate, why was I born into the world, if in nothing I can betp my lord." But seeing the unitness of the time he mastered his feelings the gallant prince, and again addressed the concley: "Sir, you will be delayed in your journey, and your task will come to nought, for the day is now breaking Mount my arrow, mountain and all, and I will send you straight toto the presence of the all-uncerdal." On hearing this the monkey's pride was arounded "Yillow can bit ing this the monkey's pride was arounded "Yillow can bit my weight?" But again reflecting on Riams, part, he bowed at his feet and cried with clarged

Doha 58.

"O my lord, I have only to cherish the thou majesty in my soul in order to travel quickly." Hanuman took leave and after bowing at his feet As he went, the Son of the Wind again and ag to himself the mighty arm and the amiable di Bharat and his boundless devotion to his lord's le

Meanwhile, Rams was watching Lakshma language after the fushion of a min When half was spent, and still the monkey had not reti reised his brother and clasped him to his hear brother, once you could not endure to see me your disposition was ever so affectionate. On you left father and mother and exposed the forest, the cold, the heat and the wind. is now your old love, my brother, that stir in response to my distress. If I had exile involved the loss of my brother, I have obeyed my father's commands. Sons, I house and kinsfolk come again time after time a real brother is not so to be had; remember and awake to life. As a bird is utterly were wings, a serpent without its head-jewel, or without its trunk, so is my life without you If cruel fate preserves me alive, with what fac myself at Availb, after accrificing a dear I sake of a woman I would rather have end diegrace : for after all, the loss of a wife is ! matter, and my heart is so hard and unfee bear the sight even of this your anguish. only son, my brother, you are the sole sup; but she took you by the hand and entruste knowing what a comfort and what a frier

I the lament were his want of fireknowledge i L. This lament user his want of liven newsourse! I be gamened, it which Kama is suppressed as suppressed, as a Chicago, in which make is represented as an in-part a case live seems by quality of did Make many following as fatel to the Irequently (which we seem many points to servatary) con a distance persons and we closer a species sum in the st B GLYINE STEPPE MEET AN THOSE H LEGGES, STANDON COMMISSION OF STREET, $1 and bit which only an or locally business had underent as many's me is a time of endament, which the great factor additional force for its line should be a few in the land equal ter e ugainst elle interpretation du des print tents probled ut tive, los anness given by Eu el Dan sufficentif position at the process of the process of the process of a fine process of the pr which is a second to be a second to the seco you. What answer can I go and give her? Why do you not rise and advise me, brother? "Thus grievously sorrowed the healer of sorrow and his lotus eyes streamed with tarr; but Umi, Rima is one and unchangeabla, and it was only in compassion to his worthippers that he exhibited the manners of a man.

Soratha 6.

All the monkeys were in distress on hearing their lord's lamentation, till Hamman arrived, like an heroic strain in the midst of an elegy.

Chaupdie

Rama received him with exceeding joy, for the Lord is most grateful and supremely wise. Then quickly the physician concocted his remedies, and Lakshman gaily rose and sot up. The Lord affectionately clasped his brother to his heart and all the bears and monkeys were rejoiced. The physician was then conveyed home sgain in the same manner as he had been brought away. When Ravan heard of these proceedings, he was greatly disturbed and began beating himself on the head. In his agitation, be went to Kumbbakarn and with much trouble succeeded in waking him. When the monster was roused, he showed like Death itself in visible form. He saked, "Tell me, brother, why is your face so sad." He told him the whole history of how in his pride he had carried off Sita " Brother the monkeys have killed all the demons and routed my stoutest warriors. Durmukba and the man-devouring Suraripu; Atikays and Akampan, those mighty champions, together with Mahodara and other valuant herces, who have fallen on the field of battle."

Daha 59.

On hearing Ravan's report, Kumbha-karn cried out; "Wretch, you have carried off the mother of the universe and yet expect to prosper 1

Chaupdi.

You have done ill, O demon king; and now why have you come and awakened me? At once, brother, abandon your pride and worship Ráms; so shall you prosper. How, Ren-beads, can Háms be a man, when he has such a servant as Hannmán. Alas, brother, you have acted foolishly; why did you not come and wake me before? You have

Doha 58.

"O my lord. I have only to cherish the though majesty in my soul in order to travel quickly." & Hanuman took leave and after bowing at his feet so As he went, the Son of the Wind again and again to himself the mighty arm and the smiable dist? Bharat and his boundless devotion to his lord's fe 3.

Chaupdi.

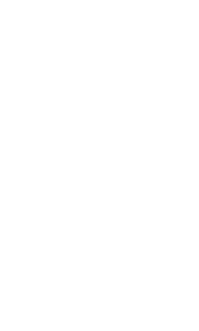

Meanwhile, Rams was watching Lakshi's language after the fashion of a min. When § was spent, and still the monkey had not raised his brother and clasped him to his brother, once you could not endure to . 1 your disposition was ever so affections you left father and mother and the forest, the cold, the heat and the is now your old love, my broth stir in response to my distress. exile involved the loss of my /1 have obeyed my father's commit to house and kinsfolk come again to a real brother is not so to be had and awake to life. As a by wings, a serpent without it without its trunk, so is myself at Avadh, after 3 ... sake of a woman. I w/ 4 5 9 disgrace; for after all, matter, and my hear? bear the sight even of only son, my broth but she took you by ote Rám .. distinguish i death was doom knowing what a I This lament . passages, in which ! frequently quoted is a divine person a narrative itself, to unwise to adopequal force ag point of view. and correspon personam D divies sint."

ords, Vibhishan turned : the Glory of the three sphe .cu approaches; a warrior hoge The monkeys waited to bear abbering, the stontest of them, and place note which they harled against his tooth the while. Millions upon millions c "I the bears and monkeys cast upon his hat neither did his courage fall, nor di resiti a-like an elephant pelted with rebailed against the god who is advered by Sira and Brahmi and every other divinity. The knowledge which the 1920 Maral Imparted to me, I now declare to you I for the time has come. Embrace my, my brother, for I go to rejoices eyes with the sight of the dark hand, the lotts eyed, the healer of every worrow!"

Dold 60

As he contemplated Rame's heavity and perfection, was for a moment anconscious, then demanded of Rara million jars of wine and a whole herd of buffalces.

Chrupdi.

After be had eaten the logfalors and drunk the wice, coared alon'd the voice of thonder and sallied forth fr the fort without any event, mad leaned with drink, the voluming Kumbhi-karn. Vibhishm, on seeing him, or forward and fell at his feet and end who be was. He rail his brother and took him to his beart, delighted to find his aworshipper of Raim. Brother, that wetch Rain struck me with his foot for giving him the best position of the seeing and the struct of Rain, and Lord war glad at heart to see me his servant. Mir will lard war glad at heart to see me his servant. Whit was the servant of the servant. When the brother, fixen is under the influence of fate and will listen to no advice, however good. Thrice blessed are you Whishian, the glory of all the demon race; you have see a lustre on all your kinsfolk by your worship of Raims, the ocean of beauty and felicity.

Dold 61.

You have guilelessly worshiped the heroic Rams in thought, word and deed. But go, I cannot distinguish here between friend and foe." The wariror's death was doomed.

Chaupái.

On hearing his brother's words, Vibhishan turned and presented himself before the Glory of the three spheres "My lord, Kumbha-kara approaches; a warrior bage of stature as a mountain." The monkeys waited to hear so more, but ran off jabbering, the stonetes of them, and placked up trees and rocks, which they harled against him, guashing their teeth the while. Millions upon millions of mountain peaks did the hears and monkeys cast upon him one after another; but neither did his courage fail, nor dil he etit from his position; like an elephant pelied with ground to powder between his hands. But many of the bears and monkeys escaped, by the passage of his more, or nostrile or ears. Denne with the malense of buttle, the demon was as leastful as though the whole universe hat been make aver to him to carrage. Every champion took to flight, and there was no trening them back; they could neither sea with their even one here any cry. When they learnt that Kumbhu-karn had routed the monkey book, demons all relied. But Riam, saw his samy in distress and the forces of the enemy coming on in full error.

Dala 61.

" Hearken, Sugrive and Vibbishen, and you my brother collect your troops and let me test the might of these mis creents:" thus cried the latureyed.

Chaus di.

With bow in hand and quiver fitted to his side, Raghenath went forth to scatter the ranks of the enemy. The Lord gave his how a preliminary twang; the bosts of the few were designed by the din. Then he let fly a million of arrow, he, the god ever fauthful to his promise; the winged shafts sped like expents of death. The terrible bolis flow in all directions; the mighty demon warriors were cut to piece. Feet, tronk, head, and arms were shorn away; many a hero was cut into a hundred pieces. The wonder real and fall to the ground, but gallantly recover themselves and rise again to renow the fight. The arrows as they strike give a thud like thunder: many fled when they as how terrible they were. Headless bodies rush mady on they cry resounds, 'Seire, seize, kill, kill.'

Doha 65.

In a moment the lord Raghubir's arrows cut to pieces the terrible demons; and they his shafts all came back into the quiver.

Chaupdi.

When Kumbha-karn saw and perceived that the demonbance of the same and the same and the same are acceptable was described worth and roared aloud with the voice of a lion. In his fury, he tore up mountains by the root and hard-d them upon the throng of monkey chiefe. The lord saw the meastrous rocks coming and with his arross shattered them into dust. Again Raghangas indiganally

š.

atrung his how and let fly a voltey of his terrible shafts.

As they entered and passed through his body, they seemed like fisshes of lightning stored in a dense thouser cloud.
The atreams of blood on his black frame resembled rivers of red order on mountain of soot. Perceiving his directs, the bears and monkeys ranked forward, he laughed when he are them draw ears.

Dohá 66.

Rearing alond with a terrible voice, he seized myriads and myriads of the monkeys, and dashed them to the ground like a lion, invoking the name of Ravan.

Chaupái.

The bears and monkeys all fled, like a flork of sheep at the sight of a wolf ; and in their flight, Bhavani, they cried sloud in their distress with a piteous voice : " This demon is for the monkey race like a sore famine that threatens to devastate a whole country. O Rama, Kharari, sain-cloud a merov, ever ready to relieve the distress of the suppliant, have mercy upon us, have mercy upon us." When the Lord God heard their piteous cry, he took his how and arrows and went forth. His army be checked in the rear and went forth in his own might, full of indignation. He drew his bow and fitted a hundred arrows to the string ; they flew forth and entered into his body. At their stroke he rushed forth in a fury-the mountains reeled, the earth staggered-and tore up a rock, but Rama shot away his arm. Again he rushed on, with a rock in his left hand : but that arm too Rama out off, and it fell to the ground. The mouster thus robbed of his arms resembled mount Mandara without its wings. With savage eyes he glared upon the Lord, as though ready to devour the whole universe.

Doha 67.

With a most terrible shrick he rushed forward with open mouth. The saints and gods above cried out in their terror, "alas, alas, alas."

Chaupdi.

wWhen the All-merciful saw the alarm of the gods, he draw his how with its string to his ear. The flight of arrows filled the demon's mouth, yet he was so strong, that he did not fall to the ground. With his mouth full of arrows he still reabed upon the tre, like a living quiver of ground to powder between his hands. But meny of the bears and mankeys escaped, by the passage of his more, or mostrile on ease. Denne with the muchases of hattle, the domen was as healtful as though it whole universe had been made over to him to everyor. Every champion that highly, and there was no turning them back; they could neither see with their even in her any cry. When they been that Kumbhusken had could be monkey book to demons all rathest. But Râms sew his army in distinct and the factors of the nearwo coming on in full stray.

Æ

Dota 64.

"Hearken, Sugrive and Vibbishan, and you my brother, collect your troops and let me test the might of these mircreams: "thus cried the latin-axed."

Chaus di.

With bow in hand and quiver fitted to his ride, Ray, nith went forth to exister the ranks of the enemy. Lord gave his how a preliminary twang is hosts of fee were deafened by the din. Then he let fly a million arrows, be, the god ever faultful to his promie; the wise of whatts sped like separate of death. The terrible he flow in all directions; the mighty demon surriors were to prices. Feet, trunk, head, and arms were shorn away many a here was cut into a hand-red pieces. The wood reel and fall to the ground, but gallantly recover themselvend rise again to renew the fight. The arrows as the strike give a thud like thunder: many field when they as how terrible they were. Headless bodies rush madly on they or ye reconds. Selice, seize, kill, kill.

Doha 65.

In a moment the lord Raghubir's arrows cut to piece: the terrible demons; and they his shafts all came back into the quiver.

Chaupdi.

When Kumbha-karn saw and perceived that the demon behalf been routed in a minute, the mighty warries wared exceeding worth and roused aloud with the roice of a lion. In his fary, he tore up mountains by the root and harded them upon the throng of monkey chiefe. The lord saw the mountrous rocks coming and with his arrors shattered them into dust. Again Rughandyak indignantly etrong his how and let fly a volley of his terrible shafts.

100

As they entered and passed through his body, they seemed like flashes of lightning stored in a dense thunder cloud. The streams of blood on his black frame resembled rivers of red other on a mountain of soot. Perceiving his diverse, the bears and monkeys unded torward; he laughed when he me them that we have.

Daha 66.

Rossing sloud with a terrible voice, he seized myriads and myriads of the monkeys, and dashed them to the ground like a lion, invoking the name of Rávan

Chaupsi.

The hears and monkeys all fled, like a flock of sheep at the sight of a welf ; and in their flight, Bhayani, they oried alond in their distress with a piteous voice : "This demon is for the monkey race like a sore famine that threatens to devastate a whole country. O Ráma, Kharári, rain-cloud a meroy, ever ready to relieve the distress of the suppliant, have mercy open us, have mercy upon us." When the Lord God heard their piteous cry, he took his bow and arrows and went forth. His army he checked in the rear and went forth in his own might, full of indignation. He drew his bow and fitted a hundred arrows to the string : they flew forth and entered into his body. At their stroke he rushed forth in a fury-the mountains reeled, the earth staggered-and tore up a rock, but Rama shot away his arm. Again he rushed on, with a rock in his left hand : but that arm too Rams out off, and it fell to the ground The monster thus robbed of his arms resembled mount Mandara without its wings. With savage eyes he glared upon the Lord, as though ready to devour the whole universe.

Dohā 67.

With a most terrible shrick he rushed forward with open mouth. The saints and gods above cried out in their terror, 'also, alas, alas,'

Chaupdi.

"When the All-mercital saw the slarm of the gods, he drew his bow, with its string to bit ear. The flight of arrows filled the demon's mouth, yet he was so strong that he did not fall to the ground. With his mouth foll of arrows he still rushed upon the fre, like a living quiver of death. Then the Lord in his wrath took his sharpest arrow and struck his head right off his bedy. The head fell at the feet of Ravan, who was as dismayed at the sight as a snake that has dropt its crest jewel. The ground suck beneath the weight of the trunk, as it still ran madly on: till the Lord cut it in two. Then it fell to the earth like a mountain from the sky, crushing beneath it monkeys, bears, and demons. His soul entered the Lord's mouth, to the astonishment of gods, saints, and all. The gods in their delight sound the kettle-drum and hymn his praise, and rain down flowers in abundance. After paying homage, all the gods went their way. At that time came also the divine age. Nárad, and extolled above the heaven list's infinite perfection. The Lord's soul was pleased by his stirring heroic strain. 'Make haste to destroy these miscreant's were the saint's words as he left. Rams remained in his glory on the field of battle.

....

Chhand 3.

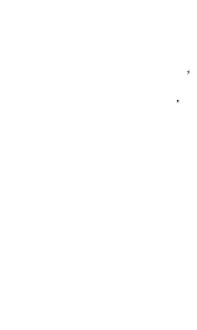

All-glorious shone forth lagshapati on the field of balt in his immeasurable might and manifold beauty, with t drops of toil on his lotus face, with his lovely eyes and I body specked with blood, while in both hands be bratished his bow and arrows, with the bears and make grouped all around him. Not Sesbadg with his many to use could tell all his beauty, so says Taile 164.

Doha 68.

Though the demons were so vile and very mines of is purity, he translated them to his own sphere. O Uma, he dull of understanding are the men who do not worship the driven Rism.

Chaupái.

At the close of the day both armies retired; the hatth hat thoroughly exhausted the stoutest warrion. In the property of the property of the street warrion that the street warrion to the street warrion the street warrion to the stre the giver of the bettle that he allowed himself to be the seepents' coile; but the gods were in a panic

۵

1) 34 10.

O Umi. Is it possible for him to be brought int age, by whose name when repeated in prayer the free themselves from the bonds of existence; who omnipresent centre of the quiverse?

Chaupdi.

O Bharani, the actions of the incurnate Rams are i the range of thought, or human strength, or speech. is the reason why the wisest ascetics discard theor speculations and simply adore. Having thus thros army into confusion, Meghnad at last manifested h with words of reviling. Jambavan shouted : " W keep your place.' On hearing this, his fury wated · Fool, I only spared you on account of your I think scorn of your challenge 'So saying, he let f terrible trident ; Jambavan cought it in his hand and rushed on and gave Meghnad such a blow on the that he, the scourge of beaven, fell swooning to the gre Then in his wrath he caught him by the foot and sy him round and dashed him on the earth as a display of strength. But he by virtue of the divine boon died for all his killing ; so he took him by the foot and to him into Lanka, while the god and saints sent Garur, came in baste to Rama.

Doha 71.

And seized and devoured the whole swarm of fi serpents. The delusion was dispelled, and all the menhost rejoiced again. Tearing ap with their claws the in and rocks of the mountain, they rushed forward, while the demons fled in utter confusion and climbed up into the fort.

Chaurdi.

When Meghada recovered from his swoon, he we greatly ashamed to look his father in the face; and any and went in haste to a cave in the mountain, intending the perform a sacrifice that would canyout offered. But Visitian gave the caution; "Hearken, O king of anboundering has a confine—workbod sorcers and scoarge of heaven as he can be compared to the control of th is-and if he bring it to completion, Sire, it will not be easy to conquer him." On hearing this, Raghupati was highly pleased and said to Angad and the other monkeys: "Go, my brothers, you and Lakshinan, and put a stop to his sacrifice. It is for you, Lakshman, to fight and slay him : I am distressed to see the terror of the gods. Kill him, either by open force of by stratagem ; one way or another-mark me, brother-the demon must be got rid of. But you three, Jambayan, Sugriya and Vibbishan, remain with the army." When Raghubir had finished his commands, the hero girt his quiver by his side and took his bow, and with the glory of his lord impressed upon his heart cried aloud with a mighty voice as of thunder : " If I return to-day without elaying him, may I be no longer called Itama's servant ; though a hundred Sivas give him help, I will slay him yet, in the name of Rama,"

Doh6 72.

After bowing his head at Rama's feet, the incornation of Seshnag went forth at once and with him Angad, Nila, Mayanda, Nela, and the valient Hanoman.

Chaupái.

When the monkeys arrived, they found him making an oblation of blood and buffalo's flesh: They all tried to interrupt the ceremony, but he would not air ; they then took to praising him. ! When still be did not rise, they went and pulled him by the bair, upon which he kicked out so fiercely that they ran away. He pursued them with his trident as they fled, till they joined Lakehman. He came on in the wildest fury, striking out and shouting again and again with a terrible roar. Hanuman and Augad rushed bercely forward, but he struck them on the breast with his trident and beat them to the ground. Then he shot forth his mighty spear against the Lord, but he warded it off and broke it in two. Meanwhile the Son of the Wind and the prince had risen again and amote him foriously ; but his wounds had no effect upon him. The heroes fell upon him once more, but their enemy was not to be killed ; again be came on with a terrible shrick. Then Lakshman made up his mind t 'I have played with this miscreant long enough." and seeing him advance, furious as hell, he let fly his

I That is, they colarged upon his strength and courses and wondered why be abould turn from fighing to sacrince, terrible shaft. When he saw the arrow commer so lk thunderbolt, the wretch at once disappeared from s and continued fighting under various carries, visible and now invisible. The monkers there's invincible and trembled. Then the incumular of serpent-king became exceeding wroth and all excerns in intention to the glory of the lord of Kesala, fine so are to the string and with all his might let it Er. It size him full in the breast. In the moment of death be also doned all falsehood.

Dohá 73.

And invoking the names of Lakshman and Rima his his last breath. Blessed indeed is thy make and Augad and Hannman.!

Chaupái.

Without an effort Hanuman took up his body and I'd it at the gate of the city and returned. When ther but his death, the gods and Gandharvas mounted the chariots and came thronging the heaven, showering dest flowers and beating drums and hymning the species nown of the divine Raghubir. Glory to Seshair, Finthe world-supporter ; You, O Lord, are the Sariott of the gods. Having thus hymned his praises, the gods a saints withdrew, while Lakshman went and presented by solf before the All-merciful. When the Ten-headed beard his son's death, he swooned away and fell to the ground Mandodari made grievous lamentation, beating her her and over calling upon his name ; the citizens too were h sorrowful and dismayor and with one consent revise Rávan.

Dold 74.

Then the Ten-headed set to comforting his wires " every way he could t " Bee and consider at heart how tar sitory is everything in this world."

Chaupdi,

Ravan gave them sound advice I though a dullard to self, his counsel was good and wholesome. There are man men who excel in giving advice, but the people who pet in practice not very pleatiful. When the night her such a Kallant match t and one who summed see faith in the passed and the day broke, the bears and mockeys again beest the four gates. Rivan summoned his espatian and thus addressed them: "If any one's beart fail him in facing the battle, he had better withdraw new and not inour disgrace by running away in the midst of the engagement. Belying on the strength of my own arm, I have continued the straggle, and can give an answer to any enemy who may challenge me. "No saying, he made ready his chariet, evilt as the wind, while every instrement of music sounded forth atrain of deadly combat. His champions marched on in their percless might, like the march of a whitevine of thekness. At that time occurred unuslesses owens of ill, but he heeded them not, in the overweening pride of the strength of his archy

Chhand 4.

In his overweening pride he took no heed of omeas, good or bad: wespons dropt from the hand; warriors fell from their cars; horses, trightened by the trumpeting of the elephants, ran out of the line; jacksis, voltores and huge packs of dogs made a frightful clamour, and owk, like messengers of death, uttered their most lagabrious notes.

Dohd 75.

How was it possible for him to have prosperous omens of good fortune, or even to dream of peace of mind, when he was so infatnated that he desired the rain of the whole world and was set upon opposing Rama.

Chaupdi.

The demon hest marched on in countless number; elephate and chaints, foot and horse, line after line; equipages of every description, wagnes and case, with banners and standards of diverse colour; innumerable troops of inforiated elephants like autume clouds when driven by the wind; taltalions of swape demons of different colours, inspired with all the phrenzy of martial heroes is a zero magnificent in every respect, like the mostered array of the gallant god of spring. As the host marched; the elephants of the eight quarters resied, the occas was attread from its depths, the mountains shook. The desi rose in clouds that observed the ray, the wind failed, and the 'earth was troubled, "Droms and other instruments of maje made in welf in welf in the line of the problem."

336 terrible shaft. When he saw the arrow coming on like a thunderbolt, the wretch at once disappeared from eight and continued fighting under various disguises, now visible and now invisible. The monkeys thought his invincible and trembled. Then the incurration of the serpent-king became exceeding wroth and directing his intention to the glory of the lord of Kosala, fitted an arrow to the string and with all his might let it fly. It stretch him fall in the breast. In the moment of death he shandoned all fielshoad.

Dohá 73.

And invoking the names of Lakshman and Rama drew his last breath. 'Blessed indeed is thy mother' cried Angad and Hanuman.

Chaupái.

Without an effort Hanumán took up his body and per it at the gate of the city and returned. When they here of his death, the gods and Gandharwas mounted the charicists and came thronging the beaver, abovering down flowers and beating drems and hymning the spotlers re nown of the divine Raghubir. 'Glory to Scalinass, glory the world-supporter; You, O Lord, are the Baviour of all the gods.' Having thus hymned his praires, the gods and saints withdrew, while Lakshman went and presented himself before the All-merciful. When the Ten-headed heard of his son's detable, he swooned away and fell to the ground! Mandodari made grievous lamentation, beating her breat and ever calling upon his name; the citizens too were all sorrowful and dismayed and with one consent revited.

Doh4 74.

Then the Ten-headed set to comforting his wires in every way be could: "See and consider at heart bow trannitory is everything in this world."

Chaurdi.

Hávan gave them sound advice; though a dullard himself, his connect was good and wholesome. There are may men who excel in giving advice, but the people who pet it in practice are not very plentiful. When the night had passed and the day broke, the bears and mockeys again besset the four gates. Révau summoned his captains and thus addressed them: "If any core's heart fail him in facing the battle, he had better withdraw now and not incarr disprace by running away in the midst of the engagement. Belying on the strength of my own sum, I have continued the straggle, and can give so answer to any encour who may challenge me. "So saying, he made ready his charfot, swift as the wind, while every instrument of music sounded forth a strain of deady combat. His champions marched on in their peerless might, like the march of a whirlenin of plackness. At that time occurred numberless uness of ill, but he beeded them not, in the overweening pride of the strength of his archent of the order of the contract of the pride of the strength of his archent of in the overweening pride of the strength of his archent of his pride of the strength of his archent of his pride of the strength of his archent of his pride of the strength of his archent of his pride of the strength of his archent of his pride of the strength of his archent of his archent

I For giving birth to such a gallant warrier and one who showe) set faith in the hour of death.

Chhand 4.

In his overweening pride he took no beed of omens, good bis over weepens dropt from the hand; warriors fell from their care; hores, frightened by the trampeting of the elephonts, ran out of the line; jacksts, vultures and bugs packs of dogs made a frightful clamour, and owls, like messengers of death, uttered their most legabrious mates.

Dold 75.

I flow was it possible for him to have prosperous omens of good fortune, or even to dream of peace of mind, when be was so infatnated that he desired the ruin of the whole world and was set upon opposing likims.

Chaupai.

The demon host matched on in consuless number; elephants and chariots, foot and horse, line siter line; equipages of every description, wagons and cars, with beamers and standards of diverse colours innumerable troops of inforiated elephants like autumn clouds when driven by the wind; tattalions of surge demons of different colours, inspired with all the phrenzy of martial herce; is a runy magnificent in every terpect, like the mustered array of the gallant god of rpring. As the host marched; the eleiphants of the eight quarters reced, the occan was stirred from its depths, the mountains shoot. The dest rose in clouds that cherefeet the two, the wind fairful, and the earth was troubled. Droms and other instruments of music made as avfal din, file the crash of thunder-clouds on the last day. Clarions, trumpets, and hunthoys sounded the marin strain that gluidens the souls of heroes. With one score they shouted as with the voice of a lion, each extolling his own strength and manhood. Rávan oried: "Hearken my warriors; do you attack the common herd of best said monkeys; I myself will slay the two brother princes." So saying, he ordered the army to advance to the front. When the monkeys heard the news, they all rushed on, erging 'Hâm't of the resoue."

100

Chhand 5.

The gigantic and terrible bears and monkeys rushed on like death; flying through the air like so many winged mountain of diverse colours. With talons and test have rocks and enormous trees for weapons they all feel no fear, singing the glory of liam, the lion-like vanquisher of the wild elephant Rayan.

Dollat 16.

With a shout of 'victory, victory' raised from both sides, the horoes selected each his match and closed in combat, these calling on Rávan.

Chaupdi.

When Vibhishan observed that Ravan was in a chariot and Rama on foot, he became anxions; his extreme affection made him doubtful of mind, and falling at his feet he cried tenderly : " My lord, you have neither a chariet nor shoes to your feet, how can you conquer so powerful a warrior ?" " Hearken, friend," replied the All-merciful, " a conqueror has a different kind of chariot. Manliness and courage are his chariot wheels; unflinching truthfulness and morality his banners and standards; strength, discretion, self-control and benevolence his horses, with grace, mercy and equanimity for their harness: prayer to Mahadeva his unerring charioteer; continence his shield, contentment his sword, alms-giving his axe, knowledge his mighty spear, and perfect science his stout bow. His pure and constant soul stands for a quiver, his pious practices of devotion for a sheaf of arrows, and the revenue he pays to Brahmans and his gurn is his impenetrable cost of mail. There is no equipment for victory that can be compared to this, nor is there any enemy, my friend, who can conquer the man who takes his stand on the charlot of roligion. He who has such a powerful chariot as this is a wattor who can overcome even that great and terrible seemy, the world; hearken, friend, and tear not." When he had heard his lord's exhortation, Vibbishan clasped his feet in his joy and cried—"O Rham, full of uncey and kindness, you have ned this parable to give me a lesson." On the one side Kava's rabble, on the other Angad and Hanumán, the demons against the bears and monkeys, had joine di hattile, each wavaring by his own lord.

Dohd 77.

Chaupai.

Brahma and the other gods, with all the minite and sages, momanted their chariots to watch the fray, from the heaven above. I too, Umá, was with them, beholding like and the series of the series of the leader were madelend with marrial phrenzy, but the monkeys were triumphant through the might of lifera. With shouts of defence they close as single combat, each, manting his fee and besting him to the ground. They strike, they bite, they clotch, they fell; they tear of heads and use them for missiles; they rip up bodies, wreach off arms, and selizing by the leg dash to the ground. The bears buy the demon warriors in the earth and pile over them heaps of sand; the stardy monkeys riging in the fight were like so many monstrous images of ravenging death to look upon.

Chhand 6.

The monkeys, their bodies all streaming with gore, stood forth like multiplied images of the god of deeth, crushing the mightient warriors of the demon host and crasting with a voice of thunder. They strike, they beffet, they tear with the teeth, they crash beneath to feet, attering force cries, both bears and monkeys, and amploying strength and strategom alike, by which to reduce the miscreauts. They seited and teen open their checks, they rip up the body and take the certains and hang them round their own necks, as though the lord of Prahlad (Martich) hand assumed a multiplicity of forms, and were disporting himself on the field of tattle. Seize, strike, tear, overchrow, were the saverse cries, with which earth and beaver resounded. Olory to Hams, who can make a straw a thunderbolt and again reduces a thunderbolt to a straw.

Doha 78.

When Ravan saw his troops in confusion, he mosa his chariot, with his twenty arms and ten bows, and ess ed to rally them, crying, turn turn.

Chaupdi.

The Ten-headed rushed forth in wild fury, and t monkeys with a whoop advanced to meet him. Taking their hands trees, crags and mountains, together they hurled them upon him. The masses of stone no soon struck on his adamantine frame than they were at on shattered in pieces, while he flinched not, but stood fir as a rock and stayed his chariot, he, Ravan, maddened wit the battle and terrible in his fury. This side and that h scattered and battered the monkey chiefs in the flercene of his wrath. Bears and monkeys all took to flight, erging " Help, help, Augad, Hanuman save, save, O lord Ragbuble this monster, as sure as death, will devour us all. When he saw the monkeys in flight, he fitted an arrow to each o his ten hows.

Chhand 7.

He strung his bow and let fly a volley of arrows; they flew and lodged like scrpents; the heaven and the earth were full of arrows; the monkeys fled in all directions. There was a terrible uproar, the monkey host and the bears were panic-stricken and cried in dismay-" O Raghulie, fountain of mercy ; O Hari ; friend of the forlorn, envious of mankind."

Doh4 79.

Seeing the distress of his troops, Lakshman slang his quiver by his side, took his bow in his hand and sallied forth in a fury, after bowing his head at Hama's feet.

Chaupdi.

2

· "Ah! vila wretch, you kill bears and monkeys ; but now look at me, I am your death." " I have been searching for you, you murderer of my son, and to-day I will glablen my soul by your destruction." Thus he ories and let fig a storm of arrows ; but Lakshman shivered them all into & bun tred pieces. Then Itavan hurled upon him myriste of missiles, but he warded them off as though they had been tiny seasonum seeds, and in turn assailed blor with bis own shafts, smashing his charlot and killing his charisters

Each of his ten heads he transfixed with a hundred arrows, which seemed like serpents boring their way into the peaks of a mountain. With a hundred arrows more he struck him full in the breast : he fell senseless to the ground. When the swoon had passed off, he rose again in his strength and let fly the bolt given him by Brahma,

Chhand 8

'The mighty bolt, the gift of Brahma, smote the incarnate Seshnag full in the breast; the hero fell fainting; the Ten headed essayed to lift his body, but his immeasurable bulk stirred not. In his folly Ravan thought to carry him off, not knowing him to be the lord of the three spheres, who supports on one of his heads the whole created universe, as though it were a mere grain of sand.

Dohá 80.

When the son of the Wind saw this, he rushed forward with a forious cry; but as the monkey came on, he struck

Chaupdi.

The monkey dropt on the knee but did not fall to the ground and, on recovering himself, arose full of exceeding wrath, and smote him one blow: he fell like a mountain struck by a thounderbolt. When he recovered from the swoon, be marvelled greatly at the monkey's mighty strength. Shame on my manhood, shame on myself, if you strength. Commo on my manuford, ename on mysen, it you remain alive, you plague of heaven." So cried the monkey, remain anye, you make you have you they creed the monkey, as he carried Lakshman away. At this sight Ravan was as he carried amazed. Said Raghobir, on finding his brother etill sore surfaced. Sant response to death sort the destroyer of death and the ative : " Lou sre states and the service of the gods." On hearing these words, the Benige ant arose and eat up, and the terrible bolt vanished into the ant arose and seas up, and they took bow and arrows and rushed forward with the utmost impetuosity to meet the enemy.

Chhand 9.

Again, by their impetuous attack, they put him to confusion, smashing his chariot and slaying his charioteer. Rasan fell fainting to the ground, his heart transfixed by a hundred arrows. Another charioteer threw him on his car and carried him to Lanks, while Lakshman in all his glory

t

Doha 78.

When Ravan saw his troops in confusion, he mounted his chariot, with his twenty arms and ten bows, and esured to rally them, crying, turn turn.

Chaupdi.

The Ten-headed rushed forth in wild fury, and the monkeys with a whoop advanced to meet him. Taking in their hands trees, crags and mountains, together they all harfed them upon him. The masses of stone no somer struck on his adamnotine frame than they were at once shattered in pieces, while he flinched not, but stood firm as a rock and stayed his chariot, he. Ravan, maddened with the battle and terrible in his fury. This side and that he scattered and battered the monkey chiefs in the ferceness of his wrath. Bears and monkeys all took to flight, crying, " Help, help, Angad, Hanuman save, save, O lord Ragbuble; this monster, as sure us death, will devour us all. When he saw the monkers in flight, he fitted an arrow to each of his ten bows.

Chhand 7.

He strung his bow and let fly a volley of arrows; they flow and lodged like serpents; the heaven and the earth were full of arrows; the monkeys fled in all directions. There was a terrible uproar, the monkey host and the bears were panic-stricken and cried in dismay-" O Raghabir, fountain of mercy ; O Hari ; friend of the forlorn, saviour of mankind."

Dohd 79.

Seeing the distress of his troops, Lakshman slung his quiver by his side, took his bow in his hand and sallied forth in a fury, after bowing his head at Rama's feet.

Chaundi.

" Ah! vile wretch, you kill bears and monkeys; but now look at me, I am your death." " I have been searching for you, you murderer of my son, and to-day I will gladden my soul by your destruction." Thus he cried and let by a storm of arrows ; but Lakshman shivered 'them all into a hundred pieces. Then Ravan hurled upon him myriads of missiles, but he warded them off as though they had been tiny sesamum seeds, and in turn assailed him with his own shafts, smashing his chariot and killing his charioteer.

Each of his ten heads he transfixed with a hundred arrows, which seemed like serpents boring their way into the peaks of a monatian. With a hundred arrows more be struck him full in the breast: he fell senseless to the ground. When the swoon had passed off, he rose again in his strength and let fly the bolt given him by Thahmá.

Chhand 8

The mighty bolt, the gift of Brahmá, smeate the incurante Scahning full in the breast; the here full fainting; the Tan beaded essayed to lift his body, but his immeasurable bulk stirred not. In his fully hiavan thought to cerry him off, not knowing him to be the lord of the three sphease, who appports on one of his heads the whole created universe, as though it were a mere grain of sund.

Dohd 80.

When the son of the Wind saw this, he rushed forward with a forious cry; but as the monkey came on, he struck him a violent blow with his fist.

Chaupái.

The monkey dropt on the knee but did not fall to the ground and, on recovering himself, arose full of exceeding weath, and smote him one blow: he fell like a monetage wrath, and smote him one blow: he fell like a monetage attack by a thounder-bot. When he recovered from the awoon, he marvelled greatly at the menkey's mighly strength. "Shome on my manhood, shame on myself, if you remain alive, you plages of heaven." So cried the monkey, as he carried takshuman away. At this sight Rivan, was nor a mazed. Said liaghabift, on finding his brother still alive: "You are indeed the destroper of death and the axiour of the gods." On heaving those words, the Benigmant aroses and as up, and the terrible bott vanished idot he heaven. Then again they took how and arrows and rushel forward with the atmost impetiously to meet the enum.

Chhand 9.

Again, by their impetuous attack, they put him to confusion, smashing his chariot and slaying his charioter. It'van fell faiting to the ground, his heart transferd by a hondred arrows. Another charioters throw him on his cra and carried him to Lanki, while Lakshman la all his glery prostrated himself at Rāma's Ieel.

LANKA

Dold 81.

On the one hand Ravan, on recovering, began to make preparations for a secrifice ; fool to oppose Rama and jet hope to prosper; obstinate and ignorant indeed !

Chaupdi.

On the other hand, Vibbishan, on learning the news went at once and told Haghapati: - My Lord, Rarm is engaged in a sacrifice; if he completes it, the wretch will never die. Despatch your valiant monkeys, sire, in all speed. to cut short his life." As soon as it was day, the ford sent out his warriors. Hanuman, Angad, and all started forth. Bounding with glee, the monkeys climbed Lanks and boldly entered Ravan's palace. Finding him engaged in the sacrifice, they all became furious :- " You run away home without shame from the battle and on getting here practise this hypocrisy ! " ! So saying, Angad gave him a kick, but the wretch took no notice, so absorbed was he in his ow:

Chhand 10.

As he took no notice, the monkeys in a fury tore him with their teeth and kicked him with their feet; his wires, too, they seized by the hair and dragged out of doors, till the poor wretches screamed again. Then at last he rose, terrible as death, and caught a monkey by the leg and hurled him away; but seeing that the monkeys had thus succoeded in interrupting the sacrifice, his beart failed him.

Dohd 82.

Rejoicing at having spoilt his sacrifice, the monkeys returned to Raghupati ; while the demon went off in a fary, abandoning all hope of life.

Chaupdi.

Fearful omens of ill met him as he went, for valtures flew and settled on his heads. Fated to die, he paid no beed, but gave the order to sound the onset. There seemed no end to the demon host as it marched on, with its many elsphants, chariots, foot soldiers and horsemen. The miscreants hastened to confront the Lord, like a swarm of gnats when ¹ Veh-dayón, literally, 'the contemplation of a crane,' is, the affectation of being absorbed in disune contemplation, while really thinking only of wordly interests like the crane, which seems bust in abstraction, but it is abstraction. only waiting for a fish to pounce upon.

Dohd 81.

On the one hand Ravan, on recovering, began to mit preparations for a sucrifice; fool to oppose Rama and ye hope to prosper; obstinate and ignorant indeed?

On the other band, Vibbishan, on learning the verwent at once and told Raghapati:— My Lord, Râras is negaged in a sverifice; if he completes it, the wretch will to cut short his life." As soon as it was day, the lord rei out his warriors. Hanomán, Angad, and all started forth bounding with glee, the monkeys climbed Larki selfbounding with glee, the monkeys climbed Larki selfbounding with glee, the monkeys climbed Larki selfbounding with glee, Trinding him engaged in the sacrifice, they all became furious:— "You run away home without shame from the battle and on getting here practise the wretch took no notice, so absorbed was he in his ear purpose.

Chhand 10.

As he took no notice, the monkeys in a fury tore with their teeth and kicked him with their feet; his wit too, they seized by the hair and dragged out of doors, the poor wretches screamed again. Then at last he retrible as death, and caught a monkey by the leg and he ed him away; but seeing that the monkeys had thus at ceeded in interrupting the sortline, his heart falled him.

Doha 82.

Rejolcing at having spoilt his marifice, the monkeys returned to Raghupati; while the demon went off in a fary abandoning all hope of life.

Chaurdi.

Fearful omens of ill met him as he went, for vulture flew and settled on his heads. Fated to die, he paid no best gave the order to sound the onest. There seemed so end to the demon host as it murched on, with lits man; elephants, charlots, foot soldiers and horseman. The microsult hastened to confront the Lord, like a warm of goals when

I Fek-dayee, interally, the contemplation of a crane, is, the shortallies of being absorbed in derine contemplation, while really thicking sall of worldy interests; like the crane, which seems Lust in a latitative, but we only waiting for a fish to pronce upon they fie into the fire. On the other hand, the gods raised songe of train s-" He has eased to grierous trouble : play with him no longer, O flims, for file is in sore distress." (In bearing the preser of the gold Rame smiled! and, rose and selmand his prepara His bale mastichtly bound in a Lact on his forebend, beautiful with the Comers that had bere and there here exact for they fell upon bim from bearen). With his beleit eres and his boir dark ef boe as a raincloud, princing the right of every treated ubere, be pirded on the on ere with its left shoot his loins and took in his Land the wielte bow, the bow of Virbon.

Citari II

With his Lew heracen in his hand not his beautiful quiver fal' el arreve s'ere ty to ele, with his muscolar arms and fee treed thest sterned with the print of the Bell mu's tart, when the Lord-mys Talei Dis-began to henche his how and arrows, the elephants that surport the world, the tortoire, the servent and the earth lively with its thenzhios acd pres, all probed

Di Met

The gold rejuced at the sight of his spleadour and raised d. on Lovers in stradutes, arging "Glory, glory, glory, to the Allier ered al. the storeboxes of Lesuty, strength and

Cherry de

Meet in the dam is hoste come rolling on in infinite ben'er The a mice aurier at the aght alrapped to more them. The the trender clouds gathered at the last day, theory bear and excels buled again like gleams of beltner frag ermy gratter of the berren. The sufel the of embatic standard borne was like the thoodering of a fightly begind. The monkeys' hope table as the steered arms the six were the the agring of a ways local marby . The does was hours about like a cloud. and the amounts' the a ory one elever. The mountains hand from a low a to more the the crash of repeated through the fire is though possel forth his An at the fracte tree were not on them. At the smart an at the secret size with large and copies where training only to the ground. The rocks

Character to got apper to any six six six se And it is preferant to the rail of the rail before the

as it were with cascades in a river of blood, the te: cowards,

Chhand 12.

A most lorthsome river of blood, striking cowan terror, rolled on between the two armies for its bank chariots for and and wheels for eddies—a frightful i with elephants, foot-soldiers, and horses for its a birds, and vehicles of every kind, more than one count, for its reeds and grasses; with arrows, pealances for its snakes, hows for its waves, and shields?

Pohá 84.

The fallen heroes are the trees on its bank, the a of their bones its soum. Cowards tremble at the sight the gallant are dauntless of soul.

Chaupái.

Those who bathe in it are imps, demons and go monstrous ghouls and horrible vampires. Crows and tures fly off with human arms, which they tear from or other and seize and devour. Says one 'At such a tin plenty, you wretch, is your hunger still unsatisfi Wounded warriors, fallen on the edge of the field, groans like the dying left half in and half out of the w Vultures sit on the bank and tear the entrails of the like fishermen intent on their roads. Many bodies down with birds upon them, as if they were boating river. Witches draw water in skulls ; other female de and goblins dance in the air, clashing the skulls of war for cymbals, while the infernal goddesses sing song song. \ Herds of jackals snarl and growl and scamper a devouring till they are gorged. Thousands of hear bodies roam the plain, while the heads fallen to the gre still shout ' victory, victory.'

Chhand 13.

The heads cry 'victory, victory,' while the head trunks rush wildly about. Swords and skulls are it tricably involved, here against here, fighting and overshr ing. The monkeys crushed the demon crew and triump

I That you must come and steal from me instead of foraging for you.

By arddha jal, ' haif in the water,' is meant a dying man who has ² By arddha jal, 'half in the water,' is meant a oping mantaken by his friends and laid on the very edge of the river, so that he breathe his last in the sacred stream.

through the power of Rama. Smitten by Rama's arrows the leaders are conspicuous on the field of battle.

Doha 85.

liavan thought within himself—"The demons are routed; I am alone, the bears and mankeys are many; I must put forth all my magic power."

Chaupai.

When the gods saw that the Lord was on foot, they were exceedingly distarbed in mind, and Indea at once depatched his own charlot. Midail brought it gladly, a splendid charlot, divine, incomparable, the king of Kosaks rejoiced as he mounted it. Its foor beautiful and highmetiled steeds, beathlers and ever young, few swift as thought. When they saw Haghundih mounted on a car, the monkeys rashed forward with renewed vigour. Their caset was irresistible. Then Ravan exerted his maglo power. Haghboth knew it to be a mere delation, but Lakshman and the monkeys took it for each. They awe among like demon host many Haimas and as many Lakshmans.

Chhand 14.

Seeing these multiplied Rámas and Lakhmana, the mankays and bears were gravely dismayed; wharever they looked, they saw him standing, as in a picture, and Laksman with him. The Lord of Kosals amiled to see the perpletity of his troops: Hari made ready his bow and in a moment scattared the delusion; the monkey host rejoiced again.

Doh4 86.

The Rama looked round about him and cried with a mighty voice: - Watch now the combat between us two, for my captains are all a-wearied."

Chaupdi.

So saying, Ragbundith urged forward his chariet, iller howing his head at the Bridman's lotter Iset. Then was the king of Lanká foll of fury and roched to meet him, challenging him with a voice of thunder——As for the various you have defeated in battle, mark me, heroid, I am not like them. The giory of Barno's name is known throughout the world, and how he can't into prince the regels of the sphere. You foresob have shin Khara and Dishan and Viránba and killed poor Bâti, lying in subsub for him like a bunteman. Yor have routed the leaders of the demon host, and pet death Kumbha-karn and Meghnád. But to-day I will make an end of all this lifething; unless, indeed, you are yourself by flight from the field. To-day, wetch, I will the mighty Ravan." On hearing this abusive speech, I will the mighty Ravan." On hearing this abusive speech all all-merciful, knowing him to be death-doomed, smiled and answerd: "-" True, true, I have heard all about your strength.

Chhand 15.

Do not destroy your reputation by boasting, but parlon me if I give you a lesson. In this world there are three kinds of men, resembling respectively the disk, the mage, and the brend fruit tree. The one has flowers and froit, and the third fruit only. The one talky the second talks and does; the third does, but says not word."

Doha 87.

On hearing Ráma's speech, he laughed and said :"Now you are for teaching me wisdom. You did not less to challenge me; but at last you begin to hold your life dear."

Chaupdi.

Having uttered this taunt, Rivan in a fary began to left gh his arrows like so many themselvation. The shift speed forth, of many shapes and on all slides around the haven and earth were filled with the cloud of them. Righbilt discharged an arrow of fire, and in a moment the demonstrate that the state of the same and sent it back. Then he cast against him thousands of discs and tridints; but the Lord without an affort anospel and to read them saids. Havan's artillary wesse marving as are always the schemes of the wicked. Then with a bradered arrows at once he strock the chariotser, whe fill to the ground orying victory to liffine. So the Lort has comparison upon him and raised him op again; but a him:

Chhand 16.

Fall of tary and raging in the battle, Raghapatta very acrows were ready to jump out of his quiver. At the sorie of the whol twang of his how all creation was seized with terror. Mandodari's heart quaked: the east, the prest tortoice, the earth and its supporter trembled; the deplaces of the eight quarters squeeled and grasped - the welf wife in their juws, while the good laughed to see the poirt.

Dela 88.

He drew the bowstring to his ear and left fig his bermaderts; they cleft the sky, quivering like so many serpends.

Chaupéi.

The arrows sped forth like winged serpents and at laid low the charioteer and his horses, beeslieg the are enapping the flagstaff. Though inwardly his course had him, he roared aloud and quickly mounted sadde on ... grinding his teeth let fly weapons and mind of wing description. But all bis efforts vere m Erile s thoughts of a man who delights only is side Ravan hurled forth ten spears, which street the for home and brought them to the ground - Rim an falme. ar raised the horses and then drew his less and it & ... rows. The edge of Raghabir's their sees of Lines ball as though they had been loters. Be and of his me heads with ten errows ; the blood realed facts in terrores. Streaming with gore, he rented a fe Line to the Lord again filted arrows to by her and let thing the his heads and arms all fell to the great Apon Esco smote away his arms sed had the highest after being cut off. Time also for the less street at the arms and beeds, but they seem more selection at them they were again resend . Low mi gen be and de off his beads and mes the the at Land mornel diverted himself. The idea language of 2 2 arms, like an infinite mate & Lies and Libes .

I The denser hits to be found there' as one of the public of in the date of in the date of the second of the date of the date

LARKA

Chhand 17.

Asthough a multitude of Rahus and Ketus stream; with gore were ruching through the air; for Rayhbirin arrows had each force, that after hitting their mark they could not fall to the ground. Each arrow transfring a set of heads seemed, as it flew through the day, like a ray of the angry un strung all over with moon troubles.

Doha 89.

As quickly as the Lord struck off his heads, they were renewed again without end; like the passions of a man deworld to the world, which increase ever more and more.

Chaupdi.

When Ravan saw this multiplication of his heads, he thought no more of death and waved still more tarious. He thundered aloud in his insune pride, and rushed forward with his ten bows all strung at once, raging widdly on the field of institle, and overwhelmed Ram's behaviously asked a shower of arrows that for a moment it was quite lost to sight, as when the sun is obscured by a mist. The good cried 'alack, alack'; but the Lord wrathfully grasped his tow and partying the arrows smote off his century heads, which flow in all directions, covering haven and setch. Severed as they were, they flow through the sky, ultained before the Carlot of the control of the Thhand 18.

Where now is Rama ? "oried the heads as they seel throug the air. The monkeys as we and turned to dight, but the Jewel of the race of Hagha, with a smile, male realy his bow and with his arrows shot the heads through through; as though the goldless Kall, with a rower of shulls in her hand and accompanied by all her attendant, had hathed in the river Blood and some to worship at the shrine of Battle.

Dold 20.

Agula Itasan in his fury hurled forth his mightest spear i like the bolt of death it flow straight for Viblasher is bidisection at bersity the month above a surface agent?

Chaupái.

When he saw the awful pear coming, he cried any trust is in him who ever 'relines the distress of the destinate, and Rubast once put Vibhithan behind him and exposed them to the full force of the missile. When it is that the god with dimay, When Vibbithan saw his tord for the pear of the the god with dimay. When Vibbithan saw his tord fainting, he seited his cleb in his hand and ranhed on in large — Ah, lill starred weeth, fool, dull of understanding, enemy alike of gods, men, saints and Nigas; instanct as you devenily offered your heat to Sixa, you have recived a thousand for one in retorn. This is the only reason why a yet you have received a thousand for one in retorn. This is the only reason why a yet you have received a thousand for one in retorn. This is the only reason why say it you have exceeded; but now death it denoing on your pate. Feel, to oppose Rúsma and yet hope to triumph." So saying he strack him on the chest with his club.

Chhand 19.

At the terrible stroke of the mighty club on his chest he fell to ground; but, his ten heads all streaming with blood, he again picked himself up and come or full of tary. The two closed with all their might in savage wrestle; each maning the other: but Vibbibban was innaired with the strength of tham, and fell upon him as though he were of no account whetere.

Doha 91.

O Uma, Vibbishan would not have dered of himself to look Ravan in the face; but now in the might of Rams he closed with him like very death.

Chaupdi,

But Hamman are that Vilhishan was norty exhausted and rubed forward with a rock in his band, with which crushed chariot, houses and driver, and gave the demon binsall a kite in the rink. He required that the presence of the Saviour of the world. Then Havan Edit population was caused in the presence of the Saviour of the world. Then Havan Edit population who speed his tall and few into the sir. He hild hold of the tail and no was horne slotly with the monkey, the mightly Hamman, who again the and closed with kilm. The well-matched quit contained fighting excreted, each forious and kill is a though mounts halps and Sumeru had come and akill; as though mounts halps and Sumeru had come into collision in the heaves. The demon was so state this there was no throwing him, till the Lord came to the en port of Son of the Wind.

Chhand 20'

Supported by Raghabir, the valiant monkey struck Ravan a violent blow. He fell to the ground, but rose again to fight, so that the gods shouted victors' to both, Seeing Hanuman in such a strait, the monkeys and bests advanced in furious passion ; but Rávan, battle-mad, crubed all their stoutest champions with the might of his terríbla arm

Dald 99

Rallied by Raghubir, the bold monkeys came on again-Seeing them to be so strong, he had recourse to magic.

Chaupdi.

In a moment he became invisible and then again showed himself in a multitude of forms. Every bear and monkey in Ráma's army saw a separate Rávan confronting him. At the sight of such an infinity of Ravans, the bears and monkeys fled in all directions. Not one of them had the courage to stay, but all fled crying ' Help, Lakshman ; belp. Raghubir.' Myriads of Bavans pursued them on erery side, thundering aloud with hourse and terrible cries. The gods were all panic-stricken and betook themselves to flight saying :- " Now, brother, abandon all hope of victory. A single Rayan subdued the heavenly host, and now there are many of them -make for the caves in the mountain." Only Brahma and Sambhu and the wisest of the mints stood fast, who had some understanding of their lord's might-

Chhand 21.

They who understood his power remained fearless; but the monkey took the apparitions for real enemies and fied, monkeys and bears alike, crying in their terror ' Help, god of mercy.' Only Hanuman, Angad, Nila and Nala, the leaders of the host, fought bravely on against the delastre growth of giants and crushed thousands upon thousands of Rávans.

1)ohá 93.

The king of Kosala smiled to see the panic of the gods and monkeys, and stringing his bow dispersed with a single arrow the whole bost of Rivans.

Chaupdì.

In a moment the Lord dispersed the whole phantom scene, as when the darkness is scattered at the rising of the same. Sessing only one Révan, the gods turned again with joy and showered down many flowers upon the Lord. Rémained the most sold the major of their lord, the bars and monkeys who turned again, each shouting to his neighbours. Inspired by the might of their lord, the bars and monkeys went forth, and with renewed vigour re-entered the areas. When Révan saw the gods exulting, he mattered :—"They think I ran now reduced to one; tools, you have ver been my prey," So saying, he made a savage spring into the sir, and as the gods fled ecreaming, he cried—"Wretches, whither can you go from my pressore?" Sessing their dismay, Angal randed forward and with a bound seized him by the foot and threw him to the ground.

Chhand 22.

Having seized and harled him to the ground, the on of Ball gave him a kick and ther rejoined his lord. The Ten-headed, on recovering himself, rose again and shouted terribly with a voice of thunder. Proudly he strong his bow, and fitting ten arrows to the string, he let fly many volleys, wounding all his commiss: at the sight of their conclusion he giorcied in his night.

Doka 34.

The itaghupati cut off Ravan's heads and arms, his arrows also and his bow; but they all spronted again, like sine committed at a holy place.

Chaupdi.

Seeing the multiplication of their enemy's head and arms, the bear monkeys were mightly indignous sad rushed on in a forty, orying—"Will the wretch esert die, with his beasts and arms all cat off?" The son of Bill, with loaming, Nisk and Nist, the mockey hing Seggirs and the vallact Dwitd, hurled apon him trees and monthlein; but he caught seach monthlein and tree and three the back upon the monkeys. One tore the enemy's body with his claws, another would may are and hick tim. Bell Nisk and Nist clambered upon to his heads and hick tim. Bell Nisk and Nist clambered upon to his heads and set to tearing his face with their slates. When whe blood, he was sore troubled in soul and put up his arms to each them; hie fary he took hie ten howe fo his bunde a arrows emote and wounded the monkeys, so that and all were rendered senseless. The approach had invigorated him. Seeing all the monkey swoon, the valued Jambavan rushed forward. him the bears, armed with mountains and trees, begen hurling upon him. The mighty Raren but they were not to be caught and sprang abou hands, like two been over a bed of lotuers. At savage bound he elutched them both and des the ground, twisting and breaking their arm and many of the heroes he seized by the leg and the ground Their king was wroth to see such his

530 LAWYA

Chhand 23.

his troops and gave him a savage kick on the bres me alive onder such pain, pierced through and through as I am with the poisoned strows of Rama's loss, acrows with which Love has smitten me: It is this god, I sever, that keeps him alive." With many such words did Jānaki make pitcons iamentatiop, as she re called to mind the Aliencetical. Tripid replied:—'Hearkon, royal maid, the sensy of the gods will die it an arrow strike him in the breast. But the Lord will not smite him there, because the image of Sits is imprinted on his beart.

Chhand 24

Jánaki dwells in his beart and in Jánaki's heart is my home; in my heart are all the spheres of crestion; if an arrow lodge there all will be undone." On hearing the explanation, she was somewhat comforted; but weing her still uneasy in mind. Trigitá contined: "—"Now this is the way the mouster will be killed; hearken, fair lady, and create to be so greatly disquised.

Doka 96.

In the pain of having his heads out off your image will be forgotten and the sagacious Rama will then smite him in the heart."

Chaupdi

With such words, baring done all she could to comfort her. Triista returned home again. But Sita, reflecting on Rima's amisbility, was a prey to all the anguish of bereave. ment and broke out into reproaches of the night and the moon :-" The night will never be spent, though it has seemed already an age long." In her heart of hearts she made sore lamentation, sorrowing for Rama's lose. When the pangs of bereavement were at their very bright, her left eye and arm throbbed Considering this to be a good omen, she took courage :- 'I shall now see again the gracione liaghubir.' Meanwhile Ravan had woke at midnight and legan abosing his charioteer :- Fool, to bring me away from the field of battle ; a corse on you for a vile dullard." He lail bold of his feet and deprecated his wrath ; and he, as soon as it was dawn, monoted his chariot and sallied forth again. When they heard of Raran's approach, the monkey army was greatly excited, and tearing up mountains and trees on every side the terrible warriors reshed to the onset, goashing their teeth.

but they were not to be caught and sprang about over h hands, like two bees over a bed of lotness. At list with savage bound he clatched them both and dashed then the ground, twisting and breaking their arms. Then in for he took his ten bows in his bands and with his arrows smote and wounded the monkeys, so that Hanauis and all were rendered senseless. The approach of sighthat invigorated him Seeing all the monkey chiefs in swoon, the valunt Jambaván rushed forward, and with him the bears, armed with mountains and trees, which they began hurling upon him. The mighty Rávan was carack, and many of the herces he seized by the leg and shade to the ground. Their king was wroth to see such harco among his troops and gave him a savage kick on the breast.

Chhand 23.

The blow smots him so heavily on the breast that he fell fainting from his chariot to the ground, grasping bear is each of his twenty bands, like bees hiding by night in the folds of the lotus. Seeing him senseless, the king of bears again struck him with his foot and then rejoined bears again struck him with his foot and then rejoined beard and the series of the

Dold 95.

On recovering from their swoon, the bears and monker all appeared before Rama; while all the demons crowded round Rayan in the atmost consternation.

Chaupdi.

During the night Trijata went to Sita and told ber the whole story. When Sita heard of the multiplication of the memy's heads and arms, she was sorely diamyed and hea adderesed Trijata, with downcast face and moch activity of soul;—"Why do you not tell me, mother, what is to the done, and how this plague of the universe can be pair that the will not die even though Raghapatis arrow have shore off his heads; of a truth, God is making everything turn out perversely. It must be my illude his given him life; for I too survive, though separated fines it was a later to the golden deer is still crued to me. The gall hast one show the golden deer is still crued to me. The gall hat enables me to support such insupportable angion which made me apeak cruedly to Lakshman; which keep ma aliye under such pain, pierced through and through as I am with the poisoned arrows of Râma's loss, arrows with which Love has smitten mer it is thus god, I swear, that keeps him alive." With many such world did Janeti make piteous lamentation, as she re called to mind the Allmercital. Trijata replied:—"Hearken, royal undid, the enemy of the gods will due if an arrow atrike him in the breast. But the Lord will not mitte him there, because the image of Sita is imprinted on his heart.

20

Chhand 24.

Jánaki dwells in his beart and in Jánaki's heart is my bone; in my heart are all the spheres of creation; if an arrow fodge there all will be undone." On hearing this explanation, she was somewhat comforted; but seeing her still measy in mind, Trijatá continude:—"Now this is the way the monster will be killed; hearken, fair lady, and cases to be so greatly deignifer.

Dold QC.

In the pain of having his heads out off your image will be forgotten and the sagacious Rama will then smite him in the heart."

Chaupai.

With such words, baving done all she could to comfort ber, Trijata returned home again. But Sita, reflecting on Ruma's amiability, was a proy to all the anguish of bereavement and broke out into reproaches of the night and the moon :- " The night will never be spent, though it has seemed already an age long." In her heart of hearts she made sore lamentation, sorrowing for Rama's loss. When the pangs of bereavement were at their very height, her left eye and arm throbbed. Considering this to be a good omen, she took courage :-- I shall now see again the gracious Raghubir.' Mesnwhile Ravan had woke at midnight and began abusing his charioteer :- " Fool, to bring me away from the field of battle ; a curse on you for a vile dullard." He laid hold of his feet and deprecated his wrath ; and be, as soon as it was dawn, mounted his charlet and sallied forth again. When they heard of Ravan's approach, the monkey army was greatly excited, and tearing up mountains and trees on every side the terrible warriors rushed to the onset, gnashing their toeth.

Chhand 25.

The hoge monkeys and terrible hears rushed on, will mountains in their hands, which they hurled forth with he aimset fory; the demone tuned and field. When they had thus contered the ranks, the valiant monkeys next closed around Ravan, buffetting him on every side and terrighting with their claws, so that his whole hely was maggled.

Doha 97.

Seeing the monkeys so powerful, Rávan took thought, and in a moment became invisible and created a magic illusion.

Chhand Tomara.

By the magic that he wrought terrible beings were manifested; imps, demons and goblins with bows and arrows in their hands, witches clutching swords and in one hand a human skell, from which they quaff draughts of blood, dancing and singing many a song. Their horrible cries of seize and kill echo all around, while dogs with open mouth! run to and fro. Then began the monkeys to fire ; but wherever they turn in flight, they see a blazing Monkeys and bears were both in dismay. Then there fell upon them a shower of sand. They were routed on all sides and the Ten-headed roared again. Lakshwan, the monkey-king and all the chiefs were at their wits' end. The bravest of them wrong their bands, crying 'alas, Rams, alss, Ragbunath.' After crushing all their might in this fashion, he next practised another kind of magic. A host of Hangmans were manifested, who rushed forward with rocks in their hands and encircled Rama in a deuse mass on every side. With guashing teeth and up-turned tail, they shouted 'kill, hold fast, never let him go '; their tails making a complete circle all around with the king of Kosala in the midst.

Chhand 27-28.

In their midst the dark-hued king of Kosala shoos forth as resplendent in beauty as a lotty tamal tree encircled by a hedge of gleaming rainbows. As they gazed upon the Lord; the heart of the gods was moved with mingled joy and grief, while they raised the ory of 'rictory, victory' fo a numerat and with a single arrow Raghushir builgands by dispelled the between As the phantoms vanished, the monkey and the proposed and all turned again, with currows and Rawan heads and surma significations and Rawan heads and surma significations and Rawan heads and surma significations, and Rawan heads and surma significations and results of the pround. Though a bundred Senhniga, Sárades and Vedio hards were to speed many age in sieging the various achievements of Rawan in his battle with Rawan, they would mover come to the end of them.

[.] I For mukk high, 'with open mouth,' some books read suchk high, which would mean 'having scattered the sacrifor.' As no sacrifore has been mentioned, the former seems preferable; though, the latter may slow be moderated as a general image of horror.

Dolat 98.

This Daa, poor clown, who would tell even the least past of his glory, is like a goat who thicks himself strong enough to fly po into heaven. Though his heads and arms were cut off again and again, the mighty king of Lanká was not killed. Sages, saints and gods were confounded by the agonising sight, the pastime of their lord.

Chaupdi.

No sooner were his heads cut off than a fresh crop grew. like covetonsness increased by gain! For all his toil the monster died not and Rama then turned and looked at Vibbishan. O Uma, the lord, whom fate and death ober. thus tested the devotion of one of his creatures. " Hearken. omniscient sovereign of all things animate and inanimate. defender of the supplisht, delight of gods and esints, it is only, sire, by virtue of the nector that shides in the depth of his navel that Ravan lives." On hearing Vibbishen's speech the All-merciful was pleased and took his terrible arrows in his hand. Many omens of ill then began to present themselves : sages, jackals and packs of dogs set up a howling ; birds screamed over the distress of the world and comets appeared in every quarter of the Heaven ; fierce flames broke out on every side, and though there was no new moon, the sun was eclipsed. Mandodari's heart beat wildly and statues flowed with tears from their eyes.

Chhand 29.

Statues wept, thunder crashed in the air, a mighty wind by the earth quaked, the clouds dropt blood, hair and dust; who could recount all the pertecter? At the sight of such unspeakable confusion the gods of heaven in disme

I in a coretons man no somer is one desire cut off or satisfied?' other desires spring up to take its place.

Chaupái.

When they heard Mandodari's speech, gods, saints a sages were all enraptured. Brahma, Siva, Narad, Sans k nmara and all the great seers who have preached the wa of salvation, gazed upon Raghupati with eyes full of ten and were overwhelmed with devotion. Seeing all the women making lamentation, Vibbishan went to the spot his heart heavy with grief, and was sorely pained to see his brother's condition. Then the Lord gave an order to Lakshman, who did all that he could to console him. At last Vibhishan betook himself to the Lord, who looked upon him with an eye of compassion and said . Make an end of sorrow and perform the funeral rites. In obedience to his command he celebrated the obsequies, wisely bearing in mind the circumstances of time and place.

Dold 102.

Mandodari and the others presented the dead with the prescribed handfuls of sesamum seed and the queen the returned to the palace, recounting to herself all Ragbu pati's excellences.

Chaupai.

Again Vibhishan came and bowed his head. Then the All-merciful called his younger brother and said, "Do you and the monkey prince and Angad and Nals and Nils, with Jambavan and the sagscious Son of the Wind, go all together in company with Vibhishan and make the arrangements for his coronation ; " thus cried Raghanath ; " I by resson of my father's commands may not enter the city, but I send the monkey and my younger brother to take my place" The monkey started at once, on receiving his lord's order, and went and made ready for the installation. With dereverence they seated him on the throne, and after marking his forehead with the royal sign, they sang a hymn of praise and with clasped hands all bowed the head before him. Then with Vibhishan they returned to the Lord, and liaghubir addressed the monkeys with such gracious words as made them all glad.

Chhand 33.

He made them glad with words that were sweet as nector :- " It is by your might that the enemy has been defeated and that Vibbishan has acquired the kingdom; your glory will live for ever throughout the universe Whoever with sincere devotion shall sing your glorious deeds in connection with me shall crow without an effort the boundless ocean of existence."

Dold 103.

The monkey bost would pever have been tired of listening to their lord's words ; again and again they all bowed the head and clasped his lotus feet.

Chausas.

The Lord next addressed Hannman, " Go to Lanks." suff the god, " and tell Japaki the news and bring me back word of her welfare." When Hannman entered the city, the demons and demons-ses no sooner heard of it than they ran to meet him and showed him every possible honour and pointed out Sits to him From afar off the monkey prostrated himself. She recognized Rama's messenger. " Tell me, friend, of my gracious lord, and of his brother ; is he well, and all the monkey host ?" "All is well, madam, with the king of Kosala; he has conquered liavan in battle ; Vibbishan has been placed in secure possession of the throne." On hearing the monkey's reply, for was diffused over her soul.

Chhand 31.

Sita's soul was overjoyed, her body thrilled and her over streamed with tears, as again and again she cried t-"What can I give you, monkey ? there is nothing in the three spheres of creation to be compared to your tidings." " Hearken, madam : to-day of a truth I have already old tained the undisputed sovereignty of the world, when I see and adore Rama with his brother triumphing over the ranks of the enemy."

Dolá 104.

" Hearken, my son Hanuman ; every virtue finds a home in your heart : may you live and prosper for ever in the service of Kosala's king.

Chaupai,

But now, friend, device some than by which I may see with my own eyes his dark but comely form." Hanning then returned to liams and told him of Site's welfer. When the Glory of the Solar race heard her toesage, he When the Giory to the said to prince Vibbishan :- "Go you with Hansman and seid to prince a court Sita bere." They all went at once to to the for of Ditchen, the for of Khara, the destroyer demon host swhen my lord slaw this last monster all gods were happy again. Glory to the remover of es burdens, whose greatness is indeed wast and unboss Glory to Bayan's maroiful foe, the discomforter of demone. Outrageone was the pride of the King of Lan who had reduced to enhiection gods and gundharras; relentlessly pursued exints and sages, men, birds a seepente; a malignant and implacable moneter; but w now-the wretch-has obtained his reward. Hearken so protector of the suppliant, with the large lotus eyes; my pri was inordirate, there was no one to equal me. Now after seeing thy lotus feet, the arrogance that caused me s much misery has passed away. Let others adore the un embodied Supreme, the primary existence, whom the Veds hymn; but my desire is the king of Kosala, the divine Rams, visible and material. Together with Sita and Lakeman, make my heart thy abode. O spouse of Iakshmi, recognize me as the servant, and grant me faith.

Chhand 38.

Grant me faith, spouse of Lakkimi, soother of terroconcelor of the suppliant. Then I adore, O blisted Rise prince of the boars of Raghu, heautiful as a myriad rebelight of the hosts of heaven, queller of strife; in form a arm of Incomparable strength; object of the adoration of Brahma Sankara and all the Risen the gracious, the benine gods; I worship thee, O

Dohd 110.

Now in thy mercy, O most merciful, look upon me and direct me what to do." On hearing this tender appeal the Protector of the poor made answer:—

dChaupi.

"Hearken king of the gods; my hears and monkeys, who lie on the ground slain by the demons, have lost their life on my account. Hearken, Garur, this request of the Lord's in a mystery that only secretarist ages can apprehend. Lord could himself destroy and re-create the three sphere of creation; only the whole to do Indra known. What shower of ambrosis whiste to do Indra known. While shower of ambrosis which to do Indra known. While shower of ambrosis which to do Indra known. While Iffe. They arese with Joy and all betook them to the Lord.

The shower of ambrois fall on both armins; but the bearr and monkeys came to life, not the damons. The image of life in many the interest of the interest of the interest of the interest of the definition and interest and monkeys were partial first carnations of the gods and were really all sires but it was the will of Raghapati. Who is there as kind to the destitute as Raina, who grapted final deliverance area to the host of demons, while that filty and carons monset liavas obtained translation to the same sphere as the holist of swince.

Doba 111.

After showering down flowers, the gods mounted their spleadid chariots and withdren. Then seeing his opportative the seeing should be seen to them. Most loringly, with clasped bands, his lotus eyes full of sears and his body quivering all over, Tripariari attered this prayer with chocking voice:—

t khand 39.

" Save me, O prince of the house of Raghu, equipt with thy strong bow and graceful arrows in thy hand; dispeller . of the marky clouds of delusion ; fire to consume the forest of doubt; delight of the gods; unembodied yet embodied; glorious shrine of perfection ; sun of vehement splendour to disperse the darkness of error; a very lion to attack the elephantine monsters, lust, auger and pride stake up the abode for ever, as in some forest, in the heart of the servent. Stern frost for the lotus growth of sensual desires; gracious beyond all conception; a mount Mera to churn un the ocean of life ; dweller of the highest sphere ; avert from me the stormy waves of the world or transport me scross them. O king Rama, dark-hued and lotes eyed, protector of the poor, souther of the sorrows of the distrest. dwell for ever in my bears with Lakebman and Janaki, delight of the saints, glory of the terrestrial sphere, openater of every terror, Talsi Das's own lord. .

Dald 112.

When your coronation, O my lord, takes place at Koszla, I will come to see the glorious ceremony, O greatly compassionate."

Chaupái.

Vibbidian approached the Lord. Bowing his bard a feet he cried in pleading lones: — Hersken to my probable the cried in pleading lones: — Hersken to my probable the lone, with how in hard. You have skin Rivare with his kindred and all his army and made year need glery known throughout the three sphere. On me, vile severant, without either sense of hereding, you have you show to compression; now, size honour your vanit, hones and buthe and refresh youred fater the of the buttle. Inspect my travare, my palses, and wealth, and by this condescention make all the most hippy. Conditor, my lord, everything that I have as youn, and moreover take me with you to Aveill." With the Allemercifal heard this affecting speech, both his go spec filled with tears.

Hold 113.

Hearken, brother; all you say is true; your hout and treasure are a my own; but thicking of Bhard condition every minute seems to me an age. In prelication attire, with emeciated body, he is seer repeating my name in prayer. I centrest you, friend, to make an effort to that I may soon be able to see him again. If at the end of the time I go and find him no longer alive "-at the remove

I may soon he able to see him again. If at the end of the time I go and find him no longer alive "—at the remembrance of his brother's affection, the Lord's body quirered all over—" but may you reign for ages, your soul ere mindful of me, and at the last enter into my sphere, where all the good on."

Chaupdi.

When Vibhisha heard Hamas's words, he was overform and clasped the feet of the All-mercifel. All the hears as monkeys with equal joy clasped the Lord's feet and recite his glorious merits. Then Vibhishan proceeded to the palace and loaded the chariot with jewels and stifre. When he had brought the car Prubpaka and set it before Lord, the All-mercifel smiled and said:—"Hearken, friend Vibbishan; step into the car, and when you have itself high into the air, throw down the dresses and jewels. Accordingly Vibhishan mounted aloft into the heaver and sorambled the raiment and jewels among them sli. The monkeys picked up anything they fancied, cranming the precious things into their month; while Rims and his wife and brother langhed; so fall of phytalness is the All-mercifel.

Dohá 114.

He, to whom the saints cannot attain by contemplation, who the Veda itself fails to fathora, even he in his infinite compassion made merry with the monkeys. O Uma, abstraction, prayer, charity, penance, the different forms of fasting, sacrifice and vows,—all more Ráma's compassion less than simple love.

Chaurdi

After securing the dresses and ornaments, the bears and monkeys clothed themselves with them and appeared before Rams The king of Kosalz laughed again and again to see the monkeys in their mately attire As he looked upon them all, he was moved with pity, and said in gracious phrase : " It is by your assistance that I have killed Ravan and thus secured the throne for Vibhishan. Now return all of you to your several homes ; remember me and fear no one." On hearing these words the monkeys were overcome with affection, and all with clasped hands thus reverently addressed him :- " What you say, my lord, is all to your honour; but we are confused on hearing such words. Knowing the low estate of us monkeys, you gave us a leader ; you, O Raghunath, are the sovereign of the universe. When we hear our lord's words we die of shame : ix it possible for a gust to assist the mighty Garny ?" The monkeys were so charmed as they gazed on Rama's face that in the depth of their devotion they had no desire for their own home.

Dold 115.

When the Lord had dismlesed them, the bears and monkeys all went their way, oberithing Riama's image in their beart, exulting with joy and making frequent prayer. The monkey king, Nila, the king of the bears, danged, Mala, Illanamian, Vibbishan also and all the other valiant monkey chiefs were so overcome by their feelings that they could not speak a word, while helier eyes, streaming with tears, were fixed upon Riama's person so intently that they had no time to wait.

Chaupsi.

When Rama perceived the strength of their affection, he took them all up into his chariot and, after mentally howing his head at the Brahmuns' feet he directed the

BOOK VII

THE SEQUEL.

BOOK VII

THE SEQUEL.

my lord's adventures." Then Hanuman bowed his head at his feet and told him all Haghopati's great doings. "Tell me, monkey, did the gracious god ever remember me as one of his servants?

Chhand 1.

Did the glory of the race of Ragbu ever make mention of me his sevant?" On hearing Bharat's modest specithe monkey was in a rapture and fell at his feet. How can be be otherwise than hamble and holy and an ocean of virtue, whose praises Ráma, the lord of all animate and inanimate creation, himself recites with his own mouth?

Doha 3.

"My lord, you are as dear to Rama as his own life; that is the truth, Sir." Again and again he embraced Bharat, and his joy was more than his heart could contain.

Scratha 1.

After bowing his head at Bharst's feet, the monkey returned in haste to Rams and told him that all was well. Then the Lord mounted his charton and joyfully set forth. Chaupdi.

Bharat too returned in joy to Avodhya and told his ourse all the news, then published the fact in the palace, that Rama was approaching the city and was safe and sound. At these tidings all the dowager queens started up in haste : but Bharat spoke and assured them of their lord's welfare When the citizens heard the news, men and women all ran out in their joy : the ladies formed in procession with stately gait, singing and bearing golden salvers laden with ourds, dub grass, the sacred yellow pigment, fruits and flowers and fresh sprigs of the talsi plant, all things of good omen. Each ran out just as she happened to be, without stopping to bring either children or old lolk. Every one was asking his neighbour. Friend, have you seen the gracious Rama?' Directly it knew the Lord was coming, the whole. city of Avada became a quarry of delights. The water of the Suriu flowed clear as clear could be; the air was deliclously soft, cool and fragrant.

Dohá 4

Bharat went forth to meet the All-merciful, full of joy and effection, accompanied by his gara, the citizens, his lied were to consider my actions, there would I demption for me in a hundred million of ages. Here however regards offences of his exercit, being brother to the destitute and most tender-fested firmly personaled of send that Rims will come; the are so favourable. But if my life holds out affect once appears, I shall be a more despicable wretch the fat the would.

Dald 1.

While Bhreti's coul was thus sinking in the a Birm's baresement, the Son of the Wind, disgot form as a Brahman, care like a boat to his record. So him scaled on a mat of secred grass, with matted his a crown, his body all wasted away, his lips motterin names 'Rims, Rims, Raghapati,' and his eyes sires with tears:

Chaupdi.

At this eight Hannman was overjoyed, every bair on body stood erect and his eyes rained torrents; be fel heart an in-le-critishle esti-faction and addressed him words that were as umbrosia to his ear : " He, for wh loss you sorrow night and day, the catalogue of whvirtues you are incessantly reciting, the glory of the line Raghu, the henefactor of the pions, the deliverer of go and saints, has arrived safely. After conquering the for the battle, with the gods to hymn his praises, the Lord now on his way with Sita and his brother." On bearin these words he forgot all his pain, like a man dying of thirst who finds a stream of pectar. " Who are you Sir, and whence have you come, who have told me suc glad tidings ? " " I am, the son of the Wind, a monker Hannman by name, O fountain of mercy, a servant of the beneficent Raghopati." On hearing this Bharat 1050 and respectfully advanced to meet him. The affection with which he embraced him was too great for heart to contain; his eyes streamed with tears and his body quivered all over. "O monkey, at the right of you all my sorrows are gone, to-day I have embraced a friend of Rami's." Again and again he asked of his welfare : "Hearken, brother; what is there I can give you? after taking thought, I find nothing in the whole world to match this news. Otherwise, I should be your debtor. Now tell me of the Ragha race, made obeisance to all the Brikhmans. Next Bharat embraced the Lord's fotus feet, ever worship by Sankars Brahmi and all the gods and eyes. He fell to the ground and refused to rise, till the Ali-merciful by Fores took and pressed him to his bosom, every bair standing erect on his dark-hned body, and his lotus eyes all streaming with tears.

Chhand 2.

His lotus eyes atreamed with lears and his basateous body quivered with emotion, as he lovingly clasped his brother to his best, even he, the form the novereign of the three spheroscup of the three spheroscup of the menting between the Lord and a special content of the menting between the Lord of the menting between the Lord of the had must together in a supernoss embrace. When the All mercifel asked of his welfars, it was with difficulty that Bharst found words to reply. Harken, Umd 1 and 1 grean only he fail, it is beyond speech or intelligence. "Now it all well with me, O Lord of Kovala 1 seeing your servant," distress, you have revealed yourself to him and have taken me by the hand, O All-mercifol, when I was sticking in the deep waters of hereavement."

Doba 6.

As when a third going gaily along the road, with stolen property still about him, is andderly seized at the waistbelt by the man he has robbed, so felt Sugriva and Vibbishan at the sight of the meeting between Risma and Bhrati. Then the Lord millingly embraced Sairuphan and took him to his besom, while Bharat embraced Lakthman, his heart overflowing with love.

Chaupde.

After that Satrughan and Lakshman embraced, remembering on more the intolerable corror of separation. Finally Bharat howed his head at Sita's feet, both he and his younger brother, with an intensity of delight. The citizens were an glad at the sight of the Lord, that all the service wanted by his absence was at once forgotten. Seeing all the people so agitand by a frection, the gracious Khardri practised an

I in the most of their joy, the right of such fraternal affection nominded them pain lilly of the very different treatment they had experienced from their own brollers, Ball and Karam. Or perhaps more samply, they were locally recorded binards superior claim, and knew that they would have to give no Rana to this.

younger brother and a throng of Brihmans. Mrn women mounted the upper stories of the houses to the charlet in the sky and, when they espied it, raise sweat voices in anspicious songs of jry. As the w mean rise and swell at the night of the full moon, so forth the women of the city with a templinous noise fin the other hand, the San of the lotages of the race was pointing out the beauties of the city to the keys ; " Hereken, Sugeira, Angul and Vibbleban : this leso holy and the country less charming, that althall men speak of Vaikunth, which is indeed famous in Veries and Puranes and celebrated throughout the we still it is not so deer to me as the city of Aradh : only here there one can be found to comprehend this saying. Her the delightful city my birth-place, and to the north eacred Sarjo, where every man that bathes obtains with further trouble a home near me. The dwellers here s very dear to me; the city makes them my fellow-citize both here and hereafter and is altogether blessed." Il monkeys rejoiced to hear the Lord's words : what a glor for Avadh to be praised by Rama !

Chrupdi,

Dohá 5.

When the All-merciful Lord God saw all the people coming out to meet him, he urged on his chariot close up to the city and there alighted on the ground. Having dismounted, he directed Pushpaks to return to Kuver. On receiving Rama's order it went its way, full of mingled joy and sorrow at parting.

Chaupdi.

With Bharat came the whole population, all emaciated in body by their mourning for Rama. When the Lord saw Vamadeva and Vasishtha, greatest of sages, he dropt his bow and arrows on the ground and ran to clasp his guru's lotus feet, both he and his younger brother, with every hair on their body erect. The great sage embraced them and asked of their welfare. "By your favour all is well with us." Then the champion of the faith, the king of

I The car Pushpaka had originally belonged to Kurer and had been stolen from him by Ravan.

the Raghu race, made obeisance to all the Brahmans. Next Bharat embraced the Lord's lotus feet, ever worship by Sankara Brahma and all the gods and siges. He fell to the ground and refused to rise, till the All-merciful by force took and pressed him to his bosom, every hair standing erect on his dark-hued body, and his lotus eyes all streaming with tears. Chhand 2.

His lotus eyes streamed with tears and his beauteous body quivered with emotion, as he lovingly clasped his brother to his heart, even he, the Lord the sovereign of the three spheres. There is no similitade by which I and sures species. Aucto to meeting between the Lord and his brother ; it was as though Love and Desire in bodily form had met together in a rapturous embrace. When the All merciful asked of his welfare, it was with difficulty that Hharat found words to reply. Harken, Uma ; such joy can only be felt, it is beyond speech or intelligence. loy can only we son, as a solution of Korala ; seeing your servant's distress, you have revealed yourself to him and have taken me by the hand O All-merciful, when I was sinking in the deep waters of bereavement," Dolá 6.

As when a thief going gaily along the road with stoler property still about him, is raddenly sexued at the satisfact property such that robbed, to felt Eagrirs and Villette by the man me was recovery to the most of the sight of the meeting between Riems and Riems. at the agus of the street Stirgths and for the Then the Lora summight end a very configuration feet ex-to his bason, while Blarat embraced Lakshup, is be-

After that Satrughas and Laketasa sulmon After that Carraguas and analysis and analysis and baring no more the intolerable styres of spanish and his head at King for last the state of the last the state of the last the state of bering no more the totological and a specific state of the state of th Bherat howen no necessarious areas was settled to be brother, with an intensity of facility to be a settle to b prother, with no manufacture and the sight of the Lord Care at the sight of the Lord Care at the street was at one of core at the street are at the street a Rad at the signs of the state o his absence as a grind by affection, and the point as a grind by affection, and the first fraction in

I has the man by of there is no need of a larger to the control of of their paintails of the new powel forward the from their or a brown here, be not feet, or feeting their than more described to the feeting of principles for the new powel to the control to the contro from their on a breaker be the force of their party and a manufacture of the party of the party

Intibat

" Hail to thee, Rame, the eponie of lakshmi, ti fier; have mercy on thy servant, harsend with the and troubles of existence Glorious lord, sovered Availe, surereign of heaven, lakehmi's sovereign. meter on the enighant, who has fled to thee for r Destroyer of the ten-headed and twenty-ormed, remo earth's some burden, consumer of the moth-like demoin the fleron flume of thy flery arrows; most beat ornament of the terrestrial sphere; noblest of all handle bow, arrows and quiver; radiant as the son to prese the thick darkness of the night of pride, ignor and ego lem; thou hast vanquished the God of Love,2 like a huntsman had smitten all men to the beart with arrows of evil desire as though they were herd of de now, () tord Hari, have mercy on us destitute wrete who have gone astray in the wilderness of sensuality. many diseases and bereavements, with which the people stricken, are the fruit of this disregard for thy boly fe The bottomiers ocean of existence overwhelms all cherish no love for thy lotus feet. Poor indeed and y and wretched for ever are they who have no affection! thy lotus feet. They who take delight in making mentiof thy name, have the saints as their constant friends for ever, are eternally exempt from passion, greed and are gance, and regard prosperity and adversity as both slike Thus it is that thy servants are so happy; the saint aban dons for ever all confidence in mortification and making simply a vow of perpetual love serves thy lotus feet with a pure heart. O Raghu-bir, mighty and invincible here, indwelling as a bee in the lotus-like soul of the saints, thy name, O Hari, I repeat in prayer and adore, destroyer of vanity and pride, which are the diseases of life. Hambly I adore without ceasing the spouse of Lakshmi, the st preme abode of goodness, generosity and compassion. O sun of Raghu, extirpate every animosity ; O king of earth, regard thy humble servant.

l In the Totaka, or Tretaka metre, each line in the quatram consists of four anapsests. Thus: - 1/24 Alama Rami-ramanam samanam, Bhava-tàpà-bhàyakula pahi janam.

² Manajad, 'man-caters,' or 'demons,' is the word in the test; but, at it seems impossible to fit it into the rest of the passage, I propose to rest instead manajat, the 'mind-born,' i.e., Káma-ders, the god of love.

Dold 15.

Again and again I beg of thee a boon - be gracious and grant it O Schange 1 - an unwavering faith in thy lotus feet and constant communion with saints." After thus hymning Rime's praises, Sive returned with joy to Kuilas. The Land then swigned the monkeys most delightful Chaupái. Hearks, Gurr; this sacred legend annihilates all the distribute and distof the world. Any one who hears this narrairs of the royal iostallation obtains self-control and direction They who lovingly sing it or hear it sung, obthey woo lovingly sing it or hear it sung.

in this world it. happiness and prosperity; after enjoying attain, in his world a birt, to which the gods can source attain, ther transferred, and the gods can source attain, ther readmitted after death into Rama's own presence. The failty conscipated, the detached from the world and the world, the detached from the world absorpthe worldy, who hear it, obtain respectively faith, absorption lets the deraity and ever-increasing prosperity. Gara, this history of Rama that I have repeated is the delight of a good understanding: a remedy for anxiety and surfer; seek. a special of the second and second of the se a presidention of detachment, discretion and raise the city of Kenl. which to cross the river of delusion. In the people the city of Kenla was ever some new delight; the people west http:// fell fell wried herry, from the highest to the lowest. All felt as suggestion of the highest to the lowest. to true roung affection the highest to the lowest. All the stored of British Research for Rama's lotus feet, the sdored of British Research for Rama's lotus feet, the sdored clother of Buhmi, Sira and the saints. The poor had clother treatment to the saints. granten is abundance and the Brahmans were presentel with offeriogs of every description.

The monkeys were drowned in a joy like that of heaven and of the Lord's feet; day and night packed to the Lord's feet; day and night packed ensuled fill now six months had been spent.

They had forgotten their homes so sheelerly souther to dram of them of the common their homes so sheelerly souther tran to draw of them their homes so absolutely souther structure of them, like as the idea of injuring it seminant the them, like as the idea of injuring it made serveries of them, like as the idea of injuring a serveries the soul of a saint. At last some and the mand the soul of a saint. At last long spid made in the soul of a saint. At last core and in the soul of a saint. They care and the source of the third spid with the third spid with the source of the said with th rrival bis conrades before bim. They said with the verifines. He seated them by his star remains to a read Ray Rassa, is one of Vishou's relief and remains and results to the seated them by his star remains and the seatest the seatest results and the seatest remains and the seatest remains and the seatest remains a seatest remains and a need righty under this title.

The appearance of the city made them forget all their axcism. The balconies encrusted with gold and jewels, splendid pavements laid in diverse colours, the magnife forts on every side of the city with their brightly pain battlements, as though the nephaete had been emster in array to beleaguer Indra's capital, Marawari; the fox so beautifully inhaid with coloured crystal that the soil any saint would be distrated at the sight; the glisted palaces reaching to the sky with pinnacles that put shame the brightness of su and moon; the lattices glean ing with jewels and the jewelled lamps that shone in ever room.

Chhand 6.

Beneath the light of jewelled lamps the bouses were resplondent with their thresholds of coral and pillars of prictions stone and golden walls, such as the Creator himself might have fashloned, all inlaid with emeralds and gent. The stately palace-courts were lovely with inwarked crystal, and every gate was fitted with folding doors of gall embossed with diamonds,

Doká 28.

In every house was a beautiful and well-furnished picture gallery, where Ráma's achievements were so set forththat the soul of a saint would be ravished at the sight.

Chaupdi.

Every one hald a flower garden trimmed with the greatest care, adorned with every kind of choice creeper, and bior soming with perpetual spring. There was sere a pleasad sound of the bazzing of bees, and the air was delighted pool, soft and fragrant. Birds of all kinds, the children pets, sweet of note and graceful in flight, peacocks, swash, herons and pigeons, made a charming show on the top of the houses, cooling and datcing in high glee at the slight of their own shalow. Other children were teaching arrots and mainer to speak and repeat the name of litimations and mainer to speak and repeat the name of litimations, and the roads, squares and lazars all elegantly hald out.

Chhand 7.

The elegance of the hazars was beyond all description, and things could be had without price. How is it possible to sing the riches of the city where the spouse of Lakshmi reigned as king? The cloth-merchants, money-changers and grain-dealers sat at their shops like so many Kuvers. Every one was bappy, every one well-conducted and comely, men and women, young and old, all alike.

Dohá 29.

To the north flowed the deep and pellucid stream of the Sarju, with a line of handsome ghats and no muddy bank

Chaup t.

At some distance was a fine spacious ghát, where all the horses and elephants went to drink. There were also elaborate ghate for the citizens' drinking water, where no one was allowed to bathe. The most beautiful of all was the king's ghat, which was frequented by men of all four castes. All slong the banks were temples to the gods surrounded by pleasant groves. Here and there on the river bank hermits, sages and anchorites dwelt and meditated ; and many bushes of the fragrant tulsi were there, planted by different holy men. The beauty of the city surpassed all description; its outskirts also were most picturesque. Every sin was effeced by a sight of it, with its woods and groves, its lakes and ponds.

Chhand 8.

Its matchless lakes and ponds and large and beautiful wells were so charming, with their elegant flights of steps and limpid water, that gods and saints were fascinated be the sight. The many-coloured lotases, the cooing of the nu merous birds and the buzzing of the bees made the spot : delightful one, where the parrots by the clamour seemed to be inviting travellers to halt.

Dohd 30.

How is it possible to describe the city, of which Lakehmi's lord was king? Anima and the other fairies had diffused through the whole of Avadh every happiness and Chaupdi.

Everywhere men were singing Ráma's praises and as they sat thus exhorted one another : " Worship Rama, the defender of the suppliant ; the home of beauty and goodness, responded, Bhavani: "You have met me, Ga road ; how can I instruct you? Your doubts w settled till you have been for a long time in the or the eaints. There you must listen to the delightful Rama, as sung in diverse manners by the seers, the beginning, middle, and end is the adorable great God Rama. I will send you, brother to a pl the story of Rama is told without ceasing; go the listen. As you hear it, all your doubts will van will have a vehement affection for Rama's feet.

110hd 62.

Except in the company of saints there is no talk Rama : without that there is no overcoming delusi delusion is dispersed, there is no firm affection for Chaurái.

Without affection there is no finding Rams, t you have recourse to meditation, prayer, sacrifice, and ticism. In the region of the north is a beautiful p mountain, where lives the amiable Kaka bhusundi, premely skilled in the method of Rama's worship, wise full of all good qualities and very aged. He uncessi recites Rama's history and all the noblest to the b reverently listen. Go there and hear all Rama's excelces ; your distress born of delusion will then be remove After I had given him full instructions, he bowed his be at my feet and set out with joy. I did not myself justre him, Umá, for I understood the mystery of Rams's gra-Perhaps he had shown pride on some occasion and the A merciful wished that he should cure himself of this delec There was also another reason why I did not detain him being a bird he understood bird language. The Lord delusive power, Bhavani, is great ; who is so wise as not to be fascinated by it?

Doha 63.

Even the vehicle of the lord of the three spheres, the very crown of philosophers and mints, was overcome by its deceptive influence; wretched man may well have his doubts. It fascinates Siva and Brahmá; why speak of other poor creatures? The saints know this at heart, when they worship the great God, Maya's master.

Chaupái.

Garqu went to Biusendi's abode, that stordy hearted said indestingable reducts of Heri's At the sight of the rock his heart rejuiced; the trouble caused him by Maya's wiles all queed away. After hathing in the lake and drinking of the said, the went nodes the hannya time with exaling tool. This embed indext upon flocks of hirds to bear of Rama's perform doing: lie was que on the point of legioning to exist when the king of the birds arrived. All were glad to exist when the king of the birds arrived. All were glad to exist when the king of the birds arrived. All were glad to exist when the king of the birds arrived. All were glad to exist when the king of the birds arrived. All were glad to exist he when the king of the birds arrived. All were glad to exist he when the king of the birds arrived her said the said

Dold 64

"Now am I content, O king of the birds, in that I bree see you; whatever you may order me, I am rendy to down at it the object of your wist, my lord?" "You have were been the image of content," replied Garur in gracous brase, "seeing that Sira with his own mouth is ever twerently singing your praises

Chaupái.

Hearken father; the object for which I came was atliand as soon as I can you. Directly I behalf your most boly hermitage, my one was at an end with all my distracting doubts. Now may at an end of with all my distracting doubts. Now every ill can me with all adjusted and a remed for every ill can, my lord, is what I arrently bug of you. On hearing Gartin, any lord, is what I arrently bug of you. On hearing Gartin, and the second is shorer and affections, so graceful and pay was diffused over his soul and he beyon the rectal of the pay of the soul and he beyon the rectal of the pay of the soul and he beyon the rectal of the pay of the soul and he beyon the rectal of the pay of the soul and he beyon the rectal of Nicas extraordinary delation and of Rivas's incurrention. All this he may the story of the Lord's hirth and then carefully reconsted his doings as a child.

Pold 65.

After telling all the details of his child'sh performances with the atmost rapture of soul, he ment told of the Rich's coming and of Raghabir's "marriage.

1444 42

Record in the summany of wints there is no talk about the without that there is no avercoming delation; infered in its dispensal, there is no firm affection for Rice for

Cherry

Without effection there is no finding Rims, though you have engaged to mulicarion, prayer, morifice, and secthrown. In the region of the north is a beautiful purple mountain where lives the amiable Kaka bhusundi, sopremely skilled in the method of Hims's worship, wise and fall of all good qualities and very aged. He uncessingly secites Itams's history and all the coblest to the birds reverently listen. Go there and here all Rama's excellenton 1 year distross born of delasion will then be removed." After I bul given him fall instructions, he bowed his beed at my fact and set out with joy. I did not myself instruct hlm. Uma, for I understood the mystery of Rama's grace. l'erhaps he had shown pride on some occasion and the Allmerciful wished that he should cure himself of this defect. These was also another reason why I did not detain him; being a bird he understood bird language. The Lord's delusive power, lihavani, is great; who is so wise as not to be fuscinated by it?

Doha 63.

Even the vehicle of the lord of the three spheres, the very crown of philosophers and saints, was overcome by its deceptive inflaence; verstehed man may well have his doubts. It fascinates Sira and Brahmi; why speak of other poor creatures? The minds know this at heart, when they worship the great God, Maya's muster.

Chaupdi.

How the monkey king sent out monkeys, who san in every direction in search for Sita; how they entered the cave and found Sampáti ; how Hanumán, when he had heard all the circumstances, jumped over the mighty ocean; how he made his way into Lauka and bade Sita be of good cheer; how he laid waste the garden, and lectured Ravan and set are to the city and leaped over the sea again. How the monkeys all rejoined Rama and told him of Sita's welfare; how Raghubir with his army went and encamped on the sea-shore; how Vibbishan came to meet him, and how the sea was put in check ;

Dold 68.

How the bridge was built and the monkey host crossed over to the opposite side, and how the valiant son of Ball went as an enwoy. He described the various battles between the demons and the monkeys, the might and valour of Kumbha-karn and Meghnad and their destruction :

Chaupsi.

The different deaths of all the demons, the fight between Rama and Ravan the death of Ravan, the mourning of Mandodari, the enthronement of Vibbishan and the satisfaction of the gods; the meeting also of Rams and Sita and how the gods with clasped hands hymned their praises; how the all-merciful Lord with the monkeys mounted the car Pushpaka and set out for Avadh; and how Rama arrived at his own city; all these glorious doings were song by the crow. Then he told of Itama's coronation and described the city and all its kingly polity. The entire history did Bhusundi tell, as I have told it to you, Bhavani. When the king of the birds had heard it all, his soul was in raptures and he cried ;

Sorathd 5.

"My doubts are gone, now that I have heard liams's full history. By your favour, O best of crows, I feel a devotion to Rama's feet. A mighty bewilderment possessed me when I saw the Lord bound in the battle : if Rama be the sum of all knowledge and bliss, what can embarraes him? Chaurái.

Seeing all his ways so entirely consistent with humanity, a very grievous doubts arose in my soul. But now I under-get when promoted to cloudship it pute the fire out. Dust while it lies on the soul is held in contempt and sabmits to be tradien under fast of every one. If the wird earlier It afoft, it firet ferkene that and then gots into king's eres or eiflies hie crown Haurken, Garur, and thus underet end my preshle, censible people have no dealings with the mean. The wisest of the poets have declared this maxim it is girel neither to grarrel with a churl nor to be felends with him . never hive anything to do with him at all, Sire , let him c'one, like a dog Churl as I was, with a heart fuli of falceh and and perversity, I paid no heed to the flarm's frier fly a Imonition

D#4 10:

One day I was in a tempte of Sira saying his rosary when the fines came in, and in my conseit I did not rise to stlute him He was too gentle to ear anything, neither did he feel the elightest atom of resentment, but the grievous sin of slighting a spiritual teacher was more than Sira could tolerate.

Chaurdi.

A heavenly voice proceeded from the shrine: "You m secable, conceited churt, though your Gurn shows no resentment, being so tender-hearted and of such sublime int-lligence, yet I must pronounce a curse upon you, you wretch : I cannot endure such a breach of morality. If I were not to punish you for your wickedness, my scriptural ordinance would be violated. Villains who bear malice against their Gurn are cast for a million ages into the most awful abyes of hell ; then they take birth in the brute creation and suffer affliction in a myriad successive existences. As for you, you guilty wretch, whose soul reeks with impurity, since you kept your seat, as it were some unwieldy boa constrictor, ! you shall become a snake; enter into the hollow of some hoge forest tree and there

The aja-gar, here translated 'box constrictor,' is supposed to be too unwieldy to more, and devours only such animals as of themselves fall into its mouth. Hence the popular complet of Malut Dis ;-

ajagar kare na chákri, pachchhi kare na kám.

Die Na'tha yon kahe, sab ká dátá Ram.

² to the meter called Disputes spreaged, which mesons hersely space of like motion, each had consutes of four Bacches, or, to use the language of Hindi prosody, four yagazas the Nets of the source heart of the heart of more stops transferred in the heart of the heart of the stop of the s

Po 4 125

Through your group, it like to the governor, I have now attained my fester, a firm to thing. It was has recalled and all may troubles see at an anis."

Pha spdi.

This glorious dialogue halwest Simbhy and Unite frontfal in blessings and facts inthe of earners its breakt habitation of extreme, relitive semplicium; delights the believer and its described mean there is nothing to the world equally described as a worshipper of Rians. By Hagh spatis favour I have song to the best of my abling this boly and gracious deads. In this the list age of the world there is no other means of substition, neither abstraction, socialize, prayer, panance, the paying of cross, nor ting, according, prayer, panance, the paying of cross, nor religious ceremonical. Think only of Riams, sing only of Haims, give ser only to Riams's infinite perfections. Let the soon give over the perversity and worship him whose special characteristic is to mantify the fallen, as is declared by saints and seers, by Veda and Parfans; is there any one who has worshipped Riams and not found salvation?

Chhand 12.

Hearken, O dell of soul; is there any creature who has worshipped Ráma, the purifier of the fallen, and not found sulvation? The wretches whom he has redeemed are countiess, such as the harlots Pingalá and Ajámil, the houtman Válmiki, the volture Jafáyn and the dephant! As Abhir, a foreigner, a Kirá, a iKasis, are an ocienst, embodiments of pollution as they are purified if they but compatible name; O Ráms, I adore thee. Any one who reads, or hears, or recites this history of the glorious son

¹ Fee page 23, Note 1.

d Right washes out the stains of the world and the stains distors soul and without any trouble goes straight to Right sphere in heaven. Any one who, appreciating the leastly, learns by heart five or six stanzas is delivered by the first of the stains and the disturbances created by the first over whose consolis the mouster Ignorance Prices. Riam, alone is sall-beautiful, all-wise, foll of Expansion and of loving-kindness for the destitute, distincted in his become of the bestower of final different whom else can I desire? There is no other healths Riam, by whose favour, however, slight, even I, its dell-writted Tulti Disk, have found perfect peace.

Dold 127.

Dota 121.

Dota 121.

Date is no one so poor as I am and no one so gracious the poor as you. O Righu-bir: remember this, O glory of the race of Righu, and rid me of the grievous burden of richeoce. As a lover loves bis mistress and as a miser has his money, so for ever and ever may Ráma be beloved by me.

[Thus endeth the Book entitled THE SEQUEL, a prorocater (secasifus faith in Hari, being the seventh descent into its left lake of Rama's deeds, that cleanes from every different of the world!

I is the antitions between the five stantage and the five members of treath, who are not specifically designated, the latter would seem to stand by the stone.

[THE END]

umbroos and it has no grasp on the cont. Though address collect tectures, without faith he is no nine. Faith is all powerful and a mine of every if at men cannot attain to it except by the followshints. The saines are not won except by medic their fellowship is the ent of ministers are inw there is no other meritarious deed in the who with the control plantum or at this one, to working listhmen in thought, well. Sees and gots are all in his favour who will and devices himself to the Brahmans.

D ik4 46.

One other mysterious dogma I with clasped haves upon you all; without prayer to Siva notain to the faith that I require.

Chaurdi.

Tell me what are the difficulties in the way of neither abstract meditation is recessary, nor as prayer, penance nor fasting; only simplicity of char a mind wold of frowardness and absolute content who may befall. If one who is called a worshipper of trust in man, tell me where is his trust in me? Bu protract my discourse to such a length? these as precitees, brother, by which I sm won: avoidance of et and rancour, of hope and fear; a constant atmospherefect repose; passionless homeless; without pride without sin; placid, provident and wise; aver devot the fellowship of the saints; lightly esteeming every of of sense and even heaven and final deliverance from body; persistent in faith, innocent of wickedness, a strato immicrous expediciem.

Pohd 47.

Devoted to my name, which is the aum of all my fections; devoid of selfishness, conceit and vain inaginationed a man's happiness, be assured, is the very surtranscendental felicity."

Chaurdi.

On hearing the gracious Ráma's ambresial speech, if all embraced his feel: "Fountian of meror, you are father, our mother, or spiritual guide and our breather and are dearer than our life. You, O Râma, have bless "is hody, substance and house, and have removed all i serrows of your suppliants. No one but you could teach us this lesson; for even father and mother are self-interested. The only two disinterested friends in the world are you yourself and your servants, O conqueror of the demons. Every Iriend in the world has his own object in view : no one, Sire, ever dreams of the highest object." When Raghunath heard them all speak in such terms of devotion he was rejoiced at heart; and they on receiving his per-mission returned to their several homes, making the Lord the glorious theme of all their talk.

O Uma, every man and woman among the inhabitants of Avadh was the picture of setisfaction; the supreme felicity of heaven suffused the whole city when Rama was

Chaurdi.

One day saint Vesishtha came to visit the blessed and glorious Rama. The prince of the house of Raghu received him with the most profound respect and washed his feet and drank of the water. " Hearken, Rama," cried the sage, clasping his hands, " Ocean of mercy, I have a request to make. After seeing your deeds, a boundless bewilderment possesses my soul. Your immeasurable greatness is beyond the comprehension of the Vedas, how then can I tell it? The business of a family-priest is very contemptible ; the Vedas and Poranas and all the Scripture make smill account of it. At first I refused it, but the Creator said to me, 'You will be a gainer heresster, my son. Brahmá, the Saprems Spirit, will be born in human form as a king, the glory of the race of Raghu." Doha 49.

Then I thought to myself, I shall thus attain to him who is the object of all contemplation, penance, charity and sacrifice ; what better course can I pursue ?

Chaupdi.

Prayer, penance, pious observances, and doing one's daly in life are different good actions based on the Scriptores. But knowledge, mercy, self-control, bathing at holy places and all the religious practices inculcated by revelalion, as also the study of the Vedas and sacred traditions and numerous Paranes are only means to a glorious end, chet and his charming face, that would ravich the soul of Kámadera himself. With streaming eyes and trembing limbs he at last mude bold to speak in accents mild. Why lord, I am Ráran's brother; Champion of heaven, I have been horn of demon race, with a swaye temperament, as unitally prone to evil as an owl is partial to the night.

Dold 45

I have heard with my ears of your glory and have come; O my lord, save me, save me; you who are the deliverer from all life's troubles, the remover of distress, the friend of the auppliant, Ragbubir.

Chaupsi.

So saying he prestrated himself; but at the sight the Lord area in hatte with much delight, being pleased to hear his hamble address, and took him in his mighty arms and clasped him to his breast; then with his brother seated him by his side, and to calm his votary's fears spake thus: "Tell me, prince of Loaks, is it all well with you and your "mill? Your home is in an ill place. How, my friend, can one practise the duties of religion, when encompassed and and hight by wicked one? I know all your circumstances, your proficiency in virtne, your aversion to evil. God keep us from evil communications: 'twere better, my con, to live in hell.' "Now that I have seen your feed. O Ráma, it is all well with me, since you have recognized me as one of your worshippers and have shown mercy upon me.

Doha 46.

No creature can be happy, or even dream of rest to his soul, till be worship Rams, after forswearing lust, that foundain of remores.

Chaupái.

"So long as the heart is peopled by that willainous crew, avarice sensuality. selfatheses, arrogence and pride, there is no room there for Raghmath, with his how and arrows and quiver by his side. The intensely dark night of elibrianess, so agreeable to the owl-like passions of fore and hate, abides in the soul only until the rising of the sun-like lord. Now I am welf, and all my fears are over, in that I save beheld your lotus feet. None of the threefold tormeuter life has any effect upon him, to whom you in your user blow favour. I am a demon, utterly rile of nature, who have never observed any pions practices, and yet the lord, to whose vision even the saints have not attained, for all their profound meditation has been pleased to take me to his heart.

Daha 47.

"Surely I am blessed beyond measure, and Rama's grace is most beneficent, in that I behold with my eyes those lotus feet, which aren Brahma and Siva adore."

Chaupdi.

"Berken, friend; I will declare to you my characteristics, at howen by Bhamadi. Sambha and Umai. If a man who has been the carse of the whole world comes trembling such dots to me for pratection, if he shipters all his pride and wnoulity without guile or subterfage; I make him at cose like one of the saints. Father and mather; kissfolt, children and withe Ille and property showe, friends and establishment; in hord, every object of natural affection is guitered up at the strands of a rope wherewith to attach his will be my feet. He regards all things as alike, without any preference, and with a sool unmoved either by jor, screw, or fear. A saint like this is as fixed in my sool as mosey is in the heart of a mitter. Good men like you are any fitneds, and it is only for their benefit that I have become incarnate.

Dold 48.

"Virtuous and devoted believers, who are steadfast in proglines, strict to pious observances, and who love and trette Brahmans, are the men whom I regard as my own and.

Chaupsi.

"Ruyken, Prince of Lank's all these good quelifies to your, and you are therefore very dear to me." On hearing Radwar greech, all the sevembled monkeys excluded, 'Glory to the 'Industrial But Yibhirbon, on the contrast was the contrast of the contrast with the con

